Marmora — Harvest Thanksgiving services were held at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday, commencing with a celebration of Holy Communion at 8 am., at which the rector, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell, was the celebrant. At the morning service at which the rector officiated, the preacher was Canon W. G. Swayne of Bonarlaw. Taking as his text, "Praise the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." Psalm 103: 2. Canon Swayne enlarged upon the petition of the General Thanksgiving, "We bless Thee for our creation, preservation and all the blessings of this life; but above all for Thine inestimable love in the redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ, for the means of grace and for the hope of glory."

During the offertory, Mrs. P. Gray sang "Sing to the Lord of Harvest." Canon Swayne also gave a short address at the session of the Sunday school, preceding the morning service. At Evensong the rector discoursed on "Give us this day our daily bread." Mesdames P. Gray and C. Nichol and W. J. Cottrell rendered "To Thee, O Lord, our hearts we raise." The sacred edifice was beautifully decorated with Autumn blooms and leaves and an abundance of vegetables and fruits.

The friends and relatives in this vicinity were sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mr. Mel McComb, who is a patient in Campbellford hospital.

Indian Sniper Would Go to War Again if Army Would Take Him

"I'll go tomorrow if they will take me," and dark eyes gleamed with the fire of determination, the same as they did twenty-five years ago, as ex-Sergeant Major Thomas Hill, ex-chief of the Mohawk Indians of the Tyendinaga Reserve, again voiced his willingness to serve his King and country.

Sixty-four years old next January, the sergeant-major whose black hair is showing streaks of grey, has been turned down for voluntary service but has been registered for guard duty "if and when needed."

Crack sniper of the twenty-first Canadian battalion during the last war, the sturdy Indian whose physique and appearance belies his three-score years, has served with distinction in the Canadian militia and war-time army for the past three decades. His most prized possession is a handsome sword presented to him in 1904 by the then commanding officer of the old 49th Hastings Rifles. On its gleaming blade is etched the inscription, "Presented to Sergeant-Major Thomas Hill, chief of His Majesty's most loyal subjects, the Mohawk Indians of the Tyendinaga Reserve, for meritorious service with His Majesty's Canadian Militia."

Enlisting with the 39th Battalion in Belleville in 1915, he was transferred to the 59th Battalion at Kingston, later going overseas where he joined the famous twenty-first Canadians.

Going over the top at Fresmoi, France with his platoon, he "stopped" German bomb fragments that inflicted severe flesh wounds on his right arm and shoulder. He was sent to hospital in England where he recovered shortly afterwards.

Asked to comment on his work as a sniper, the ex-chief modestly declined to talk. "Did you 'get' many Germans?" he was asked. His dark eyes gleamed, "Well," he smiled, "I can't say that I did. Some I shot at, fell to the left, others to the right, and some fell down, but I wouldn't go so far as to say that I actually 'got' them." A suspicious swelling on the right side of his face, might have meant that the chief was holding his tongue in his cheek.

Mr. Hill resides with his wife in a modest, well-kept dwelling on the Tyendinaga Reserve a mile or so south of Shannonville.

SPECIAL SPEAKER ON RALLY DAY

Mr. Ed Rupert was the special rally day speaker yesterday for the Wallbridge United Church. Mr. Rupert spoke on the tremendous difference in "Touching Jesus and in thronging him." He urged the Sunday School and congregation to reach out and touch Jesus, as the woman did when she touched the hem of his garment and was made completely whole. Mark 5.

During the service Mr. Rupert played several selections on his electric vibraharp and sang one of his own compositions, "The Highway to Heaven."

WAR'S SURPRISES

War means surprises. Even events almost expected are equivalent to surprises when they occur. Such was the Russian Soviet coup of the past three days which, though foreseen as a possibility, was not fully realized until it fell. There have been communiques issued on this latest movement of the war, but there is still nothing very definite as to the real importance of this event. On the face of it, it appeared a striking blow, but it did not shake the determination of the Allied nations to fight the war to end Hitlerism to a finish. In spite of the shock of the arrival of a second invading army in Poland, the Polish people still stood firm, though their government had left the country.

The sinking of the British aircraft carrier H.M.S. Courageous marked the first British naval vessel to be sunk. The loss is keenly felt, but it is believed the U-boat which fired the fatal torpedo was sunk by British destroyers.

On the western front before the Siegfried Line, named after a hero of Germanic mythology, a big struggle looms. The type of warfare on this front differs from that used at the front in the days of 1914-18. French artillery today has been doing amazing work in breaking up the barriers the Germans have set to enemy attacks. The psychological element enters in the struggle of the past two weeks where the Western Powers have been able to show a small measure of their strength, though British troops arrived but a few days ago in large numbers. It is on this front the war will be fought and that Nazism and Hitlerism must fall and the democracies be saved. French entry upon German soil will force Adolf Hitler to action on an unprecedented scale, it is expected, for to have their soil in the possession of the enemy is not pleasant to the German people, who perhaps yet have but a scanty knowledge of the situation.

PRAISE FOR CHAMBERLAIN

The New York Times in a recent editorial pays tribute to the leadership which the British and French governments have had during those harrowing weeks and months before the final choice was made to go to war. It goes on to say that no democratic statesman in our times has been made the subject of more widespread criticism, target for more cruel humour. He has been chided for hesitation, found guilty of lack of courage. But his hesitation is seen now to have been the deeply deserving patience of the man who measured accurately the full terrible cost of a great war, and his courage has been equal to the test of the occasion.

Summoned by fate to make a choice which was deeply unwelcome to him, precisely at the moment when he was being robbed by duplicity of an alliance on which he had counted heavily if matters came to the worst, he has risen magnificently to the responsibility of a great decision.

Certainly, the English people, and the French people with the French, cannot fail to have derived strength and inspiration from the quality of the leadership they have had.

They have had the satisfaction of knowing that their case is clear before the world, and that wherever men have read the record of those fateful weeks it is known that they fight only in self-defence and for the sake of principle. They have had valuable time in which to accustom themselves to the thoughts of war, a long war, fought on a great scale, might be inevitable, and to make whatever adjustments are necessary to the acceptance of this grim circumstances in a spirit of national unity.

SUGAR

Inspectors of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have been instructed to secure forthwith from retail grocery stores all information with regard to the sales of sugar in quantities of one hundred pounds or more. The name and address of the purchaser, the quality and type of sugar, the date of sale and the price paid per pound are the details which are required in each case by the inspectors so that there may be a complete record of transactions.

There has been a "run" on sugar at this time which is the preserving season, but unusual purchases have been made. Unwarranted buying of such a commodity is really unfair to the general public because it will mean that some one else will have to go without, or with less than is needed. It has already meant in many shops severe restrictions on the amounts to be sold and it may lead to governmental restrictions for the sake of the generality of citizens.

If the public attitude were but normal, conditions such as are would not have developed. But there has been heavy buying and in the places where there are restricted sales, there are said to be cases of purchasers making purchase after purchase of the limited amount.

Co-operation of citizens by not making unusual demands for sugar is the best solution of the situation which has arisen.

"THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS A HERO, YOU'RE EITHER A MAN OR A BUM," so said that deep sea salty sailor, Captain Joseph Gainard, of the freighter, City of Flint, which brought safely to port 216 survivors of the torpedoed ship, Athenia, Germany's first act of frightfulness of the war. What Captain Gainard thinks of submarine warfare found expression in words too sulphurous for publication, when interviewed by newspapermen. He insisted that all hero stuff be cut out, asserting that "there's no such thing as a hero, you're either a man or a bum." Captain Gainard gave up his sleeping quarters to survivors and for ten nights did without sleep or rest until he brought his living cargo to port.

NOW IS THE SEASON OF THE COUNTRY FAIRS, the golden Canadian autumn when the frost is on the pumpkin and there is a tang in the air which calls for brisk motion. What more peaceful and pleasant than a beautiful autumn day in the countryside attending a rural fair where one can see examples of the triumphs of the farmer, the farmer's wife and children in every branch of agriculture, production of foodstuffs to feed the nation. Scenes like these emphasize the terrible foolishness of modern warfare which produces nothing but chaos and instead of construction produces destruction.

BRITAIN'S MYSTERY SHIPS AND DEPTH BOMBS in the last war made life so precarious for submarine crews that toward the end of the war German sailors mutinied and refused to embark in the submarines. It was a case of German submarines being sent out on "sink without trace" voyages never to be heard of again, so much so that appeals to join the submarines and see the world fell rather flat on the average German ears, especially where relatives and friends had gone out in Hun subs never to be heard of again.

EDITORS OF WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS ARE TOO MODEST according to the editor of the Cobourg Sentinel Star, who thinks that daily newspapers are not so much, and many of them who imagine that the weekly newspaper editor lives a life of ease, are mistaken, and would find it difficult to fit in as a weekly newspaper editor. He thinks that a good job printer would fit in the weekly editorial chair better. Which might contain an element of truth because considerable of the revenue of the weekly paper comes from its job printing department. Then again, being a printer might tend to draw the editor away from his editorial duties. Some weekly editors we have known keep busy in the job department with fall fair prize lists, voters lists, etc., every week, until just before press time and then have to rush up enough reading matter for the paper to get by. Sometimes a considerable amount of padding with dead matter is necessary to fill the columns, and there is no time for leisurely thoughtful writing of editorial comment, nor the time or type to set it. However, the rural editor only has about fifty papers to make in the year while the daily editor must grind out 300 or more. There is this to be said, however, the weekly editor does not lack for variety. In his spare time he can canvass for advertising and job printing, and it behooves him to learn to estimate so that his prices are sure to return him a profit. Some publishers of weekly newspapers we have known seemed more anxious to secure printing contracts from someone else than bother about the profit angle. Better not take the job at all if there is no profit in it—wear and tear on time and patience and equipment are worthy of a fair profit, and the laborer is worthy of his hire, even a weekly newspaper publisher. Let the other fellow do the worrying over profitless publication.

A Salute to Old Bill Handy

Here's a salute to old Bill Handy, who forsook his chosen path to the ministry and became the father of the meanest, moodiest music in the world.

He made America dance and laugh. He gave the world jazz and jazz fathered swing.

Old Bill Handy, the son of a slave, brushed away many cobwebs from the world and let joy and merriment shine through.

Bill Handy—christened William Christopher Handy—wanted to be a preacher like his father and grandfather, who had carried the Word to their barracoon comrades. And Bill was chosen to follow in their footsteps. He sang spirituals to encourage his fellow-men to take the high road of righteousness. His preaching and singing eventually led him to waterfront saloons and honky-tonks and that is how the blues came to be born.

Born in Alabama

He was born 67 years ago in Florence, Ala., and there wasn't much chance for a Negro in that struggling little southern city in that tragic year of reconstruction. So, when Bill became a young man he headed west, alone with pockets empty, for Memphis, where most Negroes come sooner or later.

Memphis was a new world for Bill Handy. Beale St., noisy and glamorous, fascinated him. The Mississippi river, the old man of many moods, gripped his imagination. It made Bill Handy want to sing. It touched off that bit of genius, made him pound the keys of the piano in a weird, rumbling way.

Handy organized a band. Beale St. shuffled its feet when he played.

Edward Hull Crump, Memphis political leader at the time, was worried for the report was out that he was a wet. And Ed. Crump wanted to do something to offset the report, for he was running for mayor. That was in 1905. So he hired Bill Handy to solve the problem.

It Was His First Song

Bill Handy did. He wrote his first song. It was a blues song, the first the world had.

He meant to put over the idea that Ed. Crump was serious, a dry, but that most Memphians were going to have their liquor and good-timing regardless.

So Bill Handy wrote these lyrics:

"Mr. Crump don't 'low no easy riders here,
Mr. Crump don't 'low no easy riders here,
But we don't care what Mr. Crump don't 'low,
We're going to barrel-house anyhow,
But Mr. Crump don't 'low it
And ain't gonna have it here."

An easy rider is a carouser. A barrel-house is a saloon.

Crump was elected and that's how the "blues" were born.

Handy realized then he could write music.

"St. Louis Blues" followed—"St. Louis woman with all your diamond rings . . ."

Fame Came Slowly

For two years Handy and his band played it, trying to get folks interested. Then a recording of it was made.

The world heard and tapped its feet. It went wild over the song. It is one of the three best known songs in the world.

Bill Handy is growing old now and he is bald. He lives in Harlem, where he publishes songs, religious songs, which he writes. But occasionally he comes back to Memphis, back to Beale St., where they've named a park for him, back to the Mississippi, where he used to stand on the levees and sing to the river and the river sang back to him.

Restoring Lost Hair With Pituitary Extract

Any individual or organization that can produce a method of growing hair on bald heads would make millions of dollars every year. It can be easily understood then that when in 1931 Dr. Bengt Norman Bengston, Maywood, Illinois, in an article in Clinical Medicine and Surgery told of his success in growing hair by the use of extract of pituitary gland (said article being accompanied by the most convincing photographs) he was swamped with enquiries and tremendous offers of money for the rights to market his "product."

However, Dr. Bengston pointed out that while his study had extended over five years, he had used the pituitary extract on but 18 individuals and while the results were gratifying in some and spectacular in two cases, he would prefer to work a while longer and with more cases before he could say definitely that pituitary extract (from sheep) would restore lost hair.

Now, in 1939, Dr. Bengston in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, gives further details of his work with pituitary extract.

"A large clinic was established for me at the Research and Educational hospitals of the University of Illinois. Every known type of hair disturbance was placed at my disposal through the favorable effect of the tremendous publicity in the newspapers that followed my first report."

Together with the results of his own investigations Dr. Bengston has the questions comments and observations of 700 physicians from all over the world, and their results with pituitary treatment in from 1 to 100 cases each. About 2000 cases in all have been observed.

What has been the result of all the investigation?

In a great many cases small light colored hairs appeared and in a number of cases, particularly in those with dark hair, patches of normal hair appeared but in a few weeks, in most of these cases, this "normal" hair disappeared. In other words, for the present, at least, the use of pituitary extract to restore hair has not been successful.

However, the fact that it does grow hair on a few, grows hair on some which later disappears, would show that there is something in the make-up of those who lose their hair early-gland disturbance, acid-alkali balance, or other disturbance—which interferes with the action of their pituitary glands.

HE REALLY WAS

One day when Vice-President Marshall went to his office in the Capitol, just off the State Chamber he found a tourist sitting at his desk, writing. There was nothing in Mr. Marshall's slight figure or impressive bearing to reveal his identity, so the tourist, mistaking him for another visitor, went right on writing.

"Thought I'd just write the folks," the tourist explained, "and tell them I was sitting at the Vice-President's desk."

After about ten minutes he spoke again. "Now," he inquired, "how would you like to sit down at the Vice-President's desk?"

Mr. Marshall sat down and went to work.

"Hm-m!" exclaimed the tourist, "You act as if you were really the Vice-President."

"That's the hard part of it," said Mr. Marshall and went on working. —Christian Science Monitor.

CENSORSHIP MUDDLE

Under a front page heading, "Why the morning papers were late," The London Star recounted in detail a censorship muddle over news of British troops in France that occurred last night.

Here is The Star's story:

"Many London morning newspapers were delivered late or not at all today owing to the action of the censorship.

"Late last night (11.15 p.m. British time) authority was given by the ministry of information to an announcement that British troops were fighting side by side with the French.

"At 11.30 p.m. the ministry withdrew their authority.

"Some newspapers had received the censor's sanction to print the facts at an earlier hour and the story was already in the early editions, being given great prominence on the front page at 1.45 a.m. Tuesday.

"Meanwhile other editions of the newspaper were being prepared without the banned stories.

"Then at 2.25 a.m. came a final announcement from the ministry of information authorizing the release of the news after all."

Today the ministry of information issued a communique saying British troops were in France, but had not yet been in action. It did not explain this contradiction with the earlier story.

Humor is Needed in War

"When famished English bowmen stood in ranks behind the hedge at Poictiers and faced a tenfold foe, I dare warrant some rawboned lad from the dales cracked a joke as the wax-pot was passed from hand to hand down the line. I dare venture to say that, years after Agincourt, when some veteran showed his scars upon the feast of Crispian, he would not remember Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter so much as he remembered Long Will of Worcester, who died with a jest on his lips, or how Matthew of Kirby hummed a tune—for he counted the enemy not a fly—as he kept twanging on his bow-cord.

"It is this supreme indifference to danger, this seeming irresponsibility, this jesting in the presence of imminent death, that passes the understanding of our potential foes. And the spirit of our forefathers is still with us. It was so in the last war. What other nation, waging a war which meant either success or servitude, could conjure up an Old Bill, and a young Bert, and laugh over the difficulties and dangers which surrounded the troops in the trenches?

"The truth is simple. The man who will win the fight is not he who can hit the hardest, but he who can always come up smiling when he has been knocked down. He can never be beaten. His sense of humor saves him.

"Let it be understood that there is a seriousness about a stern struggle; but even the sternest struggle that we ever engaged in could not quench the natural spring of good humor which is our national heritage, and turn it into a dried and barren thing. The spring of humor was never brackish. It was never bitter as gall. It never helped to engender a Hymn of Hate.

"Rather did it gush forth and bring into being the rough rhymes that characterized the Tommy's marching songs—rhymes that were ribald enough, but which helped to shorten the march, or helped to bring into orderly step a body that fatigue and 'far-away-from-home' feeling had threatened to disorganize and dishearten. Any old soldier can tell you how many a party leaving the trenches after some night relief has been held together by some fellow with leather lungs who bellowed out 'Rolling Home' while the rest supplied the chorus.

"So long as we have that spirit of our forefathers, so long shall we remain unconquerable. So long as we can see the funny side of things, the ridiculous side of routine, the pretty side of pompousness, the incongruities that abound in army life, then we are safe. We shall never take things too seriously, and fear the seriousness of things—and by fearing fail. We shall succeed so long as we keep up a sense of humor.

"An army may march upon its stomach; but an army wins thru' its heart, and here, then, is the essential truth of the principle: 'A merry heart goeth all the day'."—H. D. in Yorkshire Post.

General Sir William Ironside

Shakespeare was careful not to deny that there might be something in a name; had he known about General Sir William Edmund Ironside, G.M.G., D.S.O., etc., he doubtless would have added a footnote to that effect.

Rising sheer and perpendicular to a height of six feet four inches, linear measure, with a gross displacement of 252 pounds, the chief of British Imperial Defence forces is a living symptom of British felicity in the matter of military nomenclature. Sir Edmund, indeed, is rather a special triumph; for anybody can name a warship, say, "Redoubtable", but it is something else again to evolve a soldier who is ironside not merely in temper but in name.

For that seems a reasonable description of the new chief, or so runs the British comment.

The son of an army surgeon general, he entered the Royal Artillery as a lad of 19. That was at the high tide of Imperial ambition, and the Boer War was to call the young man into active service within the year.

The legends which, perhaps not accidentally, cluster about him began at once. It is said that he became annoyed with an enemy soldier on one occasion and casually crushed him to death in his arms. He is supposed to have picked up enough colonial Dutch to equip him for an adventure in espionage among the colonial Germans just before the first World War. The British, naturally, were interested in German colonial methods. The Germans were engaged in a punitive expedition against some of the native tribes in their Southwest Africa possessions. Ironside turned up, the perfect embodiment of a Boer eager to serve the German cause.

The Germans listened to his accent, found its exactitude convincing and set the new recruit to a command of native convoys. Ironside worked assiduously by day and spent much of his leisure time as was necessary taking down voluminous notes on the German methods. These he sewed into the lining of his tunic and delivered them intact at the proper time to the vast edification of the British.

It is said, with reason, that the genus military, particularly of the general rank, runs usually to atrophied intelligence. If the British reports on Ironside are to be trusted, this cannot be said of the new chief. He was a captain by the time the first World War broke out, and is supposed to have been the first uniformed British officer to land on the French side when the Contemptibles began to come over. In France he was in charge of the organization of rail transport for the British Expeditionary Force. An expert on expeditionary forces, he has stated that "the most difficult military feat is to gauge the proper size for an expeditionary force: Its numbers are always too small."

Ironside's World War honors run to four solid lines of the clipped abbreviations used in the British Who's Who; he served on actively after the armistice as commander in chief of the Allied forces in North Russia.

At the end of the Archangel campaign, Ironside was made a major general and fought the Turks in Anatolia when Kemal Ataturk was erecting his new republic. He is the man, it insisted, who picked Riza Khan out of obscurity in North Persia and set him on the way that was to lead finally to the throne of the Shah.

Events and Sir Edmund kept pace in the interim between the world wars. He was Governor of Gibraltar during the Spanish civil war; it is unlikely that any of the suggestions in that rehearsal for greater warfare escaped him. He set up barricades along the land side of the rock as he saw the Nationalists eying it always more covetously. He drilled air-raid shelters into it for the protection of the entire population if an attack upon it actually should develop.

General Ironside is a linguist and a master of military prose, as connoisseurs thereof may see by referring to the Britannica or the book "Tannenberg." In his career the four-year tour as commandant of the Staff College at Camberley is not one least important. For there he impressed his military methods and philosophy on the young men under him, and through them, by the familiar process of intellectual osmosis, on the army in general.

He comes to command, then, well known to his subordinates both personally and in creed. His new task, of course, will call for something more than legend and literary craft, but the British seem entitled to a certain comfort in the likelihood that he has what it does take. Certainly, he is aware of what may be Britain's greatest hazard. "The British genius is for improvisation," he has said, "but will there be time for improvisation in the next war?"—C. P. Ives in Baltimore Sun.

Wall Street Ready This Time

According to dispatches from Washington high officials of the administration are satisfied that the financial machinery of the country is prepared at the present time for "any conceivable emergency."

Whether this is literally the case or not can be determined only by events themselves, but certainly there is no question that the mechanism referred to is in infinitely better condition to cope with a world emergency of the proportions now threatened than it was when the Great War broke in 1914. At that time the stock exchange was forced to suspend operations completely for more than four months and was unable to reopen for unrestricted trading for eight months; the pound sterling ran up almost overnight to $7; commercial loans soared to 8 and 10 per cent., and bank "runs" were only narrowly averted in New York city.

The very crises that have occurred during the last year or two have done much to prepare the speculative community psychologically and in other ways for such an emergency. Representatives of the stock exchange, the securities and exchange commission, the treasury and the federal reserve board have had what were, in effect "dress rehearsals" on each of these occasions, so that each knows what is expected of it when the time comes. These crises have not only served to eliminate and to keep the emergency machinery well oiled, but undoubtedly they have also gone far to eliminate from the market many nervous holders who might be expected to become panicky and throw their securities overboard when and if the firing began.

A sturdy government bond market is extremely important in times of panic or threatened panic, and that condition seems to be assured —to the extent that such things can be assured in advance—by a general agreement on the part of the banks, supported by the fact that the federal reserve will lend at par on such securities, regardless of current market price. The existence of the stabilization fund should provide abundant protection for the dollar in the unlikely event that such support should be needed, while under the present set-up of the banking system both currency and credit could be made available, almost literally, in unlimited quantities. It would require an extraordinary situation today to create what by normal standards could be described as "tight" money, often an important cause of security liquidation.

The best fire apparatus in the world is not positive insurance against panic in case of a conflagration. And it is only fair to say that the same thing is inevitably true with respect to a country's financial apparatus in the face of the threat of war of world-wide dimensions. With this reservation, however, one may agree with those Washington officials who see the country prepared for any financial emergency.—New York Herald-Tribune.

ALDERMAN SMITH, TORONTO COUNCIL WILL NOT RESIGN

Fellow - Councillors unanimous He Should Surrender Position Due to Alleged Subversive Statements

DENIES STATEMENT

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Alderman Stewart Smith remained adamant today in his refusal to resign from the Toronto City Council, despite the unanimous request of his fellow-councillors that he surrender his position because of allegedly subversive statements.

Smith, only successful communist candidate in this year's municipal elections, declared that harges against him were "absolutely untrue."

In a one-hour address yesterday, he argued to the Council that he had a right to publish a pamphlet entitled "Who is double-crassing peace?" in criticism of Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain.

But almost every alderman stood up afterward to criticize Smith. The Council realizing he could not be forced to resign, asked that he submit his resignation.

"I have criticized the Chamberlain Government for years," Smith declared in a council chamber guarded heavily by police.

Claims Language Not Anti-British

He said his language in the speech and pamphlet was "the same kind of language that has been employed by a great number of the outstanding speakers and thinkers of Great Britain."

"It's not anti-British to criticize the policy of a Government with which you do not agree," he delared. "But it is anti-British to try to suppress such criticism."

The alderman said that at the time of the Munich Conference last autumn he published a pamphlet declaring a policy of appeasement would land Britain into war.

"The mayor made a statement to the press to the effect that I was very pleased now that war had broken out and he intimated that I had been hoping this war would come," Smith asserted. "That is, of course, not true."

"I still believe it," Mayor Ralph Day said.

Disagrees With Statement

Alderman David Balfour, who presented the motion asking for Smith's resgnation interrupted Smith's speech a moment later when the Communist Alderman defended his criticism of the Chamberlain Government.

"Are we to sit here and have to listen to another attack against our Prime Minister?" Balfour asked.

Smith said he had fought Hitlerism in Toronto for years and could produce evidence of his work against Nazi espionage.

"And now Russia and Germany are partners," said Alderman Nathan Phillips.

"They are nothing of the kind," Smith retorted.

Not In Sympathy

Controller J. D. McNish asked Smith if he were in sympathy with the Canadian Government in its war aims.

"I do not believe that the Canadian Government will carry out the aims that the Canadian people want to have carried out in this war," Smith said.

"Are you loyal to the Canadian Government at the present time?" decanded Mayor Day.

"I am loyal to Canada but I do not agree with the Canadian Government," Smith submitted.

Holding up a printed copy of Smith's speech, Alderman Balfour declared in the face of the other's protests that "anyone who calls on the Canadian people to go against the British Government at this time, as Smith as has done, is a traitor to his country."

Alderman Balfour declared that he could not be aused of being Fasist-minded an said he and his four sons had volunteered their services to fight overseas.

To Stop Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation's got you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey . . . it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation . . . you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that after the digestive process leaves a soft "bulky" mass which helps a bowel movement.

If constipation is due to lack of "bulk" in your diet, eat Kellogg's All-Bran, a tasteful ready-to-eat cereal, for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran supplies the "bulk" you need, plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin $B_1$. Made by Kellogg in London, Canada. Sold by every grocer.

Capt. Meeus Tells of Life While in the Belgian Congo

Up the slope of an unnamed mountain in the Belgian Congo a geodetic survey party toiled, sextants and sighting rods in hand, rifles strapped to backs. Thirty-seven officers and non-commissioned officers of the Belgian Army had been commissioned to triangulate and plot the new Province of Katanga, deep in the deepest heart of the dense jungle.

It was country that had never been explored before. The first white men were to trod its leafy carpet. Miles away the snow-capped peak of famous Mount Kilma 'njaro loomed, wind-rifted clouds feathering its lofty tip. Between lay the green vastness, stronghold of the gorilla, hunting ground of the warlike, hostile Baluba whose guttural dialect proclaimed them members of the African Bantus, nomads of the African veldt and bush country. The rifles the explorers carried were as necessary as the canteens of water and food packed over the valleys.

Captain Timothy Rene Meeus lately of His Majesty's Belgian Grenadier Guards of Brussels, present holder of the Belgian Croix de Guerre, Belgian Medaille Militaire and now an adopted son of Belleville included membership in this intrepid band of surveyors assigned to explore and map this new uncharted country.

Later to become Belgian Congo free trader, professional elephant hunter, prospector and man of parts Captain Meeus whose informative articles on the present war scene in Europe under "Letters to the Editor" lately in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer has turned from the excitement and thrill of army and jungle to settle into the complacent, ordinary living of local life.

His tall spare frame yet reveals traces of tubercular infection contracted in a German prison camp at Gottingen. Blue eyes whose corners have been wrinkled by years of squinting under a tropical sun at the equator now depend upon thick lensed spectacles with which to read. Only a soldierly erect bearing reminds of nearly a life time spent in the services of military and state.

Of his exploits in Africa and the former Congo Free State, the present Captain Meeus disdains to elaborate. Of his experiences with and against the German army of the Kaiser he speaks lengthily, bitterly vindictively. "I hate the Germans, bitterly, deeply," he declares, revealing scars of mind and body left him through contact with his avowed foe.

Born at Mons

Timothy R. Meeus was born in Mons, Belgium, the son of a Belgian Colonel father and Scotch mother. He attended public school in Brussels and later high school at Malonnes, perhaps the largest and most completely equipped high school in the world. He later attended and was graduated from Louvain University, majoring in consular and commercial law, and chemistry, the latter study being an especial hobby which in later years was to serve in good stead.

In 1906 the Army called, and a new recruit was signed with the Brussels Grenadiers. Three years of this service fitted the now experienced soldier for the rigors of the Congo Free State and service abroad in His Majesty's expedition of exploration. Promoted to Corporal, he later became Captain in charge of this special work.

Of the years spent in the tropics Captain Meeus says little. "There were 'experiences' in the Congo, sure, but we were just working-men, doing a job." He disposes of further interest in the matter with a military shrug.

"Gorillas? But yes. There were gorillas there. And baboons, strong enough in the hand to leave imprints in the walnut stock of a rifle.... The baboons were worse. The gorillas gentlemen. They do not attack. They merely defend themselves and seek to live quietly."

"And elephants? Yes, elephants that were to be hunted, and for which in those days much money was to be made in the sale of ivory. Hundreds of pounds a single tusk. Some day I, too, will write a book."

It was at Stanleyville in the Congo that the present resident was to hear the first statement of war, the invasion of his beloved Belgium, that was to set the world on fire. And hardly had the news been received than general mobilization was commenced in the Congo. Half a million troops, the majority of them black skinned natives recruited through the use of money and glittering inducements, under the command of Belgian officers took up stations on the German African front where the same war was to be fought as on the western front.

Selected as Sniper

Following mobilization and brief fighting here, Captain Meeus sailed for the homeland, rejoining his former unit, the Grenadiers, on arrival. A crack shot, he was selected as sniper with roving commission along the Flanders front. Taken prisoner of war by a deploying squad of German riflemen early in 1915, he was transported to the barbed-wire-guarded camp at Gottingen on the Rhine where thousands of other Belgians 'the Germans' worst hated enemies were held.'

Rigors and hunger and other privations aided and abetted a tubercular condition, probably induced by the change of climate from summer on the Equator to wintry Europe. Becoming progressively worse, the prisoner was allowed the privilege of going to Switzerland where at a sanatorium he slowly regained his health. Later through an exchange of war prisoners with Germany, he was returned to France in 1917 to a hospital in the Mediterranean, but the call of the Congo was strong, and at the termination of the war he again sailed for the country beneath the Equator.

Tires of Tropics

Later he was to become racked by the ravages of blackwater fever, dengue and malaria, weakened by dysentery and wearied of the trading in beads and calico, tired of the sight of black skins and again exhausted by a tubercular progress. The Congo had exacted its toll "as it does all the white men who are silly enough to stay there too long," he comments, and Captain Meeus sailed again for the homeland.

"You have one chance," doctors of Belgium told him after head shaking examinations. "You must go to a cold climate. Switzerland, maybe. Denmark, perhaps.... even Canada."

"Speaking the English language as I do, it was Canada. I had never seen it. But I had heard a lot about this country. I had marvelled, too, at the fighting qualities and the physique of the Canadians. I have not been disappointed."

Master of seven or eight languages, equipped with a fair office education, willing to work at "almost anything," Captain Meeus has turned to his earlier hobby of chemistry for support. The going lately has been thin, and the sales of his specially home made cleansing products have been slow. But the newly adopted son of Canada and Belleville—he became naturalized several years ago—is here to stay. The air has completed the healing of tubercular lungs. "I never felt as fit before, as I do now," he declares.

His home is a beached boat on the shore of a cove at the west side of the city. It is here he sits and surveys the continental scene, drawing from his wide knowledge of foreign affairs to write the informative articles which have recently appeared, waiting for the day until he can return to Belgium in the war against Germany as a member of the Canadian Active Service Force in which he has offered to enlist.

GENERAL A. ROSS URGES RESTRAINT OF CRITICISM

Anything Which Disturbs National Unity is Playing Into Hands of Enemy, Officer States

LEGION TO HELP

Ottawa, Sept. 19 (AP)—Anything which disturbs national unity and lessens public confidence is playing into the hands of the enemy, Brig.-Gen. Alex Ross of Yorkton, Sask., has warned the National Executive Council of the Canadian Legion in special session here.

General Ross urged restraint of criticism when he addressed fellow veterans at the opening meeting yesterday The Legion's Council continued their discussions today.

"Canada today is full of armchair Prime Ministers, Foreign Secretaries, Field Marshals and Admirals who think they know all about running this war," the General said. There had been, despite the short space of time since the war began, several expressions of criticism of Prime Minister Chamberlain and the British Staff for lack of initiative.

"These people are doing a great deal of harm by affecting the morale and esprit-de-corps of their fellow-Canadians, and it is time attention was called to this menace," General Ross said.

Full Discussion

The Legion officers are discussing how they best can help Canada in the national effort to aid Britain and her allies in the war against Nazi aggression. It was suggested that Legion members refrain from public criticism detrimental to the military authority, but that any complaints be investigated by committees set up by the Provincial and Dominion commands, which could then make any representations deemed proper to the Dominion authorities.

Opening the two-day meeting, Lord Tweedsmuir addressed the delegates, declaring his conviction that Canada would meet whatever was required of the Dominion in this war effort of the empire as brilliantly as Canadians met similar circumstances in the first Great War.

It was announced that Major Milton F. Gregg, V.C., and George Herwig, both of Ottawa, had been appointed to represent the Legion on the Government's Voluntary Service Registration Bureau under chairmanship of Dr. E. M. Coleman, Undersecretary of State.

CABINET MEETS IN LONG SESSION

David C. Dick of Cobourg Appointed Wool Administrator for the Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 19 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has called his cabinet colleagues into meeting around the council table again today to continue yesterday's prolonged session.

The government met yesterday afternoon, adjourned for dinner, then sat again until about 11.30 p.m., but there was no announcement made as to what the Ministers discussed.

There are rumors that the cabinet has prepared another important war measure to be announced shortly, and it was assumed the Prime Minister and his colleagues had discussed the latest developments abroad, including the Russian invasion of Poland.

Appointment of David C. Dick, Cobourg, Ont., as Wool Administrator was announced last night by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, which is headed by Hector B. McKinnon, Commissioner of Tariffs. Mr. Dick, under direction of the Board, will supervise maintenance of adequate supplies of wool for the Canadian trade. He also will have charge of purchase, shipment, delivery and allocation of such supplies and investigation of applications for licences to export wool on its products.

Another True Instance of relief from Long-Suffering came to light here a few days ago in a statement about MOSBY'S TONIC received from Mr. Fred Marion, of 3411 Sandwich St., W., Windsor, Ont. MR. FRED MARION

Rheumatic Pains in Arms, Hands and Limbs.

"If anybody in this world ever had what you call REAL rheumatic pain, then I know I am that very person," stated Mr. Marion. "I was down in bed with it for long periods. These rheumatic pains were simply ALL OVER ME. I could not even raise my arms above my shoulder. The joints of my fingers were swollen and both of my knees were stiff and full of pain. Besides all of this, my stomach was badly upset and my bowels were constipated.

"I tried first one thing and then another, until I was discouraged. But finally I found Mosby's Tonic and I want to say that this medicine began to help me almost at once. Before I had finished my second bottle the rheumatic pains began to leave my body. You don't know what relief that was! And when I had taken my fourth bottle I could walk without any pain, and now I can raise my arms above my head. The suffering has gone from my shoulders, and the swelling has left the joints of my fingers and knees. And another thing, Mosby's Tonic has regulated my bowels and has relieved me in so many ways that I want to publicly endorse this medicine in the hope that others who suffer as I did will get it and take it."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC acts on bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys. It contains 15 Roots and Herbs, scientifically blended with 5 Other Proven Ingredients. It clears gas and pain from the stomach, cleanses the bowels and invigorates liver and kidney action. That is why so many people are benefited in a general way by this New Formula. # BUTCH KEELING COMES TO RESCUE

Purse-Snatchers in Car Attempt to Run Hockey Player Down When He Tries to Assist Woman

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Mrs. Lewis Lowe, 59, of Winnipeg, received a gashed leg and severe shock when she fought off a would-be purse snatcher who drove up beside her in an automobile today. Melville (Butch) Keeling, professional hockey player, who went to the woman's rescue when he heard her scream escaped injury when the driver of the car attempted to run him down as he and his purse-snatching companion sped away.

Mrs. Lowe is visiting her daughter, Mrs. C. F Hobbs, and was walking along the street near the latter's home with what is said to have been a considerable sum of money in her purse when the attack occurred.

When the car pulled up to the curb, a man reached out and made a grab for the purse Mrs. Lowe hung on and screamed. Keeling, watering his lawn nearby, heard the disturbance and ran to the scene. By this time the man got on the running board of the car and yanked the woman off her feet. She was dragged along with the car, still hanging on to her purse and Keeling made a dive at the man on the running board.

The driver steered right at Keeling as the other man dropped Mrs. Lowe to the pavement where she still clung to her purse. Only a quick hop to the curb saved Keeling from possible serious injury. Keeling, who saw many years of service with New York Rangers, played with Springfield in the International-American League last season.

EMERGENCY BILLS IN LEGISLATURE TO NUMBER 15

Airmen and Sailors Will be Able to Make Wills Without Legal Formalties

CHANGE DUTY ACT

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Ontario airmen and sailors would be given the right, like soldiers on active service, to make wills involving their personal property without going through legal formalities under a wartime measure prepared for introduction at the special session of the Provincial Government which opens today.

The measure is one of 15 emergency bills by which the Government intends to place Ontario on a war footing.

During the first Great War a number of unusual wills of soldiers were probated—one written on an egg shell, another on the uprights of a step-ladder. The present bill extends this privilege to seamen and aviators who might want to make a will under circumstances where the usual witnesses and legal forms were unavailable.

Other legislation proposed gives the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission supreme control over private as well as public Hydro-Electric plants of the province; provides for protection of public works, and sets up a committee to gear Ontario's agricultural and industrial resources to a wartime economy.

This legislation has already been agreed to by the Conservative opposition and is assured speedy passage. Only contentious matter for the session which opens at 3 p.m. is the redrafted Succession Duty Act which is tightened to meet some legal objections raised against it in court.

The emergency session was called originally to deal with this bill which Attorney-General Gordon Conant has announced will not change the present statute in principle. A major change is the provision by which any person on whom Succession Duties are claimed may have the question adjudicated in court.

Newlyweds Are Honored at Tweed

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Morris Are Recipients of Gift

Tweed—On Friday night following choir practice the choir and Sunday School executive met in the Sunday Shool rooms of the United Church for the purpose of honoring two of their members, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Morris who were but recently married.

Mr. Morris who has resided in Tweed for the past year is the teacher of music in a number of the rural schools of Centre Hastings. He is a member of the choir of the United Church and a teacher in the Sunday School. Mrs. Morris, who has but recently come to Tweed to live is also a member of the choir.

The meeting was presided over by Rev. H. L. Morrison. After several interesting contests and singing games, directed by Miss Bessie Gordon, an address was read by Mr. S. H. Connor, leader of the choir. Mr. W. S. Gordon, superintendent of the Sunday School made the presentation of a beautiful reading lamp.

The following is the address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Morris:

The members of the choir and of the Sunday School executive of Tweed United Church have met tonight to offer to you their best wishes for a happy married life on which you have but recently set out.

For the past year, Mr. Morris, you have actively identified yourself with our church as a valued member of the choir and as an efficient teacher on the staff of the Sunday School. Your regular attendance and willingness to accept responsibility and assist in any work of these departments of the church have made you a most useful member.

We welcome you, Mrs. Morris, to our community and church. Already you have begun to interest yourself in a real way in the work of the choir and we feel sure that both yourself and the church will be mutually benefited by this association.

One might venture to express the hope that the radiance from this lamp, which we ask you to accept with our best wishes, may find in your lives its counterpart in the glow of satisfaction which comes as a reward of work well done.

Signed on behalf of the choir and Sunday School executive, Ethel Tummon, S. H. Connor, W. S. Gordon.

Although taken quite by surprise Mr. Morris on behalf of his wife and himself expressed their appreciation of the kindness of the choir and S. S. executive. Lunch was served by some of the ladies.

A number of members of the local Boy Scout Troop under Scout Master Rev. A. E. Pepper, enjoyed an outing on Saturday. They walked around Stoco Lake, a distance of some seven or eight miles, eating their dinner on the shore on the east side of the lake.

Authorities Urge Silence On British Army Movements

Public Warned Against Disclosing Government Secrets — Hotel Registers Checked Twice Daily

POLICE HUNT SPIES

London, Sept. 19—(CP)—Britain's spy net is tightening daily as citizens are encouraged to match the tight-lipped silence of officialdom to guard the movements of the army that is moving, unit by unit, to France.

Troops are moving throughout southern England. All round the coast and far inland there are big army camps and temporary military posts have sprung up everywhere.

Everywhere there is silence. How these men go to France is not said. What English Channel ports are being used is a well-guarded secret.

In a small seaside town in southern England this morning a regiment of motorized artillery could be seen moving smoothly. Light field guns and ammunition drawn by trucks carrying the gun crews moved almost noiselessly through the narrow winding streets.

Most of the gun crews had army blankets round their legs, and rubbed their hands in the sharp morning air. Sentries at each end of the town halted civilian traffic and guided the gunners along the coastal road.

Camping in fields, billeted in towns and village, army officers and men are in every street and country lane. More than 1,000 hotels throughout the country commandeered by the government are closed now to ordinary guests. Some are earmarked for officers, others house entire infantry companies. The doors are guarded by sentries.

As police busily hunt spies, newspapers and radio hammer out official warnings against disclosing government secrets and urge strict discretion in public onversation.

At hotels guests now, must fill in detailed identity papers on the continental model. On the radio Saturday night government employees were cautioned not to discuss their work "even with their wives". Hotel registers are checked twice daily. Railroad lines and shipping are constantly watched.

Lord Tweedsmuir Says Canada And Empire are Fighting for Human Decencies and Liberty

Ottawa, Sept. 19 (CP)—Confidence that whatever services are required from Canada in the present war will be brilliantly performed was expressed today by Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, as he opened a meeting of the Dominion executive council of the Canadian Legion. He said the services required probably would be different from those performed so ably in the last war.

Ex-servicemen were the "older statesmen" of defence in Canada, said His Excellency. They had experience in the last war, although it might have been a different kind. They could teach the younger generation the rudiments of war and help keep the national mind balanced and the national spirit keen.

"In that war, Canadians were a corps elite," he said. "In this war they will be a corps elite."

Lord Tweedsmuir told the delegates they were meeting at a moment he considered as grave as any in the history of the empire.

'It is grave because the war we have entered has a more serious purpose," he said. "—a more momentous purpose than any of the older wars we fought for security and defence of territory, for balance of power or for similar reasons, but we have entered into this war for a far greater purpose than any of these: For the preservation of those spiritual values which alone make life worth living.

"We are fighting for more than democracy. Democracy is only a system of government, a system of government which happens to suit us exceedingly well and which we want to perpetuate, but we are fighting for something greater than a system of government.

"We are fighting for the liberties of the individual, the right to live freely. We are fighting for the morality of religion in which we have been brought up. We are fighting for human decencies, and there never was a war entered into with a more solemn purpose.

"It is momentous for another reason; we are fighting under entirely unusual conditions. Whatever the conditions may be, they will be very different from any of the earlier wars. New weapons, the use of which we have not plumbed, new tactics, new strategy.

"We have to feel our way. The man who attempts to dogmatize and to predict the length of this war is indeed a very foolish fellow."

The present British position was curiously like that in the Napoleonic war of the last century. Then the whole of Europe was arrayed against Britain.

"We did not flinch," he said. "We stuck to it and we won after a long desperate struggle and however long and desperate the struggle may be now we are not going to flinch and we are also going, to win."

Practical Fall Suit

By ALICE ALDEN

Here's one of those town-or-country suits which get better-looking every autumn, and which most of us find so practical from the moment cool weather begins. College girl will love it, but no more than the business woman who wants dash at luncheon as well as comfort in the office. The fabric is dark brown wool, plaided in dull blue and rust and piped in brown kidskin. The cumberbund is also kidskin and so are the high-cut shoes, as sleek a tie-up as can be imagined. Fitting into the casual picture, the hat is made of strips of felt stitched together and correctly tailored by a man's hatter.

Personals

TOUNSON—O'NEILL

Marmora— St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, beautifully decorated with gladioli, asters and other autumn flowers was the scene of a pretty wedding at 2 p.m. on Saturday, September 16, when Martha Jean O'Neill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. O'Neill, Deloro, became the bride of William Tounson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tounson, Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in a floor-length frock of white taffeta with a waist length veil of tulle held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a nosegay of Talisman roses, corn flowers and baby's breath.

Miss Margaret Tounson, sister of the groom, was maid of honour, daintily attired in a floor length frock of pink sheer and carried a nosegay of Talisman roses and asters.

Miss Beatrice O'Neill, was her sister's bridesmaid gowned in fuchsia taffeta, carrying muff of flowers in matching shades. Edna O'Neill, sister of the bride made a pretty flower girl, daintily gowned in yellow dotted organdie, carrying muff of matching flowers. The groomsman was Mr. Leonard McMann, Toronto, and Mr. Norman O'Neill, brother of the bride was usher. A reception and wedding dinner was held at 'The Log Cabin', Actinolite, the bride's mother receiving in a jacket frock of blue flowered sheer assisted by the groom's mother, attired in green silk crepe. The couple left on a short honeymoon in Eastern Ontario, the bride, travelling in a grey ensemble with wine accessories. On their return they will take up residence in Marmora.

Smith of Trenton.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gray suit trimmed with gray Persian lamb with hat and accessories of Tuscan wine and corsage of lily of valley. Miss Frances Hill attended the bride wearing Teal blue with matching hat and corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Donald Whytock was best man and Captain J. E. Bateman, acted as usher.

A HOPELESS JOB

(By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE)

Searching for facts to prove the gossip about great wealth accumulated by doctors of medicine from the fees paid by patients, is a hopeless job.

Men have been known to secure ample funds to enable them to live in luxury the balance of their lives, by salvaging a rock-wrecked ship hulk. Neither long experience nor substantial investment were necessary to gain that life of ease.

Medical doctors salvage many humans wrecked and wracked by disease. We hear of such cases, experience them, and go complacently about our affairs without a thought as to whether or not the doctor receives his rightful due of salvage money, as does the ship salvager.

Are there those, who can, but have not, paid for the salvaging of their own broken health or that of some member of their family? There are.

That's the principal reason why the average income of medical doctors throughout the country parallels that of trainman.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Career"

Striking a vividly realistic note in its characterizations and atmosphere the vital drama of small town life, "Career" based on the outstanding novel by Phil Stong, also the author of the memorable "State Fair" is now playing at the McCarthy theatre.

Edward Ellis, who scored outstanding success in "A Man to Remember" and recently in "Man of Conquest," again enacts an unforgettable part in "Career" also splendid characterizations are contributed by Anne Shirley, Leon Errol, Janet Beecher, Raymond Hatton, Samuel S. Hinds, Alice Eden and John Archer the boy and girl selected through 'Jesse L. Lasky's 13-week, coast to coast radio quest for new talent. We recommend "Career" to all moviegoers, it is a story charged with deep drama, warm romance and glowing thrill—do not miss it. On the same program, as a companion feature Sally Eilers is presented in "They Made Her a Spy" a powerful story of the inside workings of a foreign ring of spies and saboteurs and the method by which counter- spies attempt to frustrate their secret activities. Allan Lane, Fritz Leiber, Frank M. Thomas and Theodore Von Eltz, head the supporting cast of "They Made Her a Spy" which is Miss Eilers newest screen production.

"Screen Snapshots"

In addition to the above feature presentations, the program at the McCarthy theatre also includes 'Screen Snapshots" an interesting featurette in which Mrs. Basil Rathbone, Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Rudy Vallee, Dolores Del Rio, Cary Grant, David O. Selznick, Irene Dunne, Joan Bennett, Jack Benny, Hedy Lamarr, Bob Hope and many other celebrities make informal screen appearances. This is also a subject which we can highly recommend and with "Career" and "They Made Her a Spy" makes up a programme that you "must see."

AT THE BELLE

"Bachelor Mother"

Heralded by advance preview reports as one of the season's most sprightly and original comedy romances, "Bachelor Mother" makes its local debut next at the Belle theatre with Ginger Rogers and David Niven in the stellar leads.

Miss Rogers in the role of a department store sales lady displays her flair for comedy which she recently employed in "Vivacious Lady" and "Stage Door." Niven's characterization as an ardent store executive is a refreshing departure from his roles in "Wuthering Heights," and "Dawn Patrol."

A hilarious mix-up over a baby forms the axis about which "Bachelor Mother" revolves. Holding a temporary job in the store during the Christmas rush, Miss Rogers—on her lunch hour—finds an infant on the steps of a foundling home, and is instantly mistaken for the child's mother.

The more Ginger protests the more she is disbelieved, and the home authorities report the matter to the store executives. Niven, a vice-president and the son of the store's owner, investigates for himself and he, too, is convinced that Ginger is the mother. He immediately shifts her to the permanent staff and gives her a raise. This only infuriates Ginger who is at her wits end to shift the care of the child to others.

Horrified, Niven lectures her, and under threat of dire consequences forces her to bring up the youngster. But his interest in the girl arouses the jealousy of a young stock clerk in the store, who anonymously misinforms Niven's father, Charles Coburn, that Niven is responsible for Miss Roger's child.

Coburn, anxious that his son shall marry and settle down is greatly interested in the report. He shadows Niven, and concludes that his report is true. The situation becomes even more hectic when both Miss Rogers and Niven learn that Coburn is planning to adopt the child as his grandson!

What happens from here on is a series of mirth-packed complications, developing the film into one of the season's most entertaining offerings.

Miss Rogers and Niven in the co-starring bracket head an outstanding supporting cast topped by Charles Coburn, and including Frank Albertson, E. E. Clive, Ernest Truex and Ferike Boros.

"Tempest Over Tunis" a timely and interesting traveltalk, "Moving Vanities" a tuneful Leon Errol multiple reel musical comedy, and "The Zoo," a highly entertaining screen reelism will be exhibited on the same program.

"Stanley and Livingstone"

One of the most magnificent motion pictures the screen has ever shown is now at the Belle in Darryl F.Zanuck's production of "Stanley and Livingstone," the 20th Century-Fox film, starring twice-Academy Award, turning in another great performance as the heroic reporter who risked his life to "Find Livingstone" in the black heart of unknown Africa. Nancy Kelly and Richard Greene are co-starred with Tracy at the head of a magnificent cast.

The Belle overseas World News and "Seascouts" a very funny Walt Disney color cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

Some Hints for "Cruisers"

"Much is discovered of How and
Why
In the study of passengers passing
by."

One of the most difficult and subtle questions in the entire world of etiquette is the question of making friends on shipboard. This would naturally be true, for it involves the gamut of sensitiveness to other people. In general, travelers or vacationists (and especially on ship board) are of two kinds—those whose idea of a good time is to be constantly doing things, constantly talking to someone and those who wish to be left alone, to rest, to read, to relax.

The well-bred person is the one who senses at once what the other person wishes to do. If a mistake in friendly advances is made, the mannerly person withdraws at once, does not attempt to force his or her point of view, realizing that the other person's point of view should be respected.

Now a word or two about cruise clothes. Sports clothes are worn for day wear, the kind of clothes that you would wear at the seashore or at a country club. Simple sports clothes, never conspicuous ones. A dinner dress or semi-evening dress is worn for dinner or dancing. Inexperienced travellers are often tempted to over-dress, or to give the impression that the trip is regarded as an occasion for exhibiting over-elaborate clothes that have been bought "for the trip". "Conservative" should be the word for your shipboard clothes

On a southern cruise, men wear in the evening either the regulation dinner jacket or a white dinner jacket, or a white or cream mess jacket, or a blue coat and flannels.

Remember that there are several details that must be attended to before (or directly after) you sail. You must reserve a place at table from the chief steward, whom you will find assigning places in the dining salon. The earlier you interview him, the better assignment you will receive. (If there are two "sittings", the last one is the preferable one, unless you really wish to lunch and dine early.) Then you must find the deck steward, rent a deck chair (also a steamer rug and cushion, if you wish) and choose the position in which you wish to have your chairs placed. Then seek out the bath steward and schedule your bath hour, according to your preference or according to the hours remaining on his schedule. And, if you wish, deposit your money and other valuables in the purser's office.

For a 2 o'Clock Simple Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My sister is to be married at home at two o'clock in the afternoon. There will be about fifty guests, and the bride will be dressed informally.

1—How and by whom are the guests received?

2—Would women guests be expected to remove their hats?

3—What refreshments could properly be served at such an hour?

Mary

1—As the wedding guests arrive, they are greeted by the bride's mother or whoever is the hostess of the home. She stands near the entrance of the room in which the ceremony is to take place. If the bride has a sister (or perhaps a sister-in-law) who is not a wedding attendant, the bride's mother may ask her help in receiving the guests.

2—The bride's mother does not wear a hat, since she is the hostess. But the women guests do wear their hats, during the ceremony and reception.

3—This in indeed a difficult in-between hour for which to plan appropriate refreshments. Perhaps a tea menu, as simple as possible, would be the most appropriate one. Small, very thin sandwiches—some only bread and butter sandwiches, others with simple fillings; small after dinner cups of hot coffee, or cups of tea, if you prefer; the bride's cake as the centerpiece of the table, and later cut by the bride and served to the guests; ice cream, with the cake, if you wish, and something with which to drink the toast to the bride and groom . . . and champagne or punch

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Vacation Romance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

While on my vacation this summer I met a boy of 21 and fell in love with him. I'm 19. We went around together for the two months I was there, and when I left we parted as lovers, saying we would correspond. In fact, he asked me to write to him, which I did.

The first four letters he answered promptly, and then all of a sudden he stopped writing. Now, I don't know whether to write again or not. I thought I might send him a picture postcard from my home town, as a sort of gentle hint that I want to hear. Do you think that would be all right? I do want to keep in touch with him.

Susan

It will be quite all right to send him a postcard from your home town, if you care to. But if he doesn't acknowledge this gesture, better let the matter drop. It isn't wise to allow too much neglect on the part of a boy friend. The girl who is independent is more sought after than the "doormat" type.

Are All Boys Alike?

Dear Miss Fairfax

All the boys I meet seem to be the same whether they're at parties, or at club affairs. They all want to go too far in this petting business. And when I tell them I'm not that sort, they just pass me up the next time when they want to take out a girl. Do they think I'm going to change my ideals just for the sake of their company? Indeed I'm not!

I do love a good time, and I smoke and take an occasional drink, but that's the end of wild times for me. Before I know it, they've all stopped coming, and I'm thoroughly disgusted.

Janet

It seems to me, my dear, that you got in with the wrong crowd of boys. Perhaps the fact that you smoke and "take an occasional drink" makes them think you're a wild woman.

However, not all boys insist on this type of girl. I get many letters from boys who tell me that while they usually attend these parties themselves, they're disgusted with such amusement and don't think much of the girls who participate. It seems to me your drinking has misled these boys. They evidently think as long as you drink with them, you don't draw the line on anything else. If you really want my advice, I'd cut out the drinking.

Better Watch Your Step

Dear Miss Fairfax

Occasionally we have clandestine meetings, and she tells me she would give the world to be with me. But her parents and her husband feel that she is timid and weak-willed and each time I convince her that she should leave her husband and marry me, they cause her to lose the courage of her convictions, and humiliate her with wrathful threats.

She could easily get a divorce if she had the courage. She doesn't love her husband. Should I continue to try to win her, or should I carry on our friendship without a thought of marriage, or should I leave her and stand the heartbreak that would be inevitable?

W.

There are a good many things you have left out of this letter and which I should like to know. How old are you and this married girl with whom you are in love? Are there any children, whose home would be broken if she should get a divorce? Are there any grounds for her parents' contention that she is weak-willed and unstable? Divorces are sometimes necessary, even as surgical operations are necessary. But if there's another way around the difficulty, better watch your step.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Booklet to Describe Care of Babies During First Year

One thing I think the Quintuplets have done and that is show the world what can be done in rearing children. The fight these five little girls have put up for life has awakened the interest of all sorts of organizations, and even governments have come to put more emphasis upon the care of children.

This was brought home to me quite forcibly when a representative of the Dominion government at Ottawa called on me recently to ask if I would write a booklet on the care of babies up to the time they are about a year old.

At once I got in touch with the syndicate by whose courtesy you read these columns. I found that the syndicate was more than willing to have me write it, so we are starting to plan the booklet, which will be distributed by the Dominion government through the division of child and maternal hygiene of the Department of Pensions and National Health.

Naturally I felt somewhat flattered when asked to work on this booklet. My first reaction was that it was too much work to undertake, along with the other duties I have, but after I had thought it over I began to feel that it was my duty to do anything I can to spread the science of baby culture.

So, I sat down with Dr. Ernest Couture, who is secretary of the Scientific Advisory Committee on Child Hygiene for Canada, and we did some planning.

First we decided to limit the discussions to babies up to the age of one year. When it is finished we anticipate the book will have about 30 pages, and I trust it will contain a lot of useful and practical suggestions on how to raise babies.

I think one of the things that influenced me to work on this book is the number of letters I receive from young mothers, who seem to be completely stumped by the prospect of caring for their babies once they get home from the hospital and have to do things for themselves.

Certainly there are right and wrong ways of caring for babies, and when they are young, if they can be taught good habits—routines that are healthful and constructive—you have done something for them that will stay with them all their lives.

The Quintuplets have certainly flourished on these simple and common sense rules for the rearing of children, and I am sure that what has been good for them will be good for other children as well. Certainly few mothers will have the problems to face that we had, when entrusted with the care of five premature babies whose combined weight was less than ten pounds.

There was nothing heroic in our treatment of these children. Common sense was what we depended on in practically all crises. And if common sense can't be applied to the raising of children I don't know where it could be used. So I don't think you will find many fads in this booklet. It will be pretty much the "tried" way of doing the best things for the baby.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, September 20

THIS MAY be a day memorable for the removal of long-standing and tenacious obstacles, according to the lunar transits. This release from frustrating and static conditions may be due to the friendly intervention of an elderly person or an old institution as a reward for hard work, practical propositions and a show of determined resistance to difficult and constricting circumstances. The will to win will melt opposition of superiors or employers, but only through methods of candor and inegrity—not by duplicity or trickiness.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which their stability and endurance of character will be tested. Industry, merit, steadfastness and determination should break down tenacious obstacles and deep resistance of superiors or those in power. Resolution, adherence to principle, integrity and the will to win against all obstacles will enlist the substantial support of an elderly person or a long-established institution.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, industrious, practical and constructive. It may have shrewd and quick intuitions, especially when hostility of superiors must be vanquished.

Rotary Pledges Its Support To Canadian War Activities

Fred Deacon Jr., Demonstrates Rapid Strides Made in Army Flying Suits

SIMPLE TO OPERATE

Standing rigidly at attention, members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday, gave their unanimous wholehearted approval to a resolution to support the war activities of Canada and to assist in every possible way various wartime organizations.

The resolution, moved by Rotarian Morley Duff and seconded by Rotarian Irvine Hefkey read: "That this Rotary Club while continuing its usual activities and its work on behalf of crippled children, give its wholehearted support as a club and as individuals in supporting the war activities of our country and that our members be urged to assist in every possible way, the Canadian Red Cross and similar organizations."

The remarkable strides made by the British Air Ministry in the manufacture of flying suits for the Empire's war-birds was ably demonstrated by Mr. Fred Deacon Jr. Using a flying model Mr. Deacon, pointed out the advantages of the two types of flying suit now in vogue as compared to the bulky cumbersome outfit worn by the flyers of 1914-18.

Practically the only difference in these suits is the fact that the pilot's suit is designed to wear a seat parachute pack while that of the observer or gunner has its pack on the chest.

Equipped With Parachute

The suits are equipped with parachute apparatus and a flotation life-saving waistcoat. The latter is inflated by means of a compressed air bottle carried in a pocket. The neck turns up at the back upon inflation, forming a pillow. Thus in case a flyer drops into water unconscious, he will float face upwards. There is sufficient Kapok in the construction of the material to keep a two hundred pound man afloat for 1,200 hours, Mr. Deacon said.

The British Air Ministry has been working on the development of these suits for several years, and has just ordered the manufacture of twelve thousand of them.

Move With Ease

They are designed to meet present flying conditions and are made so that the wearer can move about with ease, he said. He explained and demonstrated through the medium of the model, how the suits are adjusted, their simplicity of operation, and the ease with which they can be put on or taken off.

"We have had word that the new fabric is a trifle heavier than heretofore," Mr. Deacon said, intimating that a large number of these flying suits will be made in the Deacon Shirt Factory in the near future.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Sandy Burrows and the thanks of the club for a fine address was voiced by Rotarian Fred Douglas. Guests included Dr. Lind. assistant to Dr. G. H. Stobie of this city, Rotarian Felix Garffer, of San Juan, Porto Rico and Past President Charles Reid.

President Howard Clarke was in the chair with the ever-capable Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs providing the musical background for the community singing.

RECEPTION HELD FOR COUPLE

Beautiful Mantel Clock Presented to Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wise

Ameliasburg — The Ladies 'Aid met at the home of Mrs. Greg. Titus on Wednesday afternoon with a fair attendance.

The new hall of the United Church has been completed and is now ready for occupation. Thanks to the sincerity of loyal workers of the Ladies' Aid Society for the erection and the financing of the same. The wiring and lighting of the building was personally donated by Mr. Gilbert B. Choate in memory of his wife, the late Mrs. Bertha Choate, who was always connected with this church.

A reception was held on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Adams in honor of their youngest daughter, Myrtle, who was recently married in Toronto, to Mr. Gordon Wise. A charivari was also in vogue the same evening of the reception and the merrymakers were invited inside and treated to ice cream and cake and other good things for the occasion.

On Saturday evening a shower was held in the town hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wise, (nee Myrtle Adams) with a very large crowd in attendance. After a time of visiting and social chat Mr. and Mrs. Wise were asked to come to the front where an address was read and they were presented with a beautiful mantel clock, showing the esteem and good wishes of the community, after which cake and lemonade was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wise are taking up residence in Toronto.

PRESENTATION IS MADE ON DEPARTURE

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 5th, the Young People of the Kingston Road gathered on the bay shore at Mr. H. Walkom's to spend a social evening with Miss Jean Gazley before her departure to Kingston where she is now nurse-in-training.

The young people spent the evening around a large bon-fire where corn was roasted and marsh mallow toasted. Musk melons and water melons added to the evening's treats.

Community singing followed this by those who could sing on a full stomach. Later the gathering proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walkom.

Jean is very popular among the young people but she will be greatly missed in the community by old as well as young.

Miss Freda Donaldson read the address which follows:

Miss Jean Gazely:

Dear Jean:

We, your friends and neighbors, on learning of your intended departure from this neighborhood, have taken this opportunity of spending a social hour with you tonight before you leave us to take up your abode elsewhere.

Looking over the past we recall many happy times together, and your cheerful presence and willing help has won for you the respect of the neighborhood where you are held in high esteem.

We are sorry indeed to lose you from our neighborhood, but when we realize that you have chosen such a wonderful profession we can wholeheartedly forgive you.

We are glad that you are not going far from us, and we trust that you will come back to your faithful friends and neighborhood quite frequently. We are going to miss you probably more than you realize. As we think of your departure we realize that a noble, upright character is about to enter the most worthy of professions.

As a token of our high esteem we ask you to accept these gifts and may they often remind you of your many friends of the Kingston Road who join heartily in wishing you every success in your new undertaking.

May God be with you through your darkest hours and His richest blessing rest upon you at all times.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors, Young People's Class.

Miss Logan presented Miss Gazely with a matching purse and parasol.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week the Kingston Road W. A. met at the home of Mrs. Logan and the afternoon was spent by discussing various business and quilting. The collection was very satisfactory.

LUCKY NEGRO

Greenup, Ky., Sept. 19 (AP)—A negro charged with murder was freed yesterday when a juror in error signed the verdict blank opposite "acquittal" instead of "convicted of manslaughter." The jurors protested they had intended to convict Frank Taylor, 51, of manslaughter but the court ruled the verdict was "binding."

Sidney Twp. School Fair

Stirling—Climaxing one of the most successful years in the history of Hastings County School Fairs, Mr. H. L. Fair, B.S.A. local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and his capable staff of assistants directed the activity of the final fair of the County held on Monday, Sept. 18th at Wallbridge, as the pupils of all school sections in Sidney Township portrayed a knowledge of agriculture, gardening and horticulture that rated high in comparison to the efforts of other townships. Much of the increased interest in the agricultural division of the fairs, is believed to be promoted by the fact that local fairs are the only fields of competition this year. In previous years the first six prize-winners in each class at the Township Fairs became eligible for the Grand Championship Fair for Hastings County.

This part of the competition has been discontinued along with several classes of school work which in other years were entered in competition. School displays have been recommended by the Ontario Department of Education with prizes being distributed equally to all schools entering a display project. ## WAR GLEANINGS

Budapest, Sept. 19 (AP)— The governments of southwestern Europe are taking drastic safeguards to protect their neutrality. Vigilant censorship, imprisonment for gossipers, control of mass displays of sympathies and a clamping down on revolutionary parties have been employed.

In Hungary, 28 men were arrested yesterday for "gossiping about the war."

Paris, Sept. 19 (AP)—Otto Wels, 66, former President of the German Social Democrat Party, died yesterday at Chatanay-Malabry where he had been living in exile. He recently issued a manifesto to the German people urging them to overthrow Adolf Hitler.

Mexico City, Sept. 19 (CP-Havas) —Leon Trostky, exiled former Soviet war minister, last night denounced in a statement Russia's invasion of Poland as "ignoble and criminal."

Budapest, Sept. 19 (CP)—Censorship is reducing the amount of war news that can be printed in Budapest newspapers. The story of the sinking of the British aircraft carries Courageous was printed on back pages yesterday.

New York, Sept. 19 (CP)—Alexander Kerensky, Premier of Russia's Provincial government after the collapse of the Czarist regime in 1917, predicts the collapse of Joseph Stalin's dictatorship as one of the consequences of the non-aggression pact with Puehrer Hitler.

He said here yesterday this would result in restoration of "a strong, National, Democratic Russia."

POLISH TROOPS

The communique said Polish forces encircled south of the Vistula River between Warsaw and Kutno had been defeated and were "in a state of complete dissolution."

No Comment

There was no comment on operations along the Western Front. Nazi quarters said, however, that with most of Poland now in hands of German and Soviet Russian troops, France and Great Britain are faced with the question of why they want to wage war against Germany.

From fugitives who already have left Warsaw, the Germans declared, came reports the capital's food supply is virtually exhausted, and that confusion prevails.

Apparently no one with sufficient authority to negotiate with German army commanders remains in the city, Germans said.

As the battle for possession of Warsaw raged anew, German and Soviet Russian forces, pushing into Poland from opposite directions, met at Brest-Litovsk, 100 miles due east of the capital, where Russian revolutionists signed a separate peace with Germany during the first Great War.

Arrange Conference

Military sources indicated a conference between Nazi and Soviet army commanders would be arranged soon, possibly today, to discuss control of Poland pending adjustment of political issues involved.

Rumors of another partition were in the air, but it was said in Nazi quarters these were premature.

Informed circles freely admitted however, that Adolf Hitler and Joseph Stalin had reached agreement as to the steps to be taken in regard to Poland's future.

The press said 95,000 square miles of Polish territory out of a total of 126,588 had been occupied by German troops.

The line marking the limit of press maps from a point northwest of Grodno almost straight south to Bialystok, Brest-Litovsk, Wlodawa and Lwow and thence southwest to a point near the Slovak-Hungarian frontier.

Campaign Concluded

The Nazi Press said today the campaign in the East has been concluded.

The Lokal Anzeiger, under the caption, "The End of Poland", declared "Poland has fallen to pieces." The paper blamed the Poles and their inability to govern themselves for their recent situation.

The arrival in Berlin of General Count Juichi Terauchi, member of the Japanese Supreme War Council, and three high staff officers was regarded in official circles as significant.

As a mark of speial honor, it was learned, Terauchi will be taken to the Eastern front Wednesday to see the German army in action and to confer with Adolf Hitler.

Credit Must Go to McKechnie If Reds Win National Flag; Cards, Reds Split Twin Bills

Manager Finds Something Useful in Players Cast Off by Other Teams

LEONARD WINS 19th

Defeats Detroit Tigers 4-2 in Best Pitching of the Day

(By Bill Boni Associated Press Sports Writer).

When and if Cincinnati Reds win the National Baseball League pennant, a large part of the credit must go to Manager Bill McKechnie's ability to find something useful in players cast aside as useless by other teams.

Any way you look at it now, the National League race has narrowed down to a contest between the Reds and time. St. Louis Cardinals still are in there pitching—batting, too, for that matter—but every day the Reds hang on to their 3 1-2 game lead makes the job tougher for the Cards.

To help his club hang on, McKechnie has done some surprising things. His prize exhibit is Bucky Walters, the converted infielder who never really showed his pitching ability until this year. Then Bill picked up Al Simmons for the punch that might be left in his bat; he grabbed off Johnny Niggeling to strengthen his pitching staff for the final drive, and in his latest move, called in the American Association home run king, Vince DiMaggio, as soon as Kansas City was through for the season.

Not Eligible For Series

Vince won't be eligible for the World Series, but wise Will figures "he ought to do us some good' before the season ends. Vince played under McKechnie at Boston, but Casey Stengel sent him back to the minors because of his failure to hit.

DiMaggio broke in as a pinch hitter yesterday and struck out just the way he used to for the Bees. But in spite of that, the Reds moved a shade nearer the title. They split a doubleheader with Boston and the Cards did likewise against New York Giants. That left the standing like this:

| | W. | L. | G.B. | T.P. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati .. | 86 | 53 | — | 15 | |
| St. Louis .. | 83 | 57 | 3½ | 13 | (x) |

(x) One game with New York cancelled.

Only Need Eleven More

The margin doesn't look very big there but the figures show the Reds, by winning 11 of their remaining games, can slam the door right in the Cardinals' faces even in the unlikely event that St. Louis should win 13 straight. And in its latest drive Cincinnati has won nine of the last 12.

For a while yesterday it appeared the Reds might jack up their margin. That was after they had beaten the Bees 4-1 behind Whitey Moore's six-hit flinging while the Cards were losing to the Giants 6-2 on Cliff Melton's good pitching in the tight spots and a three-run homer by Tom Hafey.

Good Relief Hurling

But in the second sections of those twin bills Cincinnati fell afoul of some fine relief hurling by the Bees' George Barnicle and the Cardinals let loose with their heaviest guns to bury the Giants 15-5.

With the Dodgers and Cubs, rivals for third place, idle, the only other National League game saw the Pirates trim the Phillies 7-4.

In the American League things went back to normal as the tail-end St. Louis Browns bowed to the champion New York Yankees 6-2. Bump Hadley held the Brownies to five hits and Joe Gordon made victory No. 99 sure by clouting his 25th homer with two men on.

Cleveland Indians dusted off the Athletics 9-4 and thus drew up even with the idle Chicago White Sox in third place.

In the other engagement, Washington's Dutch Leonard hung up No. 19 with a seven-hit, 4-2 trimming of Detroit Tigers.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

Chicago: George Nyberg, 152 3-4, Port Arthur, Ont., outpointed Tony Sopko, 156 1-4, Chicago (8).

Milwaukee, Wis.: Jackie Callura, 127 1-2, Toronto and Hamilton, outpointed Pancho Huerta, 128, Mexico 10). Johnny Gaudes 128 3-4, Winnipeg, knocked out Joe Ojida, 124 1-2, Chicago (1).

Washington: Kenny La Salle, 142 12, Houston, Tex., outpointed Steve Mamakos, 149, Washington (10).

New York: Paul Junior, 138 1-2, Lewiston, Me., stopped George Zengaras, 137 1-4, New York (4).

Lubock, Tex.: Max Baer, 213, Livermore, Calif., former world heavyweight champion, knocked out Babe Ritchie, 195, Texas (2).

LOUISVILLE WINS FIRST

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 19 (CP)—First blood in the playoff to determine the American Baseball Association representative in the "Little World Series" belonged today to Louisville by virtue of Yank Terry's pitching which turned back Indianapolis 5-1.

The teams meet again tonight in the second of the four-of-seven games series.

Terry set the Indians down with seven hits, fanned nine and wound up the game last night with a final flourish in which he struck the side out in the ninth inning. He allowed only three hits in the first six innings and weakened only momentarily in the seventh when the Tribe scored its only run.

WINNIPEG STILL IN DRIVER'S SEAT

Defeat Edmonton Eskimos 14-7 to Win Fifth Straight Game

Winnipeg, Sept. 19 (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers are undefeated after five games in the Western Interprovincial Football Union this season and Calgary Bronks, in full stride after an unimpressive start, apparently are the most formidable threat to a third consecutive western title for the Winnipeggers.

While Bombers defeated Edmonton Eskimos 14-7 before 5,000 fans in a listless game here last night the Bronks uncorked speed and versatility at Regina to whip the crippled Roughriders 12-3 and move into a tie with Riders for second place in the Union standing with two victories each.

Bronks lost their first two games this season to Winnipeg and Edmonton but turned on the Eskimos for their first victory ten days ago. On Friday night here only a last-minute Bomber field goal kept the Winnipeg record unblemished in a 19-18 victory over Calgary.

Bronks treated 3,000 Regina fans with speed and versatility last night.

Riders were crippled by absence of their two great backfielders, Howard Cleveland and Leo Danaher, injured as Regina beat Edmonton 18-5 on Friday.

The veteran Fritz Hanson and Jeff Nicklin led the Winnipeg attack against Edmonton but only in spurts were the Bombers impressive.

DECIDING GAME AT AMSTERDAM

Both Teams Win Two Games for Championship of Can-Am Loop

Amsterdam, N.Y., Sept. 19 (CP)—The championship was dusted off today and readied for a sudden-death victor as Amsteram Rugmakers and Rome Colonels switched to Rome, N.Y., for tonight's concluding game in the Canadian-American Baseball League's best-of-five final playoff.

With a 5-4 triumph over the Romans here last night, Rugmakers knotted the champion-declaring round at two games apiece. They had won the first game, 7-5, last Thursday but Rome turned in a 5-3 victory Saturday and a 14-2 triumph Sunday to spring into the lead.

The crown will find a wearer for the first time in two seasons in to-

The Colonels came near spoiling was called off due to inclement weather last year with Amsterdam and Cornwall Bisons playing for the title. Rugmakers are pennant-holders for the second year in succession while Rome finished third in the regular season.

The Colonels came near spiling Amsterdam's bid for both titles last night. Leading 4-1 going into the last of the eighth, Colonels seemed to have the game in hand but Paul Badgett, Amsterdam third-baseman, swatted a three-run homer that changed the complexion.

J. BLANCHARD K.O'D. BY GAGNON

Flyweight Champion Dropped by Bantam King in Third Round

Montreal, Sept. 19 (CP)—Joey Gagnon, whose baby-face expression belies the dynamite in his fists, knocked out Jerry Blanchard, Canadian amateur flyweight champion from Cornwall, Ont., in the third round of a scheduled five-round exhibition bout here last night.

Blanchard forced the fight in the first two rounds but in the third the Montreal boy, who holds the Dominion bantam crown, found an opening and dropped his opponent for the count with a right to the jaw.

Two other Cornwall fighters lost decisions. Fighting at 126 pounds, Vic Blanchard of Cornwall lost to R. Doucet of Montreal and in a 147-pound scrap Freddy Memchuck of Montreal defeated Fernand Fortier.

Wrestling Last Night

ERRORS IN NINTH PAVE WAY FOR OILERS' DEFEAT

Four Times in Last Innings Local Fielders Dropped Fly Balls

TRI-BELLS WIN 8-7

Bawden Pitching Good Game Deserved Much Better Fate

With victory within their grasp after playing eight inning of fine softball, the Belleville Shell "Oilers" literally fell to pieces as their defence completely collapsed in the ninth inning to give the Toronto "Tri-Bells" four unearned runs and an 8 to 7 victory over the 'Oilers' at Coleman Flats in a final intermediate O.A.S.A. play-off last evening. The 'Oilers' tasted the bitter dose of elimination in defeat, the loss being the second in succession at the hands of the new Eastern Ontario O.A.S.A. champions, the Toronto 'Tri-Bells.'

Leading 7-4 going into the ninth inning the 'Oilers' seemed assured of victory, especially as Bawden and company retired the first two Toronto batters in the top half of the ninth. With two out, however, Amo, Moon and Dickey all dropped fly balls, while Sero allowed a fourth to drop for an easy single and before the dust of battle had settled away the Queen City mushballers had scored four unearned runs, which proved enough to give them the day's honors, as Belleville was unable to push the tying run across in the ninth, as they left a runner stranded.

Up until the fatal ninth Bawden had pitched seven hit ball and was given some fine support on the part of his team mates, both offensively and defensively. On the other hand the Oilers had pounded 'Ruby' Sher, the Tri-Bells' starting moundsman, to cover in the seventh inning, as Bawden opened the scoring in the third with a home run with one aboard, Sero hitting the next pitch for a second circuit blow in the same frame. Moon drove home a Belleville run in the fifth while O'Neill, Whalen and Rowbotham all hit safely in the seventh to add two more Belleville runs. Then Bawden drove home Dickey in the eighth to seemingly cinch the piece.

Ivan, Toronto's shortstop, accounted for practically all of the visitors' scoring up until the ninth, as he hit for the circuit in the second and duplicated this feat with one aboard in the eighth. The first two Toronto batters flew out easily to open the ninth, when Amo dropped Sher's line drive to left and Vetore hoisted to short left-centre and the ball fell between two Belleville players for a soft hit, Sher scoring. Dickey dropped pinch-hitter Thane's soft fly and Kozanchenco doubled to score Thane and later scored himself as Moon fumbled Stukus' hit back of second and the issue was over, as Rowbotham died on first after getting the only hit of the bottom half of the ninth.

Leave 12 Stranded

Bawden hurled nine hit ball, while Belleville touched Sher and Clark for 14 safeties, but Belleville left an even dozen stranded on the runways to Toronto's seven. Some poor base running early in the game later proved costly as outs registered then, might have resulted in scoring, had cautiousness been shown.

Ivan, Toronto shortstop, with two home runs and a single in four tries, led the hitters as Kozanchenco had a double and two singles and Vetore two one base hits. For Belleville Bawden had a home run and single and Rowbotham a double and two singles. O'Neill had a double and a single to his credit as every Belleville player hit safely at least once, except Ronsky. Moon and Amo made sensational catches early in the game to abruptly halt Toronto's scoring efforts.

The Toronto 'Tri-Bells' advanced to the Intermediate 'A' finals in the O.A.S.A. by virtue of winning over Belleville in two straight games, the Toronto nine having won in Toronto by a 9 to 1 count last Saturday.

LIFE'S DARKEST MOMENT

Bloomington, Ind., (CP)—Mel Trutt, diminutive Indiana mile runner, dashed to the starting post of a high school race, stripped off his warm-up clothes, then discovered he had not put on his running shorts.

RESTRICTS SPORTS

Tokyo (CP)—The Army is "top dog" in Japan these days, and sporting frivolities are discouraged. Consequently, the national sporting championships this summer will be on a very reduced scale.

NEW TENNIS STAR

Tennis writers have taken to the verbal guns to shout the praises of Welby Van Horn. ABOVE, 19-year-old Californian, "in the tradition of Tilden, Vines and Budge" as the scribes put it. Among a 1939 crop of international racquet-swingers whose play has been mostly on the conservative side, Van Horn's dashing play has been impressive, and he pulled off a big upset by reaching the finals of the U.S. singles championship, where he lost to Bobby Riggs. On the way to the finals he had beaten Wayne Sabin and Jack Bromwich in the two previous rounds.

Old Elbow Ailment Forces Veteran Out in First Half of Ninth

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—One game astern of Rochester Red Wings in their final International Baseball League play-off series for the Governor's Cup, Johnny Neun's Newark Bears will have to cope with a long-standing jinx when they meet Billy Southworth's Wings in tonight's second game of the set.

For the Wings, who finished second during the regular season to Jersey City Giants, eliminated by the Bruins, plan to use Si Johnson, veteran Major League righthander, as their starting pitcher. Johnson won 22 games over the regular season, and six of these were recorded at the expense of Newark.

George Washburn, who pitched a four-hit victory over the Little Giants in the semi-final set, has been named to pitch for Newark.

Pitching was the Wings' long suit and the Bears' short as Rochester took the opener, 8-1, last night. After a single, two of the Wings, four errors and a pair of walks by Preacher Roe forced in a run in the second inning to tie the score 1-1, Mike Ryba took charge for the Wings and allowed but three scattered hits until a minor elbow ailment in his pitching arm forced him to quit at the outset of the ninth. He fanned five and walked two. Roy Henshaw finished without trouble, giving the Bruins their fifth hit.

Harry Davis and George Kurowski culled three hits each against the Bears' pitching trio, Davis bagging two triples as the Wings totalled 13 base knocks. Eight of them and four runs were charged to Joe Beggs, Newark starter and losing hurler. Hany Borowy pitched two scoreless frames before the Wings added their last four runs on four blows off Rookie Chuck Gassaway in the seventh and eighth. Sam Narron homered with Dusty Cooke on base in the seventh.

JOE HAS HATRED AND CONTEMPT FOR BOB PASTOR

No Liking for Challenger Due to Statements Made About Him

Brown Bomber Says He is Going to Finish Bout Early

(By Charles Dunkley
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit, Sept. 19. — (AP)— Joe Louis, ready to defend the world's heavyweight championship against Bob Pastor tomorrow night, has contempt and hatred in his heart for his challenger.

Personal feeling rarely has played any part in Louis' fights, but the negro titleholder has no liking for Pastor because of statements attributed to him and his manager, James Johnston, since Pastor surprisingly stayed the 10-round limit with Joe in their battle in New York in January, 1937.

Louis is determined to prove that Pastor was extremely lucky to last the ten rounds. He is confident of stopping Pastor within five rounds. The champion places this time limit on the duration of the bout even should Pastor attempt to run away from him.

Statement by Champion

Louis said:—

"I'm going to catch Pastor just as fast as I can. There ain't no use me foolin' around with him. The sooner I catch him the sooner my work will be finished."

Tomorrow night's battle, scheduled for 20 rounds, will be the first over that route in 25 years, since Jess Willard won the heavyweight crown from Jack Johnson in Havana in 1915. Supposedly, that distance favors Pastor, who is convinced he will out-finish Louis because of his defensive skill and experience gained in longer fights.

Pastor, idle since last Thursday in an obvious effort to gain weight, breaks camp at Brighton, Mich., today to move into the battleground. He will hide away in a hotel here until time to weight in. The challenger has done no boxing for five days but has continued his daily roadwork and light gymnasium exercises.

$300,000 Advance Sale

Reporting an advance sale of $300,000, Promoter Mike Jacobs expressed confidence the fight would attract a gate of at least $400,000. A sharp drop in temperature, bringing autumn chill, caused a measure of apprehension in the last-minute demand for tickets, but that was no worry to Promoter Jacobs, who calmly went about the task of converting Briggs Stadium, home of the Detroit Tigers into a fight arena.

Louis and Pastor will weigh in at noon tomorrow. Pastor expects to scale 187 pounds and Louis about 201.

Peterboro Gridder Is With Queens

Kingston, Sept. 19.—Queen's students were greatly cheered yesterday afternoon when Ford Loucks, star of the Peterborough senior rugby team, turned out for the first time. For some days Coach Frank Tyndall and the Queen's players have been anxiously waiting for Loucks to put in his appearance. He arrived in the city over the week-end and was one of the first at the stadium yesterday afternoon. Charles Hicks, secretary of the athletic board of control, stated that the first game of the season in which the senior rugby team will take part will be played at Guelph on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 30, when the tricolor will be matched against Fred Baldwin's Agricultural College aggregation.

POST MORTEM PICTURES AS LOU NOVA AND TONY GALENTO WENT 14 GORY ROUNDS

Looking back at the recent heavyweight bout served up for Philadelphia fight fans, we present a couple of action shots typical of the battling that went on before a disappointing crowd of less than 20,000. A stumble-and-tumble affair, won, to the surprise of practically everyone by ponderous Tony Galento in the 14th round, when George Blake, the referee imported from California for the occasion, stopped the fight to prevent further damage to Lou Nova, the loser, who, before the fight was expected to be the opponent for Joe Louis next summer.

Between the Lines

We have often hear the expression—"they handed the opposition the game on a silver platter." We didn't see any silver platter around the Coleman Flats last night, but we did see a softball game actually handed, presented, given or whatever it might be termed, to the opposition, when the Shell "Oilers" booted the ball for three errors of commission and two of omission to actually present the Toronto "Tri-Bells" with four unearned runs in the ninth frame and an 8 to 7 victory. With the score stnading 7-4 in the Oiler's favor and Bawden and company seemingly having the situation well in hand, it appeared as though only a miracle could result in a Toronto victory. The miracle happened, as the Sedore-led nine literally fell to pieces and their defence collapsed. Strangely enough the Oilers retired the first two hands, in the top half of the ninth, before the proverbial balloon went up. No doubt there are none who feel the sting of defeat worse than the Oilers, so we'll have to wait another year before talking of a softball title for Belleville.

Up until the Oilers' defence collapsed in the ninth, the game was marked with some fine softball, both teams making sensational plays in the field, especially Jack Moon at second. Ivan, the Toronto shortstop accounted for practically all of his team's runs up until the ninth, as he hit two home runs, one coming with one aboard. No blame of the loss can be laid at Johnnie Bawden's door, as Bawden opened the scoring by hitting for the circuit with one aboard in the third and Sero followed with another homer. Moon, Whalen, Rowbotham and Bawden all came through with other hits that meant runs also. However in favour of the Tri-Bells we might say they never gave up trying to win, even with two out and none aboard in the ninth the Toronto team won't accept defeat, although three runs down. Vetore and Kozanchenco both came through with timely hits in that hectic ninth, but after three should have easily been retired. The Oilers showed some poor base running early in the game, however, in some cases failing to snatch advantages and in other taking too much for granted.

Forty eight hours prior to the game Belleville had three teams in the provincial ball hunt, two softball clubs, the Oilers and Point Anne, and our baseball team. Today there isn't one left in the provincial hunt, which proves, how rapidly elimination can vanish clubs once it moves into that downhill grind. However softball has enjoyed a good season in Belleville and no doubt will be equally as popular next season, if this war business doesn't become too serious. Like many other softball fans we had hoped for at least one O.A.S.A. title in Belleville for 1939, believing that either the Cementmen or the Oilers would turn th etrick. However, it looks as though the Trenton Softball League hold the whip hand in the east this year, that league has Wooler in the "C" series and the Trenton Yourex nine in the 'B' playdowns for the softball fans to follow throughout the district.

Just why spectators take their softball so much more seriously than perhaps any other sport, we have never quite been able to fathom out. For instance last Saturday in Trenton the Point Anne team took serious objections to a couple of Umpire Al Steenburg's last-inning decisions, but there was no evidence of physical violence on the part of the players, however. All of their objections were confined to verbal attacks. However, we glanced into the stands and saw no less than two fistic outbreaks between rival supporters, with women being predominate in each case. Actually from a neutral viewpoint it appeared silly to see a woman striking a man over the head with her purse, just because a mere ball game had been lost. The folly in such outbreaks was later proven when Mrs. Phil Loft sustained a seriously injured ankle as she was either pushed or fell from the top of the Trenton grandstand during the altercations. Verbal attacks should appease one's feelings in such cases, instead of physical attacks, which we feel cannot be condoned under any circumstances.

Clarence Giles of Glendive, Mont., recently completed a 288-mile world record-breaking swim down the Yellowstone river from Billings to Glendive. He had been i nthe water 77 1-2 hours. The previous record for fresh-water marathons, 281 miles down the Parana river in South America, was credited to Pedra A. Candiotti in 1933. Giles bettered the American record established by legless Charles Zimmy, who negotiated 147 miles of the Hudson river in 147 hours.

Bob Pastor seems quite confident he will beat champion Joe Louis at Briggs Stadium, Detroit, on Wednesday night, but unless the Brown Bomber has slipped considerably, we doubt if Pastor will go the route, even if he resurrected the old bicycle which he pedalled successfully before, or behind as the case may be, Louis on a previous occasion. There is talk of Louis being over-trained, but as Pastor only weighs 187 pounds it is doubtful if he can stay the route unless the "bicycle act" is repeated. Pastor weighs more today than when he fought Louis before and has the advantage of some twenty or more ring battles behind him.

Vince DiMaggio, brother of the famous Yankee slugger, Joe, joined the Cincinnati Reds yesterday. Vince was given a trial with the Boston Bees and sent to Kansas City for seasoning, where he hit forty-six home runs this year. He struck out in his initial appearance as a pinch-hitter yesterday, however. "Any one who can hit 46 home runs in the American Association, surely should help us," pointed out Manager Bill McKechnie. There will be no brother-against-brother act should the Reds and Yankees meet in baseball's classic, however. Vince does not qualify to play for the Reds in the 1939 world series.

SPORT SPICE — The Yankees gained a half a game in the American League and have 99 wins. . . . Fortunately for the Reds, who divided a twin bill with Boston, the Giants beat the Cardinals one game of two played and there's no change in the National League standing. . . . Dutch Leonard chalked up his nineteenth win of the season for the Nationals. . . . Up in Toronto the fans take their softball so seriously that the T. A. S. A. ordered a play-off today with only the two clubs concerned, the umpires and an official scorer allowed in the park.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking and ma was listening to her wrist watch not working, saying, Willyum do you believe there's really such a thing as love at first site?

Not among human beans, pop said. I believe the fishes and lower animals exert some such immediate lasting attraction on each other, but 2 human beans of contrary sex have got to know each other better before the temporary stage of infatuation broadens into the permanent state of true love, he said, and ma said, Well, I used to think so too.

I think so, pop said. Of course when I was an impressionable young man I admit I thought I had an acute attack of true love every time the candid camera of my eyes took a snapshot of a pretty face, but that was some years ago, high ho, he said, and ma said, What pretty face are you alluding to, not that impossible Estelle Daggers I hope and trust.

I was speaking in a very general way pop said. Of course all that nonsense was over the 4th time I met you, wich made it love at 4th site, wich is quite a record and I congradulate you on it my deer, he said, and ma said, Up until last night I would of said that love at first site was a figment of the poets, but last night I had proof positive.

Who is the villun, I'll kill him, pop said, and ma said, Dont be absurd, I mean that movie we saw with Ronnel Ronnell and Thelma Lavaleer. Just the way they looked at each other in that department store, with her behind the glove counter and him in his uniform, I mean just that first glance, it was the most convincing thing I ever saw, and I'm convinced, she said.

So am I, all I ask for is scientific proof, yee gods it's a womens world, pop said.

And he got back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

"Industry has realized that it has new responsibilities, and it is doing its best to assume them."—Alfred P. Sloan.

RUSSIA'S NAVY

"As reported from Leningrad, according to reliable information, Polish submarines are hiding in ports of the Baltic States and find there covert support on the part of certain Government personages," Tass said.

"According to information available, besides Polish submarines, submarines of other states are hiding in those ports."

(Havas News Agency, in a Moscow dispatch, quoted Tass as saying that Polish and British submarines are in Baltic ports with the connivance of officials of the Governments concerned.)

Aimed at Estonia

The announcement indicated strongly that Soviet "measures" are aimed especially at Estonia, one of the small Baltic states north of Poland and adjoining Russia.

With Red army units as deep as 110 miles within Poland's eastern border, Germany and Russia joined last night in radio communiques to declare the Russian troops "pursue no aim counter to the interests of Germany or the Soviet union or contradicting the spirit and the letter of the Non-Aggression Pact concluded by Germany and the U.S.S.R.

Establish Peace, Order

"On the contrary, the task of these troops is to re-establish in Poland the peace and order disrupted by the collapse of the Polish State and to assist the population of Poland in reconstructing conditions of their state existence."

The last phrase was taken by some sources as pointing toward creation of a small Polish buffer state.

Foreign military experts estimated the Soviet Union has at least 2,000,000 soldiers on her Western Front and that 500,000 to 1,000,000 are in action in Poland—all under the direction of 58-year-old Marshal Klementi Voroshiloff, War Commissar.

May Propose Armistice

Diplomatic quarters heard continued reports that an armistice may be proposed as soon as Germany and Russia settle Poland's fate.

The Soviet General Staff announced last night advances all along the 500-mile frontier, with the most advanced units at Volkocysk, 120 miles from the Russian border and about 80 miles north of Brest-Litovsk.

The General Staff communique closed with the statement that "Advance columns of the Red army are approaching Lwow and Wilno."

(Paris reports said Wilno, traditional Lithuanian capital which Poland seized in 1920, had been captured by Russians. Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, was reported still in Polish hands.)

CHAS. M. SCHWAB,

Schwab, who returned from Europe Aug. 31, had been in poor health since the death last January of his wife.

Funeral services, his brother said, probably will be held Thursday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Schwab's rise to wealth, like the rise of the elder John D. Rockefeller and Henry Ford, became an industrial legend.

The son of a wool factory mill hand, Schwab quit a $3-a-week job as a grocery clerk to take a laborer's job driving stakes in a steel plant at Braddock, Pa., owned by Carnegie Brothers and Co.

Studied the Business.

In the evening, the 18-year-old boy studied the steel business and gave piano lessons to steelworkers' children at 50 cents an hour. In three years, he was manager of the plant at $250 a month. At 21, he married Emma Eurania Dinkey, the daughter of the first steel works chemist in the United States.

Schwab soon became labor "trouble shooter" for Andrew Carnegie, the steelmaster. He was only 35 in 1897 when he became president of the Carnegie Steel Company and in three years raised its profits from $7,000,000 to $40,000,000.

The late J. Pierpont Morgan made him president of the newly-formed United States Steel Corporation in 1901, but two years later Schwab tore up a $1,000,000-a-year contract because he said he was tired of having "too many bosses".

Founded Bethlehem Steel Co.

Moved by his self-admitted mania to be the mainspring of any enterprise he embarked upon, Schwab put $15,000,000 of his money and his limitless energy into the founding of Bethlehem Steel.

With the aid of his protege, Eugene Grace, Schwab built the company into a steel empire valued in the hundreds of millions.

Schwab, a super salesman himself, sold $150,000,000 worth of war supplies to Great Britain and $75,000,000 worth to Russia in the first Great War. A business legend credits him during that time with spurning the world's largest bribe, a reported $100,000,000 offer by the German government to stop selling steel to the allies.

BRITAIN

"The full implication of these events is not yet apparent," said the Information Ministry's communique, "but His Majesty's Government take the opportunity of stating that nothing that has occurred can make any difference to the determination of His Majesty's Government, with the full support of the country, to fulfill their obligations to Poland and to prosecute the war with all energy until their objects have been achieved."

Comparable to the shock caused by news of Russia's Sunday invasion was yesterday's official disclosure that the Courageous, the oldest but one of the largest of Britain's seven aircraft carriers, had been torpedoed and sunk.

Survivors in England

The British Admiralty today followed up an early communique on the loss of the 23-year-old Courageous with a list of 438 survivors out of the ship's company of slightly more than 1,100— but emphasized that the list was not complete.

About 400 of the survivors were landed in England by a rescuing destroyer last night. They brought to shore vivid stories of the episode—the first sinking of a British warship in the war.

at intervals of about a second", one of the survivors related.

Spencer Tracy, Nancy Kelly and Richard Green in the romantic adventure story, Stanley and Livingstone, at the Belle Theatre.

"After that there were a few minor explosions and most of the crew jumped into the water. The order to abandon the ship came within five minutes and the Courageous foundered 30 minutes after the first explosion.

"The ship heeled so badly some lifeboats could not be used."

Seamen who had to leap into the water sang, and joked and cheered as they swam about waiting to be picked up by destroyers, the survivors said. Others supported themselves in the water with pieces of wood and some with rafts.

Besides those landed by the destroyer, other members of the Gouragcous's crew were reported taken aboad other vessels.

The Admiralty's communique did not give the position of the Courageous when she was sunk.

The survivors estimated about 800 were saved in all. Some of the rescue boats' were delayed in landing until afternoon.

One of the rescued men said that within five minutes after the ship was attacked he "saw pieces of the submarine blown sky high by the destroyers".

"The first torpedo penetrated the Courageous on the port side through the stokers' deck and exploded violently," he declared. A second torpedo passed beneath us. The Courageous sank in 35 minutes. Most of us either jumped into the sea from the decks, or slipped down the side of the heavily listing ship into the water.

"Some who were strong swimmers kept afloat without aid, while others clung to rafts, or piece of wood. It was not very rough, and we were able to get some boats away.

"The Destroyers raced around throwing lifeboats overboard. I was in the water over two hours."

Others said most of the fatalities must have been trapped between decks

The first list of survivors included Commander E. Mc. C. Abel-Smith, former equerry to the King, the ship's chaplain, the commanding engineer and various officers. Commander C. W. G. M. Woodhouse also was listed but there was no immediate mention of Capt. W. T. Makeig-Jones who had been reported last seen on the bridge ordering his men to abandon ship.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, of Ontario, and Mayor Morrison, of Hamilton, are pictured here as they left St. Andrew's church, Hamilton, after attending the funeral service for 10-year-old Margaret Hayworth, who died of injuries received when the Athenia was sent to the bottom by a German submarine.

TEN-YEAR-OLD VICTIM OF GERMAN SUBMARINE BURIED AT HAMILTON, ONT.

Church and state dignitaries mingled with hundreds of citizens to pay tribute to 10-year-old Margaret Hayworth, of Hamilton, Ont., who succumbed to injuries received when the Athenia was torpedoed by a German submarine with more than 1,400 persons aboard. This scene was made as the body of the small victim was carried to its final resting place in Woodlawn cemetery.

The Hunch

By Phyllis M. Gallagher

For three hours now Marjorie's roadster had been parked around the corner from Engine House No. 20, not close enough to see the men in the shadows of ponderous engines but close enough to hear the bell announcing fires.

Donald had said: "Listen honey! I've been looking for a job ever since I graduated two years ago. Who knows! when this depression is going to end? I'm fed up with being the loafing son of rich parents. This is a job; I'm going to take it; be proud of it!'

"But Don. Father offered......!"

His sensitive, stubborn mouth had hardened. He wouldn't, he had informed her, spend his life relying on her father, pretending that his position as law clerk paid the freight.

"Donald! Must we wait forever?" Tears had sprung to her eyes. They had waited so long, already.

"Marjorie, your father patronizes me!" Don had once said.

It wasn't true! Her father, sizing him up, had seemed cold and impenetrable behind the set lines of his face. But he wanted Don in his office because he believed in his ability.

Suddenly the hush of the lethargic day was broken by a clamor of bells. The long red engines swinging from No. 20 into the boulevard, sirens clearing their path, were not difficult to follow. When they turned into Lafayette square, Marjorie observed a group of people at the curb waving frantically. From their excited gesticulations, she surmised that the alarm was in the very heart of the city's largest public park.

Donald, his expression studiedly indifferent, for he had seen Marjorie slide from her roadster, was hauling the massive hose from the engine, several blue-coated firemen helping. The crowd was thickening, squinting their eyes against the sun, inquiring: "Where's the fire? A false alarm?"

Marjorie dug her hands deep in the pockets of her tweed swagger coat as Donald's glance swept over her ignoringly. But his face, deepening to the crimson paint-job of the engines snorting at the curb, betrayed him. She knew that he was suffering beneath her tongue-in-the-cheek attitude. For, indeed, that was how she felt. She was waiting for Don to do his stuff, as he had phrased it; to perform some of the feats that had inspired him, the night before, to say: "Why, Marjorie! Firemen are heroes, actually!"

She had bristled with anger under his snug content. "Don! I'm not belittling the fire department! I am criticizing you! You're taking that job from some man who really needs it!"

"Who needs a job worse than I!"

"But you have a chance in dad's office, to follow your own profession. You'd be hot if a fireman took a law partnership you wanted!"

Donald was treading the hose through the thick shrubbery of the park now, other firemen following close behind. When they reached the scene of the trouble, they all stood back, startled, mouths agape. A crowd had gathered around a man who was obviously too terrorized to scream, his eyes dilated above a luxuriously bearded face, his hands clutching wildly at the air. "A lunatic!' some one screamed.

Then a youth rushed to Donald and began excitedly. "That guy was asleep on the bench, mister, 'n' a swarm of bees got in his beard! Give him the works!"

With that the crowd fell back and Donald, manning the hose, aimed at the victim. But Donald wasn't a fireman, really, and the powerful stream of water sent the man strawling into a blossoming bed of tulips. Donald, excited, accidentally increased the flow and the hose, like an alive reptile, writhed out of his hands. The crowd scrambled futilely for safety behind trees, water streaming after them, soaking them to their skins; and Marjorie, taking a horrified step to Donald's assistance, was drenched with the rest.

"Splendid!" she said, brightly. "It's a good thing it was only bees in his beard!"

She came close, slight against his sturdiness, and tiny, for her dripping thatch scarcely reached his shoulder.

"God! What an ass I made of myself!"

"Like a fireman trying a case at court!" she agreed lightly. Then, "Oh, Don!" and there was a sob in her voice. "If you persist in this, I ....I won't wait!"

So swiftly that it seemed all in one motion, he crushed her hands in his own and leaned his dark face to hers. "You win!" he said, "Tell your father! It's not a permanent arrangement, though. When I can get something else...."

And presently only Marjorie and the bearded man remained.

"Wasn't this worth more to you than twenty bucks, Miss Warfield?" the man began. "I mean, I only agreed on the bees and calling out the fire department...."

Marjorie offered the old trouper her hand and another bill. He squeezed both so avariciously that the little instrument in his palm went off, mechanically, sounding very like a drove of bees in a luxurious beard! After all, a jobless actor, he had earned the money for this act, plenty!

Then he said, "How did you know, Miss Warfield, that things would pan out the way they did?"

"I didn't," she said. "I just had a hunch!"

Top Grade Eggs Decline One Cent

Toronto, Sept. 19.—Dull trading as a result of declining consumer demand because of recent advances depressed prices on top grade eggs at Toronto yesterday. Losses ranged to 1c per dozen. Best inquiry was reported in Grade B and C.

Although demand leaned toward the quiet side, sufficient trading appeared on the butter market to keep continued small arrivals of fresh Ontario receipts moving at steady prices. Ontario No. 1 creamery solids to the wholesale trade remained at 27c per pound. It was reported, however, that an odd sale of this product went through at 27¼c, but business at this figure was not enough to set a market.

Seven Year Term On Charges of Theft And Kidnapping

Cayuga, Ont., Sept. 19—(CP) — Seven years in penitentiary was the sentence given today to James R. Johnston, 22, of Nelsonville, Ohio, when he appeared with Harry Gardiner, 19, of Toronto, on a charge of auto theft and kidnapping a woman.

Gardiner was sentenced to 18 months definite and six months indefinite at the Ontario Reformatory.

Johnston was arrested near Hamilton Aug. 20 by a posse of police and citizens. The search was organized after a young married woman of Dunnville, whose name was not given, staggered to a district farmhouse the night previous and said she had been in an automobile with Johnston and Gardiner.

They were alleged to have kidnapped her at Dunnville. The automobile, stolen from H. E. Reece of Cayuga, crashed into a ditch at the blind end of a Dunnville street.

Gardiner suffered serious injuries in the accident and was found at a house to which he was taken for medical attention.

RAISE FOODSTUFFS ON VACANT LAND

New Legislation Will Permit Use of Land for Production

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Legislation has been prepared which when officially approved, will permit any person in Ontario to apply to the local Municipal Council for permission to raise crops of foodstuffs on vacant land, Hon. Eric Cross, Provincial Minister of Welfare, said today.

The legislation, up for ratification at the special session of legislature this week, is part of a plan to use Ontario's idle land and manpower for the production of essential foods to meet the war-time emergency.

E. A. Horton, Director of Unemployment Relief who will act as administrator of the new Act, already has conferred with relief administrators of most of the larger centres of the province and has enlisted their support.

Mr. Cross said he expected work on the land would start this Autumn. Compensation would be made by the local council in the event of the land being used for building before hte crops are harvested.

Required to Take Plots

Families on relief will be required to take plots and all produce grown will be retained by the families for their own use. The value will not be deducted from the food allowance.

"Passage of the measure, which is known as the Vacant Land Cultivation Amendment Act, will give municipalities authority to require reliefees to take up garden plots and will also permit ordinary householders to produce food for their own use," Mr. Cross said.

"In this way we feel that we can offset to a tremendous extent, the probable increase in the price of other foodstuffs so that relief scales will not be thrown out of line," said Mr. Cross. "In the case of relief recipients it is expected that the plan will offset to a large extent the loss of purchasing power due to the increased price of many commodities, and will utilize to the fullest possible extent the employability of every recipient over the age of 16 years.

Success of Effort

"We have been able to profit by the experience of Hamilton, where a similar plan has been carried out over a period of years with evident success. Toronto, too, has had a successful community garden scheme and the same is true of Windsor. As an indication of what can be accomplished, the Hamilton scheme this year embraced 2,500 plots and the city had a total expenditure of $7,600 for fertilizer, seed, etc. Officials there estimate that the total value of the crop produced amounted to $87,500."

Under the proposal, terms of which were approved at Ottawa last week, the Dominion and provincial governments will share in the cost of the extent of 40 per cent each, with the municipalities bearing the remaining 20 per cent. The Act, as far as reliefees are concerned, will be administered by the Director of Unemployment Relief.

WEST WAR LINE

Diplomatic Campaign

Meanwhile, belief was expressed that Berlin would aim a diplomatic campaign at such neutral countries as Belgium, the Netherlands, Rumania, and the Balkan Nations.

There was a feeling, too, that Germany, which the French say is not in a position to afford a long war, would strike hard in the west—perhaps even through neutral territory, according to some observers.

The Press continued to attack what it termed Soviet "brutality and treason to peace."

One Communist deputy was reported to have quit the party, and the French general confederation of labor, which a few years ago amalgamated with communist trade unions, called on all leaders and workers to sever any ties with Moscow.

POLES FIGHTING DESPERATE BATTLE

2,000 or 3,000 Men Hold Heights West of Gdynia Known as Oblosz

By LOUIS LOCHNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gdynia, Poland, Sept. 19—(AP) —Some 2,000 or 3,000 Polish troops were desperately waging a fight against great odds today on the heights west of Gdynia known as Oblosz and in the village of Ochshoeft.

Eye-witnesses watched the battle from a distance of two miles, on the eastern height above Gdynia known as Steinberg.

By the time Fuehrer Hitler had arrived at Zoppot, Danzig beach resort, shortly after 2 p.m. (9 a.m. EDT) this fight seemed at its height, with German land, sea and air forces pounding the Polish positions.

Standing on Steinberg height some 60 correspondents saw the Germans advance in three waves on Oblosz Height. Each time during our one hour's stay they won some 10 yards more of hotly contested ground. Each attack was preceded by scouting planes dropping light signals to guide the artillery.

They were supported by the cruiser Schleswig Holstein shooting from Danzig Harbor 10 1-2 miles away and later by bombers unloading their deadly cargo upon the Poles.

The Polish soldiers seemed to have no anti-aircraft guns, for the planes flew very low and unmolested. Their artillery fire seemed exact, but not so long ranged as the Germans. Occasional fire enveloping buildings held by German troops and thick smoke over the heights held by the Poles indicated the devastation wrought by both sides.

Later we descended into Gdynia, Poland's modern port. Broken windows, holes in the houses, and occasional smashed walls showed that here, too, the war had raged.

Most stores were still closed and business life was stagnant. The occupying army lost no time in renaming the principal thoroughfare of the city "Adolf Hitler Strasse."

Queen Mary Issues Message to All Women in Service

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—Queen Mary last night issued a message from Marlborough House expressing admiration for the "wonderful spirit" with which British women are meeting wartime emergencies and difficulties.

Her message said:

"I wish to express my admiration at the way my countrywomen have come forward in thousands to give help in the present emergency. The Queen, my dear daughter-in-law, has told me of the wonderful spirit of enterprise and courage shown on all sides, of which she has found ample proof in her visits to various centres.

"I wish to send a special greeting to all nurses, more particularly those belonging to services of which I am President—Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service and the Territorial Army Nursing Service.

"I know that they will carry out their arduous duties in the splendid tradition of those services and I would like them to know that they have my good wishes wherever they may be.

"At the same time my daughter, the Princess Royal, asks me to join with her in sending greetings to all members of the Princess Mary's Royal Air Force Nursing Service.

"I am mindful, also, of the invaluable work of the Queen's nurses, who are exceptionally busy now in the reception areas. It is my constant prayer that God's blessing may be on the merciful work of all nurses throughout the empire."

FUEHRER CHARGES

mobilization by Poland."

"For years I have been extremely patient," he said.

For years, Hitler asserted, he begged to change the state of affairs, but he knew "an end must come".

At one time peace again seemed possible, he said, when Premier Mussolini made proposals to France, but Britain intervened, he said. Amid thunderous shouts he continued:

"England sent an ultimatum to Germany, but the day is past when anyone can send an ultimatum to the Reich."

Says Poland Chose War.

In the last six years, Hitler said, he had suffered much from Poland, but he had not sent an ultimatum.

"Poland chose war, and the statesmen of the west told her that Germany was poorly equipped and that moreover there was social unrest," Hitler said.

"Eighteen days have passed and the fact is that they were beaten by a race of men.

"They have been beaten and at this moment countless columns of Poles are retreating."

Hitler cited figures to back up his assertions that thousands of prisoners had been taken.

"The statesmen have been shown what the German army can do and now they ought to have the proper point of view.

"The German troops have done their duty on the land as well as in the air.

Germany always had been invincible, he said, and the Germans had shown again their invincibility in this war with their unsurpassed weapons, their motorized units and their great air force.

"We will give bomb against bomb, not only one but 500 bombs."

Says Poles Responsible.

It must be admitted, he said, that the Poles were responsible for many atrocities.

"Women were massacred, men were massacred, and their eyes were stabbed out and they were killed when they lay wounded."

He said he had given orders to the air force to conduct their warfare humanely, but they had been ambushed.

"Here also will my patience come to an end," he said.

Russia entered Poland only to protect her minorities, Hitler said. The attempted agreement between Russia and Great Britain had failed, he continued, but Germany and Russia had come to an agreement.

"But I wish to make one explanation," he said. "Russia will remain what it is, and Germany will remain what it is.

"We have made the greatest and best arrangement between ourselves."

British statesmen will be glad to learn now of his intentions, he said.

Extremely Limited.

Germany had talked matters over with Russia and the German objectives "are extremely limited".

"The nightmare of the British statesmen should now be dismissed," he said, referring to what he described as their charges that he aimed at world conquest.

'Our interests are very limited, but we shall protect them against any man, and that we will not be allowed to let ourselves be toyed with in this respect, I think the past 18 days have shown.

Germany was described as wanting to "achieve a lasting peace".

"We have no war intentions against either England or France," he asserted.

Offers Well Known.

He tried to arrange and have friendly relations with Italy, he said, and succeeded, and tried to do the same thing with France.

"My offers to England are known. They were refused, and England thinks she must have war with Germany. I can only reply this: Poland will never arise as it was arranged in the Treaty of Versailles."

"Now the real causes of the war must be told to everybody. First it was Poland. Then it was the German regime and even I had the honor of being named."

Any German regime approved by Churchill, Eden, Duff Cooper and others would be intolerable to the German people, Hitler shouted.

Proud To Be Attacked.

"I am proud to be attacked by them. If they think they can alienate the German people from me they are wrong and stupid.

"I have not educated the German people in vain for the last ten years."

The National Socialist Party has assumed the burden of carrying on the battle and it cannot be hurt by "foolish propaganda".

"If they want to learn something about propaganda they should come to us to be taught," he said.

At this point Hitler had been speaking an hour.

Since the war is going to last "three years", Hitler said, he could only express sympathy for French soldiers.

If it should last that long the word "surrender" would not be there, he continued. "Nor at the end of the sixth or the seventh year.

"The generation of today is not the generation of Bethmann-Hollweg."

If there are any people who are going to be split up, it won't be the German people, he said.

"We will not be misled by the propaganda of others."

"We will fight as our adversaries will.

Hints at Powerful Sea Force.

"One country claims to have a sea force which cannot be attacked, but before long we also shall have a sea force which cannot be attacked."

In principle, he added, Germany had carried through its determination not to attack women and children, but there were cases when the wounding and killing of non-combatants could not be avoided. For the future, he promised Germany would be humane in its conduct of the war.

"We will act as others act towards us. England's objective is not only the German regime but also the German men and women and children.

"It has been said that Germany should be destroyed, and the first treaty of Versailles was enacted for that purpose. Possibly a second treaty would attempt the same thing.

"Will Show We Are Strong"

"Come what may, we are no better than our forebears and we will make the same sacrifices. We will carry our battle on and show we are strong. Danzig's sons fought in the Great War and had to make sacrifices after that war. Much has been changed in the German Reich itself. Once it was a state of caste. Now it is a state of people."

The ideas which govern the German state had existed long before, Hitler said.

"I am deeply impressed that I can talk to you from this city of Danzig. I had once promised to myself that I should never again come to Danzig and then I decided to come as your liberator and this day has arrived.

"Eternal Community"

"Danzig people, we now accept you into ou reternal community which you shall never leave again."

Germany, he said, had made "the absolute resolve' 'never to let Danzig go again.

"Danzig was German, stayed German and will now for ever remain German."

Generations, he said, may come and go and always remember the past sad twenty years "of this city".

"This German state, the confederation of all the German tribes will for ever fight together," he yelled.

The crowd responded with "Sieg Heil"!

A band broke into music. Hitler had spoken for one hour and fifteen minutes.

British Reconnaissance Plane Successful in Brush With Enemy

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—A Royal Air Force reconnaissance plane with a slightly wobbly crew had a sucessful brush with a trio of German aircraft over the North Sea Sunday, the Ministry of Information reports.

The incident happened this way: A gunner, tinkering with his equipment while over the North Sea at a four-mile altitude, removed his oxygen apparatus. The rarified air made him unconscious. The navigator, attempting to restore the gunner's lifeline, removed his own oxygen-breathing apparatus and also became unconscious.

As the two began to regain consciousness the enemy aircraft were sighted. They started weakly to handle their guns but ended up vigorously as the pilot out-manoeuvred his opponents. Only one of the German planes was able to bring its guns to bear on the Royal Air Force machine.

The British plane, which had completed its routine task of observation before the encounter, escaped into the clouds and delivered its patrol report to the home base.

In a second engagement over the North Sea, a Royal Air Force machine attacked a German flying boat and chased it away, then continued its reconnaissance. The information Ministry report said that "Here again, it is gratifying to know that the Royal Air Force machine is greatly superior in performance to the German."

Supervise Municipal Outlay

"Another measure will provide for closer supervision of municipal expenditures.

"Due to the enlistment of men, various acts will require amendment, such as provision for the transfer of trusteeships; protection of interests in mining claims; and the vesting in certain military officers of power to take affidavits which will be admissible in court. Amendments to the Corporations Tax Act and the Income Tax Act, in relation to patriotic gifts, will also be submitted.

"As you are aware, the administration of the Succession Duty Act, in certain details, has recently been impaired by the courts. The necessity for the Act to function as it was intended, particularly in view of the financial strain to which the province will be subjected under war conditions, is now greater than ever, and the bill which will be presented to you is intended to remove all doubt as to the validity, scope and effect of the Act, and establish once and for all the absolute right of the Treasury Department to investigate where fraud is suspected.

Successful War Effort

"I am confident that these and other measures designed to allow Ontario to play the most effective possible role in the successful prosecution of the war will receive your earnest consideration. In this connection, I would commend most heartily the instant co-operation and assistance rendered by the Honorable Leader of the Opposition to the Government, in the common cause in which we are now all engaged.

"In conclusion, I am happy to inform you that although additional expenditures have already been incurred owing to the war, the strictest economy is being observed in all departments and no further financial provision is required at the present time for carrying on the affairs of the province."

Why The Weather?

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Telescopes and the weather! For the best seeing, astronomers must watch the weather and weather forecasts as much as sailors and airplane pilots. Seeing with a telescope is affected by atmospheric clearness, convection and temperature. It is obvious why clearness of the air is necessary. Temperature causes convection of the air, and the line of sight may go through layers of air of such different densities as to cause the object sighted to waver and jump. Temperature also affects the large lens or mirror of a telescope, because unless all of it is at the same temperature, it will warp and the rays of light will not come to a sharp when the yhave throughout the same temperatuer as the air.

Red Cross President Pleased With the Response to Appeal

I. G. Hefkey States Co-operation from All Organizations and Individuals Has Been Wonderful

LOCAL OFFICE BUSY

Response to the appeal of the Red Cross from service clubs, churches, fraternal and other organizations of the city and district has been nothing short of wonderful, I. G. Hefkey, chairman of the local branch of the society stated this morning.

"There is a fine spirit of co-operation among all organizations and individuals with whom we have come in contact,' he said. "Outlying towns, villages and communities are rapidly falling in line and within a short time organization will be complete. To those communities who have not as yet organized, we would respectfully suggest that they organise within themselves so as to avoid any misunderstandings. Mrs. F. S. Lazier and myself will be glad to attend any meetings which may be held and assist in not only outlining the system and activities of the society, but in organization itself."

The distributing centre of the society above the Shaw Men's Store on Front Street is a hive of activity, as women, representatives of clubs, and other individuals go there to secure supplies of wool and other necessary articles. Bridge clubs and other private organizations which intend purchasing supplies can leave donations at the centre, if they wish, and secure their supply there, Mr. Hefkey pointed out.

Trenton residents showed marked enthusiasm last night when a crowded town hall, representative of a cross section of all walks of life, clergy, business, professional and shop and factory and office workers signified their intention of lending full co-operation to the work, Mr. Hefkey stated.

A committee of twenty-five people was appointed to complete organization of that branch of the Red Cross next week. Brief addresses outlining the system and procedure of the society were given by Mr. Hefkey and Mrs. Lazier.

LOCAL MEN GROW SWEET POTATOES WITH SUCCESS

There need be no lack of good old southern dinners of fried chicken and sweet potatoes in Belleville if garden-owners of the city have the same success in raising the tasty vegetable, that Messrs. W. E. Burrowes and George Wishart, Dufferin Avenue residents had this year.

Planted early in May in the light warm sandy soil of the respective gardens the "yams" as they are known in their native habitats in the West Indies, have produced a harvest far beyond the expectations of their owners.

Sufficient of the tasty vegetables were dug from one hill in the Burrowes' garden to provide a meal for a family of six, while the exceptional crop of Mr. Wishart yielded sufficient to give a family of three, three meals. The largest of the potatoes measure approximately eight inches in length.

Mr. Burrowes secured his seed from a Front Street grocery store after efforts to secure them from government sources failed.

"A novel feature of the potato", he said, "is the fact that seed must be sprouted before being planted. After growth, strong vinelike shoots appear above ground which creep from six to eight feet overland before taking root again. Here it is that potatoes are found as well as at the root proper. They appear at a depth of twelve inches below the surface."

Next year, the potato-growers are going to plant their favorite vegetables on a larger scale and will endeavour to raise the native West Indian yam which is of a shade pinker than that of the southern United States variety.

SHOPPING TOUR ADDED FEATURE

Residents Given Chance to Prove Powers of Observation at Kiwanis Carnival

Just what is this "Shopping Tour?" people have been asking. They refer, of course, to that high spot of entertainment which the Kiwanis Club has provided during the holding of their Street Karnival on Wednesday and Thursday, September 20th. and 21st., this week.

It could be termed a Treasure Hunt for to those who are the most successful go monetary prizes to the value of $20.00. The first prize will be $10.00; second prize $5.00; third prize $3.00 and the fourth prize $2.00.

The 'Tour' cannot be conducted without the co-operation of the business men and they have responded to the idea in fine style. The contest, for contest it is, is open to all the merchants of Front Street between Bridge Street and Victoria Avenue. Each merchant is to have an error appearing in his window displays. For instance, a window card may have a word spelled in error, a piece of merchandise may be turned upside down or in some incorrect position or some article may be left in error such as a brush by the window trimmer.

Open to Everyone

The contest is open to everyone and will commence at 6.30 p.m. sharp on Wednesday, September 20th and terminate at 11 p.m. on the same evening. When you have completed your list, sign your name, address, telephone number and time completed and hand it into the Kiwanis Information Booth which will be located in the middle of the Karnival. The nearest correct number on errors reported and their locations, neatness on specific paper and time required to complete contest will be considered by the judges.

So here is your chance to prove your powers of observation as well as enabling you to spend an enjoyable hour window shopping. It might be you who will top the list. For further information consult any member of the Kiwanis or ask for yellow pamphlet issued by the Kiwanis containing a complete list of instructions.

Remember the days—Wednesday and Thursday, September 20th. and 21st.

Help the Kiwanis help others. You can do this by means of your personal attendance. And you can help their cause still further by bringing those who are closest and dearest to you to join in the fun.

Y'S MEN'S CLUB OPENS FALL TERM

Members Hear Address on Education by H. B. Fetterly

Following a summer of inactivity the Belleville Y's Men's Club returned to service with a 'prospective members' meeting at the Y.M.C.A. last evening at which time Mr. H. B. Fetterly was the principal speaker.

President Harold Vaughan outlined the proposed activities of the club for the coming semester, which principally consisted of subsidies for the Y.M.C.A. During the evening the musical entertainment was provided by Alec Gordon, who is in charge of music at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Mr. Fetterly spoke to the Y'smen on the question of "Canadian Educational Sy-tem", his talk being a sequel to one afforded the club last June, when the speaker spoke on the "Education in Germany". The speaker compared the two systems, whereas the German system teaches war in its Youth Movement, while the Canadian system reaches out for higher and broader attainments in the teachings of its youth, Mr. Fetterly contended, as he outlined the various types of Canadian learning from ocean to ocean throughout the various provinces.

3 Merchant Vessels Successfully Elude Submarine Attack

Lord Minto and Arlita, British Trawlers, Sunk Somewhere in Atlantic but Crews Rescued by Third Trawler

WAR ON U-BOATS

Possible Trawlers Struck Mines According to Announcement from Admiralty Department

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—An official announcement today said two British trawlers had been sunk, but that three other British merchant vessels had successfully eluded submarine attacks.

The Ministry of Information said the trawlers Lord Minto and Arlita had been sunk and their crews rescued by a third trawler.

The announcement added:

"Several British merchant vessels, including the Rothesay Castle, the Baharistand and the Baron Lovat have been attacked but successfully eluded the U-boat."

The report did not specify where the trawlers were sunk and did not say whether they had been torpedoed or whether they had encountered mines.

QUEEN WILHELMINA GRATEFUL FOR PEACE, REGRETS WAR

The Hague, Sept. 19—(AP)—Queen Wilhelmina, in a speech from the throne opening parliament today, expressed her gratefulness that the Netherlands remained at peace and the hope that war between other nations could be ended by negotiation.

Voicing profound pity for the victims of war, the Queen said: "I rejoice that our friendly relations with all powers continue unimpaired."

PLASTIC RESPIRATOR IS INVENTED

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—An artificial respirator made of plastic material —it fits on the patients instead of the patient fitting into it—is being successfully used here in the case of six-year-old Breen Hogan, stricken with infantile paralysis. The aparatus was designed by Dr. James L. Wilson, Detroit, and appears to be a great improvement on the previously-used respirators made of rigid material.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

"It was your fault. You must not say—kind things like that—to me if you expect me to drive properly" he said.

"Kind things?" she echoed.

"Yes—you said that it would be all right if I was there."

She looked at him in bewilderment, the soft color slowly spreading from chin to brow, and then she turned her head away wihtout answering.

Presently, he said in a matter-of-fact voice, " "You were right about the mist. It's getting quite thick." He glanced at a signpost they were passing. "Dover still forty-five miles. It's some time since Miss Thornley and I met."

"She will be surprised when she sees who brought me," Elizabeth answered. She remembered that her aunt had said she had always liked Kim, though she did not know why he and Penelope had parted.

"I should like to show you Paris" Lawless said presently, "to take you to all the places worth seeing."

"I should like it, too," she answered. "I don't suppose I shall see very much as it is, if Penelope is so ill."

There was the slightest pause before Lawless answered formally:

"I hope you will find that she is better." Then sharply, "Hullo — that's a nasty patch!"

They had turned a bend and run straight into a swirling bank of grey fog which made it necessary to slow down.

"Supposing it's like this all the way!" Elizabeth said.

"It won't be," he assured her. "It's just coming up over the fields. We shall be out of it presently." But, though he spoke cheerfully, he looked a little apprehensive.

INSTALMENT 12

"I'm afraid of fog." Elizabeth said abruptly. "It shuts you in so—like a blanket. It makes me feel stifled."

"You're afraid of so many things" Lawless said, after a pause.

"What things?" she asked resentfully.

"Of life," he answered. "You insist upon looking at it through a powerful magnifying-glass so that everything seems enormous and terrifying and that makes you afraid. You let your imagination run riot among giants and all the time they're really not such bad fellows," he added humorously.

It seemed a long time before she asked, "Have you a father and mother?"

"No, my father died when I was a small boy, and my mother three years ago."

"And were you very fond of her?" Elizabeth asked sympathetically.

Lawless hesitated.

"Perhaps you will be shocked when I say—not very!" he said at last. "She was not very fond of me either. She never wanted children. She was a very young-looking woman, young in her mind, too. Like Peter Pan, she never grew up properly. She was always trying to extract the last ounce of enjoyment out of life, always running about in search of fresh amusement." There was a note of pity in his voice. "She sent me to boarding-school when I was seven and, as she was generally away from home during holiday-time, I saw very little of her. She died—three years ago. I think she hated dying," he added soberly.

Elizabeth raised her eyes quickly. "Poor soul," she said. "Perhaps she was happy and that's why she hated it."

Lawless asked with a touch of irritation. "Is it so rare a thing to find people who are happy?"

"Yes, I think it is," she said hesitatingly. "I think when you get to know people really well, you find most of them sad and disappointed."

"Elizabeth," he broke in ruthlessly, "I should like to sake you."

She laughed then.

"I thought there was to be peace in our camp," she reminded him, and he answered: "I hope you will still feel that you can say so when you come back from Paris."

"I shan't be any different," she said confidently, and he replied: "You can't be sure of that—Paris does queer things to some people."

Elizabeth thought, "And now he's thinking of Penelope," and her heart ached.

They were moving very slowly and, presently, when Lawless let down the window to peer out, the grey mist swirled into the car like a veil floating from a woman's head. Elizabeth shivered.

"This is a nuisance," he said calmly. "Still, we've got plenty of time. Look out for a sign-post, will you, Elizabeth?"

"We passed one just now," she told him. "I think it said Dover forty miles."

Unconsciously she moved a little near to him as she added: "I've never been in a fog like this before. Not in a car."

"Haven't you? I have, once, when I was coming down from Scotland with—"

He stopped abruptly, but her quick mind supplied the name he would not speak—Penelope.

"We came through Yorkshire," he went on, "thinking to get a good view of the moors—it was early October—but there was a worse fog than this and it was impossible to find the road."

"What did you do?" she asked very quietly.

"We were fortunate enough to come across a farmhouse, and we had to stay the night." There was a touch of ironic reminiscence in his voice which Elizabeth was quick to hear, before he added laughingly: "I remember that my bedroom was full of ants—thousands of them....Confound this fog!"

A man leading a horse suddenly loomed up before them, and Lawless stopped to call to him.

"Is it like this all the way?"

The man took a pipe from his mouth before he answered: "I've only come a mile."

"Helpful fellow," Lawless said dryly, and he drove on, asking presently: "When you return, will you go to the Selbys' place?"

"I don't know. I suppose it all depends."

"Will you let me know when you return?"

"I don't know where you live," she said rather formally. "There was no address on the card you gave me, that day in the woods."

He laughed.

"The day you said you hoped the primroses would not mind being taken to London. It seems a long time ago, Elizabeth. Will you let me know if I tell you where I can be found?" he went on. "I have a telephone."

"But I couldn't ring you up just to say I'm back," she protested. "Supposing you were out?"

"If I am out, you can leave a message, which I shall be very happy to receive."

They drove some way in silence —silence all the more profound because of the greyness which seemed to shut them in on every side.

"I believe I've missed the road", Lawless said at last. "I must get out and see where we are."

Elizabeth watched him disappear into the fog, wondering why it was that every important thing he had said since they left High Chimneys had made her heart shake. She tried to keep the thought of Penelope before her, tried to remember that she too had loved this man.

She—too?

Elizabeth bit her lip and closed her eyes, speaking her sister's name aloud. "Penelope!" That was how, when she was a small child, her mother had taught her to memorize the things she was apt to forget.

"Say it over to yourself again and again, darling, till it is so firmly fixed in your mind that you will always remember."

And something warned her that just now she must forget Penelope, who was alone in Paris—and ill.

Lawless came back and took his seat beside her.

"I think we're all right," he said, "but it's difficult to be sure. We may come across a cottage or someone who can tell us if we are in the right direction. I thought I saw another signpost just now but it proved to be only a board proclaiming to the world that somebody's bread was better than somebody else's." He turned on the dash-board light to look at the time. "Only nine. We may do it yet." He glanced down at her. "I'm terribly sorry this has happened," he said.

Elizabeth laughed. "As if it's your fault there's a fog!"

She wondered whether he and Penelope had minded about it that time on the moors, when it had been impossible for them to get home.

And then she seemed to hear her sister's scornful voice "Don't ever fall in love! It won't last, if you do; and you'll only be hurt.' She tried to visualize Penelope sitting here where she was sitting —with the same man beside her, only perhaps he had held Penelop's hand....

"Have you had this car a long time?" she asked presently. Somehow it seemed tremendously important to know.

"A few months—I forget the exact time," Lawless answered. "Why?"

"I only wondered," Elizabeth said; "it's a nice car."

"I know why you asked," he said grimly. "You were wondering whether Penelope ever drove with me, as you are driving now; isn't that it?"

No use to deny it, she knew.

Lawless laughed. "You're a merciless critic, Elizabeth. I should not be so ready to condemn you if you had made a similar mistake."

"I was not condemning you," Elizabeth said quietly, though her heart was beating fast. "It is nothing to me who rides in your car or —what mistakes you make," she went on haughtily, "Besides, it was Penelope who broke her engagement to you."

"And is that a sufficient reason for you to distrust me?" he asked: "Because your sister jilted me?" His voice was sarcastic.

"I hate you when you talk like that," Elizabeth said sharply.

"Only when I talk like that?" he asked; and as she did not answer, he said more quietly: "The fog seems to be clearing. You will soon be rid of me."

For a time he was able to increase speed, only to slow down once more as again the fog thickened.

"We shan't catch the boat, shall we?" Elizabeth said anxiously.

"I am afraid that you will not", he answered. "I had no intention of catching it."

He spoke so harshly that the unwilling tears rushed to her eyes though her voice was steady enough when she said:

"Aunt Thornley will be anxious about us."

Once again he corrected her.

"Anxious about you, but if it is any consolation, the boat will not leave if the fog is as bad as this at Dover."

INSTALMENT 13

A sudden yellow gleam of blurred light split the greyness of the world and Lawless stopped the car.

"It's a house of some sort. I'll ask if they can help us."

He was gone a long time, and Elizabeth began to feel apprehensive. The fog had made everything so still and silent—and again the feeling she had known when her mother died, of blindness and of being alone in a dark room, stole over her heart.

Loneliness—surely the most terrible of all things.

She had experienced it so many times during her short life that she dreaded it inexplicably; impulsively she had moved to open the door to go in search of Lawless, when she heard his returning steps along the road.

"The people were very decent," he said. "They let me ring up the A. A. and ask about the roads. Apparently this fog is pretty general and much thicker on the coast, so it is extremely unlikely the boat will leave tonight. Anyway, I am afraid we shall not be there in time. I rang the Selbys, too, and explained the fix we are in. The question is would you prefer to take a chance and go on? Or shall we try to find some place where we can stay? There is a village inn of sorts a few yards farther on."

"I think I would rather go on if you don't mind," Elizabeth said quickly.

"Very well. Have you got another coat with you? If so, you had better put it on or you may take cold. I think you will probably be more comfortable in the back seat. You might get some sleep. There's a rug and a cushion."

"I'd rather stay where I am, if you don't mind."

"Very well. Here's the rug."

He laid it on her knees.

"Will you have a cigarette?"

"Thank you."

In the flare of the match he saw the pale oval of her face, the lovely eyes which so determinedly avoided meeting his, and the sensitive lips which trembled a little as she leaned towards him.

"Don't quarrel with me, Elizabeth!" he said abruptly as he threw the match away. "You may never come back from Paris or, if you do, I may not be here."

"Are your going away?" she asked quickly, and she heard him laugh as he walked to the other door of the car.

"No, I'm not going away," he said, "but life plays funny tricks with people sometimes. Generally when they are least expecting it. Shall we go on?"

"Please."

It was a long time, during which she travelled an even longer way in her troubled thoughts, before she spoke his name diffidently.

"Mr. Lawless, I'm sorry. I'm very grateful to you—really."

"Grateful? For this depressing ride through the fog?"

She had leaned a little towards him in her earnestness, but now she drew away again.

"You're laughing at me," she said painfully.

"Laughing!" Lawless answered ironically. "If a man of my size was permitted the luxury of tears, I should be shedding them now."

"You're still laughing at me," she said again.

"No, at myself," he contradicted her. "Perhaps you haven't yet discovered what an inestimable gift it is to be able to laugh at oneself—at the mistakes one makes—at the unkind twists of fate which allow one only to find reality when it has gone far beyond one's reach."

"I don't know what you mean," Elizabeth said, and he answered.

"Shall I tell you?" and then, as she kept silent, he went on: "Yes, I will just in case we never meet again. I mean that I love you, Elizabeth. I'm not 'in love' with you, as I have been with half a dozen other girls at one time and another. I loved you when we first met and you were stealing my primroses—you stole my heart as well! There was never any doubt about it but, if there had been, I should have known for certain each time we have met since. When you came into the room that night in London at the Selbys' house, I realized it all over again and, this afternoon, when I saw you at the window as I drove up to High Chimneys, it was as if I found the answer to every question there is in the world.

"I know you don't care for me—I know, even if you did, there is a barrier between us which your loyalty makes impassable; but, well, I've told you the truth and you can forget it or remember it as you please. Mind! You've dropped your cigarette!"

He stooped to recover it and threw it out of the window. For a moment there was profound silence, until he said more in his ordinary voice:

"The fog seems to be lifting at last." Elizabeth moved then, peering forward at the blurred glass with eyes that saw nothing. She was only conscious of the exquisite throbbing of every nerve in her body and of a wonderful feeling of exaltation as if she had been lifted high above the world with all its sorrows and disappointments and bitternesses, so high above them that it was as if they did not exist. All her life she would remember every word Lawless had spoken, that each one was engraven forever on her heart.

When Lawless next spoke, she heard his voice as if from a great distance.

"I'll have to look at the next signpost. We ought to be able to pick one up directly. The fog is certainly lifting. Don't you think so?"

She found her voice with a supreme effort.

"Yes. I think it is. I can see the hedges this side quite plainly." Funny to be able to speak so quietly about ordinary things. "Perhaps we shall get to Dover in time after all," she said presently.

"It's past eleven now," he warned her, "and the fog may come down again."

For the rest of the way the road was fairly clear, though occasionally they ran into thicker patches, and it was past midnight when Lawless said:

"Those must be the lights of Dover. Are you very tired?"

"No."

He said, practically. "I think the best thing will be to go straight to the Lord Warden Hotel. We may find Miss Thornley there, if the boat has not sailed."

They did not speak again until, on the outskirts of the town, Lawless stopped the car and turned on the overhead light. Then he sat motionless at the wheel for a moment before he asked, not looking at her:

Two Overseas Divisions To Be Organized in Canada; Rogers Goes to Defence Post

Trained Air Force Personnel to be Sent at Once to England Mackenzie Announces After Lengthy Cabinet Meeting

TRAIN 32,000 MEN

Volunteer Force Will be Fully Trained and Offered to England for Service Overseas if and When Required

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP) — Men, munitions and money will flow from Canada to aid the British government in the war against Germany, with the Dominion serving mainly as a reservoir of submarine fighters, munitions, materials, and possibly of larger war vessels, according to the government's new statement of policy.

Two divisions of volunteers will be organized at once to be available if and when the need arises to send an expeditionary force, and trained air personnel will be sent at once, former Defence Minister Mackenzie announced last night.

A statement to the press late in the evening, the last official release from Mr. Mackenzie in his capacity of defence minister, outlined the new details of policy. Less than an hour later Mr. Mackenzie was sworn in as Minister of Pensions and National Health, and was succeeded by former Labor Minister Rogers in the defence portfolio.

Major Proposals.

The statement outlined the following major proposals for co-operating with the British government:

1. Facilitating the purchase of supplies in Canada by the United Kingdom government, probably involving in the first instance "repatriation" of Canadian securities held in London, and probably granting of credits.

BATTLE IN SIGHT OVER CHANGES IN SUCCESSION DUTY

Legislature Fully Agreed on All Government War Measures Introduced

NIGHT SESSION

Opposition Leader Will Oppose 'Sweeping Changes' in Succession Duty Act

Toronto, Sept. 20 (CP)—Unanimity on the Ontario Government's war measures marked the opening of the emergency session of the Provincial Legislature, but a battle is in sight today on the redrafted Succession Duty Act.

First reading was given yesterday to a dozen bills which are designed to gear Ontario industry and agriculture to a wartime economy and extend certain privileges to enlisted men. These passed through without debate and with the endorsation of the Conservatives under Col. George Drew.

The Opposition leader gave notice, however, of his intention to oppose "the sweeping changes in the Succession Duty Bill which he said has the effect of re writing the law. He suggested that it be referred to a committee of lawyers and judges for study and laid over until the next regular session for action.

Can't Delay Measure

This brought the retort from Premier Hepburn that it was "absolutely impossible" to delay the measure. He said a court injunction at present has halted the Government's lawsuit against "a huge estate where fraud is obvious."

He charged "reactionary Tories" had tried to block Succession Duty investigations. Since his Government took office more than $23,000,000 had been collected and he was willing to disclose the details of these estates, together with all the names, if the Conservatives

Former University Professor Succeeds Ian Mackenzie as Defence Minister, Who Takes Portfolio of Pensions

OTHER CHANGES

Norman McLarty Becomes Minister of Labor While C. G. Power Takes Over Post of Postmaster-General in Cabinet Shuffle

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)—Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers, 45-year-old native of Nova Scotia and former university professor, today took over control of the Department of National Defence, succeeding Hon. Ian Mackenzie who has headed the department since the government was formed in 1935.

This was the major move in a cabinet shuffle announced late last night, in which Prime Minister Mackenzie King changed the portfolios of four of his ministers.

Mr. Mackenzie now holds the portfolio of Pensions and National Health succeeding Hon. C. G. Power who becomes Postmaster-General, while Hon. Norman McLarty, who held that portfolio since Jan. 23, 1939, becomes Labor Minister.

New Supply Minister.

The cabinet changes followed closely upon rumored changes which also involved appointment of Wallace R. Campbell, head of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, as Minister of the newly-authorized department of Munitions and Supply.

In the announcement which stated the ministers were sworn into their new portfolios at 10:10 p.m. last night by Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, no mention was made of the new ministry.

Legislation empowering the government to set up a Ministry of Munitions and Supply was passed at the emergency session of parliament which prorogued last Wednesday.

It was announced then, however, that a War Supply Board would first be organized and, depending upon its surveys and reports on efforts to mobilize industry and resources for a major war effort, the new department might be created later.

RUSSIAN NEWS 'GOOD' TO SHAW

G. B. S. Declares Stalin Has Not Objected to Using Hitler as Catspaw

London, Sept. 20—(CP)— Bernard Shaw, the playwright, wrote to the editor of The Times today that he considered the news from Soviet Russia "good news for us, as far as any war news can be called good."

"The question," said Shaw, "is not whether Mr. Molotoff's speech resembles certain utterances of Herr Hitler's or not. What concerns us is whether Mr. Molotoff's statements are true or not. They are obviously true to the last syllable."

Shaw added:

"We have encouraged Poland to fight by our pledge to support her; and we have encouraged ourselves by silly reports that the Polish army was unbroken and that the Poles were performing prodigies of valor. The truth, as we now have to admit, and as Mr. Molotoff notes, is that our support has so entirely failed that the Polish resistance has been wiped out, and with it the Polish Army and the Polish Government, leaving Poland a derelict to be picked up and put on by Herr Hitler as a shepherd putteth on his garment.

'Stalin Steps In'

"At this point, we being helpless, Mr. Stalin steps in and says: 'Not quite. If the Ukraine and White Russia are going begging, Russia will occupy them, Hitler or no Hitler.'

"No sooner said than done. The Red Army is in occupation. Mr. Stalin, who was very explicit as to his objection to being made a catspaw to take our chestnuts off the fire, has no objection whatever to using Herr Hitler as a catspaw. The unfortunate Fuehrer is compelled to disgorge half his booty and to face yet another army saying 'thus far and no farther.'

"And instead of giving three cheers for Stalin we are shrieking that all is lost.

Press Photographer Lacerated When Attacked by Angry Bear

Banff, Alta., Sept. 20 (CP)—Two men, victims of an angry mother grizzly bear, are in hospital here in serious condition from multiple lacerations.

Nicholas Morant, Canadian Pacific Railway Press Photographer from Montreal, and Christian Haasler, son of a Lake Louise guide, were mauled yesterday by the female bear and its cub as they climbed a trail along the Great Divide 50 miles north west of here.

Morant, on a trip to get some pictures, suffered severe lacerations on the back of his head, torn left forearm, torn right upper arm, torn right leg calf, lacerations along the right side of the body and a clawed chest.

Haasler suffered lacerations to both legs and one arm.

The men were walking up the trail to Sherbrooke Lake when they saw the grizzly and her cub. Haasler often had met grizzlies so continued along the path. Suddenly the grizzlies chased from behind.

Haasler regaining his senses stumbled down the five-mile stretch to Wapta Lake Bungalow, arriving there about noon yesterday, three hours after the attack.

Park officials took him to Banff hospital, 41 miles east of the Bungalow, and then searched for Morant. He was brought to Banff hospital late last night.

Both men ran when the grizzly attacked but Haasler, attempting to climb a tree, was pulled to the ground and mauled. Then the bear apparently saw Morant and gave chase. Haasler said he heard Morant's screams when he regained consciousness.

Wartime Prices Board Gets Release of 2,000,000 lbs. Sugar From Industrial Plants

The Sugar Has Been Turned Back to Refiners for Redistribution

SURVEY PURCHASES

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)—The wartime prices and Trade Board under chairmanship of Hector B. McKinnon, moved swiftly Tuesday to curb hoarding of sugar.

In the one day, the Board announced last night, its officers obtained voluntary release of approximately 2,000,000 pounds of sugar "from industrial plants which had bought their sugar supplies several months ago." The sugar has been turned back by these companies to the sugar refiners for distribution through the regular trade channels, the Board said.

"In 20 cities from Halifax to Vancouver, officers of the Dominion Weights and Measures Service have been directed to call on retail grocery stores to find out to what extent excessive purchases by individual householders have made it difficult for others to secure adequate supplies," the Board announced. Legal and police officers are studying evidence in several cities which, it is expected, "may result in the laying of charges of hoarding and profiteering."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The second Great War in its earlier stages is a testing period for both new and old methods of warfare. Students of the art of war in many countries followed with close interest the sweep of the German forces through Poland with a view to learning something about the merits and effects of mechanization.

German forces moved on wheels in their conquest of Poland, and the wheels were driven by gasoline motors. Motors did the work performed by horses in earlier wars in that they carried troops on wide sweeping movements through undefended or poorly defended regions to strike at the opposing forces on the flank and the rear. Mechanical land transport in the German-Polish conflict apparently emerged from its baptism of fire with flying colors.

Not Much Use of Aircraft

The use of aircraft in the war so far is less than prewar prognosticators assigned to it. The extensive air raids on industrial sites anticipated in some quarters have not materialized. No attempt has yet been made to bomb British or French territory, and the only bombing of German territory was directed at warships and naval facilities.

This may have been due to two reasons, first the occupation of a large part of the German air force in Poland, and second the desire of both sides to be the last to resort to tactics which might mean direct injury to the civilian population.

The German air arm, however, aided materially in the Polish campaign. Aircraft were used there in co-operation with ground forces to a greater degree than ever before.

Adheres Closely to Type

Naval warfare so far adheres closely to the type waged from 1914 to 1918. Germany relies on submarines to cripple Allied shipping. In turn the Allies attempt to destroy the submarines, protect their ships by convoys and use their preponderance of naval power to cut off the movement of supplies to Germany by sea.

Thus mechanical transport on land is the outstanding new method to be used with success in the present conflict. Conditions in Poland favored its use. The Poles were not highly mechanized, they were weak in the air and the country was level and open. Further tests of mechanization on the Western Front will be awaited with interest.

Paris, Sept. 20.—(CP-Havas) — The Russian invasion has cut off Poland's last connections with Rumania and her neutral neighbours in the Baltic North.

Polish defence forces in the middle Vistula Zone, where the bitterest fighting of the last few days have occurred are now out of contact with the outside world. The facilities which may still be left to them for resistance have become obscure.

Information concerning Polish military activities is extremely sparse, because communications have been paralyzed by bombing and because the commanders of the various separated corps have problems more pressing than the writing of reports.

Fight Before Warsaw

The stories which reach us are therefore largely either accounts of refugees which filter through via Rumania and Lithuania, or the "victory" bulletins of the German and Soviet propaganda machines.

Naturally, the refugees tell harrowing tales and the propaganda accounts list only the successes.

However, the Germans admit the fight is continuing before Warsaw. In the pocket west of the capital Polish divisions are still standing their ground. Lwow, which has reportedly been reached by the Germans and Russians, has until now refused to surrender.

But even if it is admitted that the Nazis and Soviets, with little delay, complete the destruction of Poland, what will be the military consequences?

Military Results

To preserve her conquests, not only in Poland but also in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, Germany will have to keep at least 1,000,000 men immobilized in the East. These soldiers will be powerless to help against the Allies storming the Nazis' western defences.

Such an estimate, in fact, is quite modest. There should also be taken into account the regular police needed to patrol those areas, as well as the solid barrier of troops which must be established in Poland against the armies of Russia, despite the mutual assurances exchanged between Moscow and Berlin.

Chamberlain Says He Sought in Vain in Report of Hitler's Speech Any Word of Sympathy for Brave Men Who Have Died

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 20 (CP Cable)—Great Britain and France will not be deterred from their task of ridding the world of Hitlerism by Russia's invasion of Eastern Poland, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today.

Nor will the two allied democracies be influenced by threats from Adolf Hitler. The Reichfuehrer's speech in Danzig yesterday "does not change the situation with which we are confronted," he said.

To a House dotted by members in uniform, the Prime Minister declared Britain's resources "are being steadily and surely marshalled." He cautioned the nation not to expect too much all at once.

6 or 7 Boats Known Sunk

After two weeks of relentless warfare the British Navy, in its fight against the German submarine menace, has sent at least six or seven sea raiders to the bottom of the ocean. The Prime Minister emphasized this as a decidedly low estimate, an under-statement, because of the difficulty in determining when a U-boat had been sunk by depth charges.

April, 1917, was the peak month of British losses by submarines and mines in the last war, the average weekly sinkings amounting to 39 ships and 127,000 tons. During the week ended Sept. 12 British losses were 17 ships, 95,000 tons and for the week ended Sept. 19, 13 ships, 45,848 tons.

Losses Lower in Second Week

This decrease between the first and second weeks of the war had been partly due to the working of the Convoy System, now increasingly in operation.

Joseph Stalin's orders to the Red Army were not unexpected in London, Mr. Chamberlain declared, and could not be justified by arguments put forward.

It was still too early "to pronounce any final verdict on the motives or consequences of the Russian action." Mr. Chamberlain continued, almost biting off these words:

Germany and Russia Agree On the Partition of Poland

Demarcation Line Has Been Set but Not Made Public

CONSULT IN MOSCOW

Berlin, Sept. 20—(AP)—The High Command disclosed today that Germany and Russia have reached an agreement on the partition of Poland, at least so far as their armies are concerned.

That the demarcation line has been set was announced in a communique which, however, did not say where the line runs.

It asserted the German forces would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Whether this line lies east or west of Warsaw was not indicated.

The communique said German forces had advanced to a line running from Stryj, in southeast Poland, north near the industrial city of Lwow, thence almost straight north to Brest-Litovsk, about 160 miles from the Soviet frontier and up to Bialystok, about 150 miles from the Russian border.

The entire Rumanian frontier, bordering southeast Poland, is in Russian hands.

Whether the army occupation areas later will become the new boundaries between Germany and Russia was a moot question. Informed quarters intimated this question was not yet solved.

(Four German army officers arrived by plane in Moscow to take part in consultations. A Moscow communique reported Russian occupation of both Lwow, in the southeast, and Wilno, in northern Poland).

FENCES PLACED AROUND PLANTS

Public Utilities and Filtration Plant to be Guarded Says His Worship

"We are going to protect the Public Utilities property to the utmost, especially the Filtration Plant and the Hydro sub-station on Reid Street," Mayor Jamieson Bone announced this morning, despite the fact armed guards are at present stationed around the sub-station.

The Public Utilities moved to erect modern wire fences around both of these public properties, the type of fences that are known as the non-climbable type of fence. There are arms protruding outward from the top of a nine-foot wire fence, upon which are strung lines of barbed wire, which makes them burglar-proof and safe from entrance to the properties. This type of fencing has been used with success around large industrial plants in all parts of the continent," revealed His Worship.

The erection of these proposed fences by the Public Utilities Commission will commence as soon as the materials are procured.

Two Wolves Chasing Deer Killed on Road by Motor Car

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes of Bancroft Have Strange Experience in Algonquin Park

GIVEN QUARRY

Bancroft, Sept. 20 (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Barnes while driving through Algonquin Park between Lake of Two Rivers and Algonquin Park Station Saturday evening about sundown came upon a sharp rise in the road. Mrs. Barnes, who was driving the car, was unable to turn out for a deer chased by five wolves. The deer jumped aside but the wolves were evidently blinded by the lights of the car because the pack came straight for the car in single file. Mrs. Barnes was driving too fast to turn out and killed the first two animals; by the time she got, the car stopped, the deer and the other three wolves had disappeared. The front fenders and the grill of the car were damaged by the impact. Mr. Barnes reported the accident to the Chief Ranger and was given permission to leave the pack with his quarry. The teeth marks from the one wolf made a scratch about six inches long on the left fender.

Large Bear Shot

Friday night, about sundown, one was seen in the tree. Mr. Jessup shot him four times before entirely killing him.

Saving Afforded Electric Consumers During D.S.T.

"Statistics show that the receipts of the Belleville Utilities, in electric collections alone, were down substantially during the period of daylight saving in Belleville, thus a saving of thousands of dollars was afforded the electric light consumers of this city during the summer months," Mayor Jamieson Bone revealed today as he announced the period of daylight saving in Belleville would terminate at midnight this Saturday night.

"This is the first time in recent years Belleville has adopted the daylight saving period as enjoyed in other larger cities, such as Toronto. I have been complimented by citizens of other cities, more especially commercial men, for the extending of daylight saving and also feel the public in general has been satisfied and pleased with the extended period, which was made possible only through the mayor's proclamation of last May," Mayor Bone stated in his office today.

"It naturally stands to reason, that by having additional daylight, by adopting daylight saving for a period of four months or so, the householder saves a certain percentage on their electric light bills, which was proven by the substantial decrease in the receipts of the Public Utilities this summer. This decrease is a straight saving to the consumer," added His Worship.

Bell Telephone Co. Plans to Assist Employees Who Enlist

Urging renewed devotion to duty during the war period, and outlining the provisions that have been made to aid employees who enlist in the Militia and Active Service Forces, C. F. Sise, president of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada, has sent a personal message to all employees in which he expressed his conviction that every telephone man and woman would "accept with alacrity such assignments for the general good as may be within their power to undertake."

Mr. Sise stated that the company had pledged itself to do everything within its power to aid the Government and that it was prepared to assist its employees who enlist in the Militia and the Active Service Forces. Under this plan, all regular employees in the company's service as of September 1, 1939, will (1) be granted leave of absence and continue to be eligible for death benefits under the Plan for Employees' Pensions, Disability Benefits and Death Benefits; (2) be re-employed upon discharge from the army, navy or air force and their military service will be credited to them for purposes of the benefit and pension plan. In addition, the dependents of married employees, and the dependent children of widowers, will receive the difference between the amount of government pay and allowances and the amount of the employee's basic rate of pay, subject to the provision that the Company's contribution shall not exceed one-half of the employee's basic rate of pay.

The president says in the course of his letter:—

"I am confident that those who shall carry on from day to day the regular tasks of telephone service will bear constantly in mind the importance of doing their part, whatever it may be, in a spirit of courage, hopefulness, and devotion; that they will accept with alacrity such assignments for the general good as may be within their power to undertake, and that, to the very end of the grave period on which we have entered, they will discharge all their duties to the best of their ability. In such manner we are all privileged to play a worthy part."

The company's decision to aid its employees who volunteer to serve King and country, recalls that similar action was taken 25 years ago, on August 15, 1914. At that time the company had approximately 7,800 employees; today, there are 2,000 more, the increase being almost entirely male employees. In the war of 1914-19, 833 Bell employees enlisted for military service abroad. Of these, 584 were still serving when the Armistice was signed, 166 had been discharged, four were missing or prisoners of war, and 79 had made the supreme sacrifice.

The annual report for 1919 added: "We have further provided that none of these men (those who had enlisted) shall be prejudiced in position or salary through having served the Empire. We have also felt it a duty to prefer other returned men where vacancies were to be filled, and we are proud to have in our service over 1,000 who were members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force."

Truck Goes into Ditch, Driver Escapes Injury

When the truck he was driving got out of control on Highway No. 14, five miles south of Belleville, Howard C. Calnan of this city, escaped uninjured after the vehicle skidded into the ditch. Some little damage resulted to the truck and following investigations H. T. O. Sam Ervine stated charges under the H.T.A. were pending.

Brothers Held for Investigation

Two brothers, who sought police protection following altercations on North Front Street early this morning, were later held in custody on charges of violations of the L.C.A. Constable Arnott investigated the request of one of the brothers, who stated his brother was being attacked by another man. P.C. Arnott hastened to the scene of the reported trouble and later held the two brothers for further investigation, allowing a third party to proceed to his home.

BATTLE IN SIGHT

wished to have them made public.

"I'll bring them all before the House if the group opposite wants to commit political hara-kari," he added.

Col. Drew challenged the Premier to bring in the names of the estates on which claims are being made by the Government and said he had no objection to these already investigated being disclosed.

Position Imperilled

Mr. Hepburn had said, with the Succession Duty stopped for four months by Court injunction, Ontario's financial position was being imperilled and that the need of making collections at present was "most urgent" because of the drain of wartime.

If this were the position, Col. Drew maintained, the Premier should furnish the names of the should furnish the names of the suspected estates and indicate what he hopes to collect from them. The Premier retorted these would be published "when fraud is established and not before."

Col. Drew stressed he was not opposed to the principle of investigating estates where fraud is suspected, but argued that it should be done "in the proper way." He agreed "every cent due should be paid."

The House meets again at 3 p.m. today and Premier Hepburn announced at adjournment there would be a night session at which the Succession Duty Act debate may be held. The Premier said he would fly to Strathroy today to attend the funeral of the wife of Judge Duncan Ross of St. Thomas but he would be back for the night session.

Suggestion Not Acted On

Mr. Hepburn told the House the Dominion Government had not acted on his suggestion the militia be employed, instead of special guards, to protect Hydro-Electric plants and other public utilities in the province from possible sabotage. He announced Ontario would continue this 'vital' work, although it might cost as much as $2,000,000 annually.

Col. Drew criticized the setup under which Ontario had to maintain 'a private army' of almost 1,000 guards and both Attorney-General Gordon Conant and Premier Hepburn agreed this was not the proper procedure, but the only thing Ontario could do under the circumstances.

Power Given Guards

Among the war measures given first reading was a bill to give the guards over Public Works power to question and arrest suspicious persons who attempt to enter or approach such properties. Another bill gives the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission control over all public and private Hydro plants.

Mr. Conant introduced an Act to give municipal authorities and police commissions power to prohibit public meetings and still other measures provide for use of vacant land to raise foodstuffs; to give airmen and sailors as well as soldiers the right to make personal wills without legal formality; and to exempt patriotic gifts from taxation.

FORMER

No Reasons Given.

No reasons were given in the brief government announcement for the change in portfolios. All the ministers except Mr. McLarty took the portfolios they left yesterday when the government was first formed.

Mr. Rogers entered politics in 1935 for the first time, although he served a brief period in 1927-29 as primate secretary to Mr. Mackenzie King.

Apparently destined for an academic career, Mr. Rogers had a brilliant career as a student, first at Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., then at Oxford where he obtained high degrees and won a Rhodes scholarship. His studies were interrupted by the war, in which he served in the ranks overseas.

From 1929 to 1935 Mr. Rogers was professor of political economy at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., and previously he had been professor of history at Acadia University.

TRAINED AIR FORCE

2. Doubling of naval personnel, increasing naval stores, improving of naval facilities, and construction in Canada of "a large number of anti-submarine and mine-sweeping craft".

3. Immediate contribution of trained air personnel, involving intensified training in Canada to maintain a progressively increasing supply of pilots and airmen.

4. Organization of two complete divisions which will be available as an expeditionary force if required, these to be additional to the troops required for coast and fortress defence and guard duty, and to be re-attested if already enlisted.

Essential Supplies.

Consultations with the British government had revealed that the aid of Canada could be most effective at once by facilitating the purchase by the United Kingdom of essential supplies in this country.

A British government mission of high officials now is in Ottawa with authority to place orders for munitions and supplies, and working closely with the government.

First necessity in this connection will be the establishment of credits here, and it probably will involve, the statement said, "repatriation" of Canadian securities held in London. Later there would be credits granted.

Immediate co-operation from the standpoint of service will require contribution of trained air personnel, some of which is now ready and may be sent shortly, the volume being governed by the needs for training in Canada.

To maintain a constant supply of trained airmen and pilots the government yesterday authorised "a plan of intensified training" and anticipates that civilian pilots will co-operate with the Royal Canadian Air Force both in the initial contribution and in training.

Ask For Volunteers.

From the 50,000 men now under arms in Canada it is proposed to ask for volunteers for the two divisions to form an expeditionary force available when needed.

Those volunteering will be re-attested. Pending this organization further recruiting will be deferred. No details were given, but it was assumed the approximately 32,000 men required for the two divisions will be taken, if available, from those now in uniform, the remaining 18,000 being left for fortress and coast defence, and guarding vulnerable property.

The statement revealed that Canada's naval service is now co-operating with British naval forces in defence of eastern Canada ports, assisting in protection of convoys for "a considerable distance" from the Canadian coast and mine sweeping.

This service is to be expanded by provision of additional escort vessels, increasing anti-submarine craft and extending the scope of operations, improvement of port facilities and increasing naval supplies.

Possibility of a large shipbuilding program was mentioned, but this will be attempted only after further and "careful" consultation with the British government.

Salvation Army Preparing for War Service

Once again the far-flung forces of the Salvation Army are gathering their resources to conduct the practical ministry that brought them the undying gratitude of the Allied troops in the war of 1914-18.

The "Army of the Helping Hand" is once more ready to undertake the work of giving physical and spiritual comfort to the men who have answered the nation's call.

Plans are already under way for the establishment of fifty Army Huts in camps overseas. Special officers are being appointed to duties in connection with war work.

Centres will be opened where the women of the famous "Red Shield Auxiliaries" may meet and work together to supply such necessities as socks, sweaters etc. for the men overseas. Salvationists and friends able to supply wool for this purpose are urged to get in touch with Major Alderman, commandant of the Corps here.

The Red Shield, famous insignia of the Salvation Army during the last war will again be the army's sign.

Salvation Army chaplains will welcome and serve in every way possible those having no religious connection and in this case they may register under the army's name.

The organization is accustomed to hardship and its work and people have ever thrived in times of adversity. Its practical work commends itself to all who have any knowledge of human need. In the near future an effort will be made to raise additional funds which will be set aside for war work.

The Army's activities during the dark days of the last war were universally acknowledged. A quarter of a century later—in another hour of need—the organization, better equipped and fully experienced, stands at the salute to serve.

Mortgage-Burning Ceremony At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is Largely Attended

Generous Gift of Donor Who Wishes to Remain Anonymous, Makes Ceremony Possible

ADDRESS GIVEN

Financial Statement of Church from Earliest Times Given by Session Members

Yellow flames flickered upward from a small scroll of bound paper in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday School Auditorium last night. Lighted by a match held in the hands of Mrs. Archie Roberts, the scroll blazed brightly as it was slowly turned by Mr. Arthur McGee. W. G. Walker, nephew of a former minister of the church, assisted with the ceremony.

And as the last flame shot upward to die away in a small pile of grey ashes, the heartfelt thanks and gratitude of the crowded hall that the last mortgage on church property had been paid, was suddenly exemplified in applause that rang through the auditorium.

The ceremony of burning the symbolic mortgage culminated years of cooperative effort on the part of congregation, organizations of the church and individuals, the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of the church, said in a brief post-ceremony address. "Thanks to the generous gift of a donor, who does not want his name mentioned, and the generosity of the congregation, this ceremony has been made possible Behind these gifts," Mr. Walker added, "is the splendid work of the Board, the congregation and the church organizations. Through the proceeds of their combined efforts we have reached the final point of freedom."

Stalwarts of the Presbyterian Church were present, Mr. Walker pointed out, "and the children of those splendid people who were and are still loyally connected with the church." He mentioned Mrs. Thorpe, Mrs. Tower and Mr. Bennett as some of the outstanding people who have been with St. Andrew's for over a period of seventy years. The minister paid tribute to the women of the church. "Without them we could not have progressed very far," he said.

Addresses Given

Members of church organizations and descendants of the early church stalwarts gave brief addresses. Mr. E. Rutherford told several humorous anecdotes of an uncle who was an elder in the old days. He recalled the fact that his family came here in 1840. "This uncle," he said, "secured a pew in the gallery of the old kirk. Later when a committee desired to instal an organ in the gallery the uncle objected. But the committee was adamant and accordingly the new organ was built around the Rutherford pew. Later when the church burned, the pew remained intact."

Another humorous story told by Mr. Rutherford concerned his uncle, who finding the communion 'jug' devoid of wine, despatched a son to have it refilled. "Near Hotel Street was a pump," narrated the speaker. "The son, unfortunately, met a number of his friends who were curious as to the contents of the jug. Consequently a visit was paid to the rear of a hotel. Examining the contents of the jug, the young fellows decided the color had not changed much, so a return visit was made to the rear of the hotel. Then another, and another. I am afraid by the time the jug reached the kirk, it contained a fluid that was nearly water," he concluded, amid laughter.

Dr. J. W. Kinnear, President of the Board, felt the achievement of paying off the mortgage was no mean one. "If this work had been laid over until the present time, I am afraid, in view of world conditions today, that it would not have been accomplished. As it is, it would not have been possible to raise six thousand dollars without the wholehearted co-operation of the church."

Changes In Church

Many changes have taken place both in the church and its congregation since he joined it twenty-six years ago, George A. Reid, former chairman of the Board, told the gathering. Renovation of the church had cost $32,000, a fact that a number of people did not know, he pointed out.

"The work of the church must not stop because the church is paid for," he urged. "The work is greater now than ever, and in view of the trouble in the world now, it is only beginning."

Financial History

In a detailed description of the financial history of the church since its inception here one hundred and ten years ago, R. J. S. Dewar, representative of the Session, told the gathering that three mortgages had been placed on buildings over this period of time. "One hundred and ten years ago the Crown granted the land upon which the church now stands," he said. Very few of Crown properties were registered however; roughly about ten per cent.

The first mortgage on the property was placed in 1877, twenty-six years after the second of the three churches that have stood on the site, was built, Mr. Dewar said. "The amount of this mortgage was one thousand pounds and was borrowed from a Scottish insurance company. This was paid off in 1888. In 1895, one year after the second church was destroyed by fire, a second mortgage of $10,000 was placed and in 1905 $6,500 was added to it."

"This mortgage was fully paid up twenty-three years later," the speaker declared. "The last mortgage," he added, "was placed in 1931. That was paid off this year."

The present church was completed in 1895 at a cost of $23,500, while subsequent changes and improvements have cost approximately $35,000, Mr. Dewar told the gathering. He read a newspaper story of the disaster that destroyed the church in 1895, mentioning names of committees under the Rev. M. W. McLean, minister of the church at that time.

Mr. C. E. Argue, chairman of the Finance Committee refused to take the credit for the splendid accomplishment of paying off the mortgage. "I cannot claim all the credit," he said, paying tribute to his assistants, Lorne McDougall and Gordon Robertson, as well as the congregation, organizations and the ladies, whose splendid donations amounted to $625.00."

Refreshments and Program

Emphasizing the fact that the meeting was one "in which all should get acquainted with each other, without waiting for the formality of introduction, Mr. Walker, before turning the meeting over to the refreshments committee of ladies, welcomed Mrs. Fair and Mrs. E. V. Ilsey of Seattle. He paid splendid tribute to Mr. Ilsey "who was a devoted worker for the church, and who always had and still has its interests at heart."

He reviewed briefly the work of the church during the present year and voiced the hope that now the "church-going season has started, he would have the pleasure of seeing the pews filled again." He extended a hearty welcome to new members.

During the early part of the meeting a splendid program was heard. Contributing artists were: Messrs. Harold Williamson, solos; Mr. Whittle, solos; Miss Sharp, humorous recitation; Mrs. McBrien, vocalist, and Mr. Kilgour, church organist, in piano solo.

Delicious refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Faulkner, Central Butte, Sask. Hosts To Sixty-Three Grandmothers

Youth may have its fling; debutantes their "coming-out parties"; respectable middle-age its bridge and theatres, but it is doubtful if a more enjoyable party has been held by those nearing and past the allotted span of life, than that given recently by Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Faulkner, of Central Butte, Sask., uncle and aunt of Dr. J. A. Faulkner of this city, former Minister of Health for Ontario, at which sixty-three grandmothers of the district were the invited guests.

There were "old" grandmothers and "new" grandmothers, lovely old ladies, silver-haired, faces shining with happiness and appreciation of the kindness extended them by their genial hosts.

It was a grand party, the ideal summer's day, the beautiful flowers and happy guests made a perfect setting for the program. Voices were raised in joyous community singing. An address of welcome was read. Recitations, humerous and serious, songs, piano selections rounded out the program. But time was taken out to pay beautiful tribute to thirty-nine grandmothers who have passed away during the past sixteen years. They were remembered by a beautifully decorated scroll upon which was inscribed an appropriate poem.

Many Messages Received

Letters and telegrams were read from distant friends which included those from Mrs. Faulkner's daughter, Mrs. Gladys Vermilyea, Belleville, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Faulkner, Toronto, Mrs. D. MacAllum, Toronto, Mrs. Tyler, Saskatoon, who arranged a broadcast over a Saskatoon radio station in tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner; and Dr. J. A. Faulkner of Toronto.

Following the highly enjoyable program, Mrs. Faulkner presented gifts to the oldest grandmother present, Mrs. McLean, Riverhurst, Sask., who was 91 years of age; the most recent grandmother, and the grandmother with the youngest child of her own.

Mrs. MacLean, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner in a brief appreciative address was found to be possessed of an excellent sense of humor. She moved a cordial vote of thanks to the host and hostess.

Refreshments Served

At this point the United Church Sunday School Hall where the party was held, was transformed into a tea-room where refreshments were served to the guests at small tables. Mrs. Lockwood and Mrs. Ambler, wife of the minister of the church were in charge of this part of the program and were assisted by Mrs. Lowe, Mrs. Irving, Mrs. Conway, and the Misses B. Campbell, Ivy Swain, Dorothy McGregor, L. Smith, Alice Hamilton and G. Lewis.

The Rev. Mr. Ambler and Mr. Faulkner joined the guests at the tea-hour.

As the guests took their leave, they were presented with bouquets of flowers and many were the compliments heard of the perfectly happy day, another beautiful memory for "Roses in December."

HITLER AT DANZIG

After the great outpouring of blood in the past nineteen days in Poland and on the Western Front of Germany, the world yesterday listened to Adolf Hitler, the man who could have submitted the Polish question to arbitration and reason but chose instead the arbitrament of war. A brave nation, Poland, has been largely crushed, while valiant sections of the army fight a fight against the German enemy and face the soldiers of Stalin who came suddenly on the border to make Hitler's dream come true of a two weeks' liquidation of Poland. His speech at Danzig yesterday appealed to the Nazi ideals of the German Government and was a glorification of the German race.

For the first time he had opportunity to speak in kindly words of Russia, his new-found friend, whom he enviously referred to a few years ago. Now the Russians are fit to be named by the Fuehrer along with the Germans who are "a race of men" according to Hitler, and he classifies Germany and Russia as "Europe's two greatest nations," "entitled to re-establish law and order in Eastern Europe."

While Hitler spoke of Britain and France and assured them he had no war intentions against them, he warned of a long war if necessary by the German nation, which he called ever invincible. He said Germany's aim was a lasting peace and that Germany and Russia would, by their settlement of the Polish question, ease the tension of Europe.

Certain sections of his speech are interesting to read for their statement and argument, particularly in the light of the breaking of treaties of which Germany stands condemned before the tribunal of the rest of the world. A translation of Hitler's speech runs in part:—

"I have decided that the common problems of Germany and Russia can best be solved by a common course of action. We have come to an understanding with Russia and we have decided that—contrary to British belief—our interests are indeed strictly limited.

"The very fact that they are limited as demonstrated by this understanding, ought to make this very understanding a most welcome factor to Britain.

"As far as our future aims are concerned, I want to state that our program will effect a general lessening of the European tension."

His statement that the Russian-German proposed settlement of the Polish question would ease the tension of Europe overlooks the fact as stated by Prime Minister Chamberlain that Britain is warring against Hitlerism and Naziism and that there will be no end to the war until it is crushed. Having gone to war with Poland Hitler must fight against Poland's allies in an effort to save himself.

How can there be any easing of the European and world tension with war raging on the west frontier of Germany is impossible to see, much as Hitler might desire to be released of the burden of battling Britain and France who have gone to war on a principle of ending Naziism and Hitlerism which they blame for the condition of the world today.

Hitler's reference to the Poles as an "inferior state" and his statement that Germany was a superior state bore the marks of the typical brutality of the Nazi political faith.

The world fears the 'strictly limited' interests of Germany of which Adolf Hitler speaks.

A SYMBOL OF INNOCENCE SLAIN

In a small grave at Hamilton rests a ten year old Canadian schoolgirl, Margaret Hayworth, victim of Nazi butchery and disregard of the first laws of humanity. War can do no more harm to her and those other victims of the torpedoing of the Athenia who sleep their last sleep through the inhuman methods of the German Government in waging hostilities. She and they repose in innocence in their graves years before their time and their blood calls for vengeance on the German political military machine.

Margaret Hayworth will live forever in the minds of childhood and parenthood of Canada and in the thoughts of brothers and sisters of every family in the land. The deadly torpedo from the treacherous U-boat which struck the liner Athenia is the symbol of the spirit of Naziism and as such cannot be forgotten.

This little girl is the symbol of thousands of Polish children who have fallen before the vicious Nazi principle. She was one of those on which the foundations of life depend and it was natural to think that she would have been safe anywhere in the world. But she was not safe in the world in which lives Naziism.

So much that is sweet and lovely in life, so much that is essential to the progress of the human race dies when a child like the little Hamilton girl goes to her death.

But she does not go to her long sleep unrevenged. Every day will bring nearer the retribution on that dragon monster, Naziism, which would destroy the world of love, beauty and life on which Margaret Hayworth looked, unsuspecting the lurking foe of everything in which she trusted. A spirit of justice is ruling in humanity and will prevail over the brutality of war and will see that innocent little ones, their brothers and sisters and parents and grandparents, their aunts and uncles and the whole world have a right to live and enjoy life.

THE LURE OF AUTUMN

When gorgeous Autumn haunts the wood and plain,
And flaunts her robes on every hill of flame,
I like to roam where bright the sunlight streams
Through crimson leaves where Nature idly dreams.
I like to follow where with trappings gay,
She leads her train o'er an enchanted way;
And dream with her beside the sunlit shore
Where summer trails her robes of light no more.

I fain would follow where the silence broods
O'er field and plain and woodland solitudes,
Where purple grapes adorn the clambering vine,
Where shadows lengthen in the day's decline;
And where the nuts drop one by one to earth—
The sound conducive to the chipmunk's mirth,
Where Autumn's spirits thrills us as we pass
And fairy foot-prints mark the greening grass.

STEAMYACHT MAGEDOMA HAS BEEN LAID UP FOR THE SEASON. This handsome craft has been a familiar figure on the St. Lawrence and among the Thousand Islands for many years. It is the property of Mrs. George T. Fulford, and was provided for in Senator Fulford's will for care and maintenance. It is said that the sum of ten thousand dollars a year is provided for maintenance and pay of the captain and crew. Senator Fulford was very proud of the Magedoma, one of the finest pleasure crafts on the river in his time. Hence provisions in his will for the maintenance of the craft and the pay of captain and crew. Every fall the craft is moored in Tunnel Bay, Brockville, and fitted with a house covering which protects the vessel from the elements during the winter.

WHERE HAS ALL THE SUGAR GONE TO? Wholesalers and retailers say they have kept more than average stocks and endeavored to serve all alike without discrimination, just now when preserving time makes extra demands upon sugar. The refiners say they have provided the trade with more than normal requirements—and still there is a shortage of sugar, a serious shortage, which indicates that someone has been hoarding sugar on a large scale. Investigation now under way sponsored by the Retail Merchants Association, wholesalers and refiners should show results.

30 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 20TH, 1909

It was lucky that there were no carriages in the way of certain autos which "hit things up" on the Trent Road yesterday. Coming into town at a good twenty miles an hour, the "joy riders" sent the dust up to the top of the telegraph poles and clouds of white enveloped the windows and doors of houses along the roadway. If the residents of that beautiful thoroughfare are not screaming for help these days, they are certainly patient and long-suffering. If it is a fair question, whose place is it to see that the laws in regard to moderate travel in this city are respected. Complaints are made that the matter is getting to be a common nuisance. The city council might do worse than make a few enquiries about this state of affairs.

Mr. T. J. Cockram of Madoc was in town today.

Sergt. P. Hayes is visiting friends in Peterboro.

40 YEARS AGO

SEPT 20TH, 1899

The Rev. David Wilson died at Napanee yesterday at the age of 86 years. He was the oldest Methodist minister in the Bay of Quinte Conference, with the exception of the Rev. Dr. Gardiner. He was in the ministry for 55 years.

Mr. Charles N. Sulman is in Toronto on business.

Mr. Victor Wensley is spending a few days in Toronto.

50 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 20TH, 1889

Under the able management of Mr. Henry Tammadge the opera house has been thoroughly renovated during the summer months and at the opening this season the patrons will find a great improvement. Considerable new scenery of the latest designs has been added to the house equipment. The drop curtain which is 27 feet by 34 feet has had painted upon it a new and attractive scene by a Belleville artist, Mr. Fred Richardson. The orchestra platform has been raised about six inches. All the chairs have been repaired; 800 of them have been newly upholstered. The front of the balcony has been repainted terra cotta and gold. Mr. John Harry will be the head of the ushering staff and Mr. W. Harding will be door tender.

Nervous Breakdown

When you hear that a friend or acquaintance has had a nervous breakdown, you may wonder just what has caused it. You know him well; know that as far as hours at work is concerned he works about the same number as others.

What has caused the "nervous breakdown?" Behind every nervous breakdown and the physical and mental symptoms accompanying it lie conflicting attitudes, a big indecision, and the inability of the emotions to handle the situation properly. It is by having a nervous breakdown, by remaining away from his responsibilities, that the individual meets the situation. Certainly if he is sick, he can't be expected to work, to think, to plan, to meet responsibilities. It is the line of least resistance just to have a "nervous breakdown".

I am quoting from a book "The Psychology of Human Conflicts" by Dr. E. R. Guthrie, University of Washington.

Fortunately, the general practitioner or family physician has met so many of these cases that he knows how to cure most of them. He explains to the patient that he really has the breakdown because he is afraid or unable to make a necessary decision or handle some difficult problem or situation and he is taking this method—having a nervous breakdown—to get out of having to make the decision. Some patients will admit that the physician is right, but, at first, most of them will not accept this truth, because a cure is the last thing they wish. Once they are willing to admit the truth of the physician's diagnosis (findings) of their case, the cure is under way.

However there is one point that is not emphasized in these cases of nervous breakdown and that is that the constant worry or anxiety, the sleepless nights, affect every organ in the body, particularly the liver, gall bladder, stomach and intestine. Poisons are not filtered out by the liver, the movements of the stomach and intestines are disturbed and may stop for minutes at a time, with the result that the blood contains too much wastes or poisons. These poisons affect the brain, the judgment, the fighting spirit of the individual and he just can't face the issue or issues at hand.

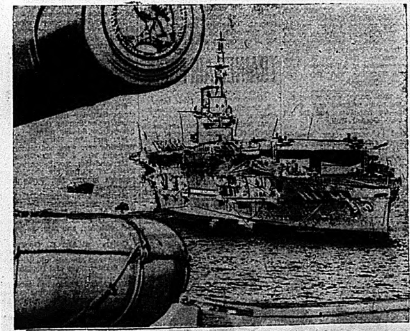
AIRCRAFT CARRIER COURAGEOUS FALLS VICTIM TO NAZI SUB



H.M. Aircraft Carrier, Courageous was torpedoed and sunk by a German U-boat according to a statement issued by the British Department of Information. The statement did not state how many were lost in the sinking of the Courageous, which usually carried about 1,200 men. Other naval crafts in the vicinity rushed to the scene and it is thought that the submarine responsible for the sinking was also sent to the bottom. The Courageous is shown here in a picture made from the deck of H.M.S. Rodney, one of whose 16-inch guns is in the foreground.

STIRLING LAND MARK REMOVED

Stirling—Fifty-eight years ago interested spectators watched the erection of the steeple on St. Paul's Methodist Church, reaching skyward about one hundred feet, it was looked upon as a lasting landmark for the village that could be seen for miles for many years to follow. Entrance of Stirling from any of the five highways was marked by the appearance of this steeple high above the tree tops. Built of the staunchest timbers by those who intended it to be a monument to their workmanship it was decorated with wrought-iron spires, created by native craftman of that day. Weeks of work is revealed in the intricate moorings and braces. The recent cyclone that visited Stirling along with other parts of the district was too much for the picturesque structure and on the recommendation of several competent workmen and Mr. J. A. Thomson, architect of Belleville, it was removed last week.

Mr. Fred Elgie, local contractor was in charge of the work and the first day's activity was witnessed by as large a group of spectators as witnessed its building. The first operation was the cutting of beams and braces some thirty feet from the top, then with the aid of a rope the workmen pulled some two tons of material to the ground in one stroke. The point of the steeple nosed down as it broke loose from the building and buried itself two or three feet in the lawn below. Three days were required for the major part of the work. Plans for replacing this part of the church are now in the making. Meanwhile regular church services are being held in the Stirling Community Service Building.

Bride-to-Be Is Honored

On Thursday evening, Sept. 14, 1939, the comfortable country home of Mr. and Mrs. George Ackerman, R.R. 7, Belleville, was the scene of a happy gathering, when 75 friends and neighbors assembled to honor their youngest daughter, Alma Mae, before her coming marriage to Mr. Arthur Wallace, Belleville..

At the appointed hour of 9.30 Mr. Roy Dulmage, chairman, called the group together with a few amusing remarks and then asked Mrs. Hobart Adams to read an address from the Young People's Society. While Mr. Dorland Bell presented the young couple, both members of the Society, with a beautiful electric table lamp. The address was as follows:

Dear Alma and Art:

We, the members of Massassaga Young People's Society have gathered here tonight to wish you a very happy and prosperous future.

You, Alma, have been a friend of many of us since childhood and we all respect and admire you very much. You have been a willing and very helpful member of our Young People's Society and we will miss you in the coming years.

You, Art, are by no means a stranger in our midst as we have all come to know and like you in the past few years.

We regard you both as true friends and none of us can have too many friends.

There are no friends like the old friends
Who have shared our morning days;
No greeting like their welcome
No homage like their praise
Tame is the scentless sunflower
With gaudy crown of gold;
But friendship is the breathing rose
With sweets in every fold.

We wish you to accept this small gift as a token of goodwill and a remembrance from the Massassaga Young People's Society.

Signed: Muriel Adams, Helen Jose Sybil Walker, Dorland Bell.

Both Alma and Art made suitable replies expressing their appreciation for the thoughtfulness shown by the Y. P. and asked them to meet at their home some time soon.

After the presentation Mrs. D. Davidson was asked to read another address from the community, at the correct moment, Ross Weese and Muriel Adams carried in a beautifully decorated basket filled to overflowing with a lovely assortment of miscellaneous gifts. As each gift presented itself, some pleasing remark was made by the bride-to-be. After which the young couple graciously thanked their many friends for their kindness. The address as read:

Massassaga, Sept. 14, 1939

Dear Alma and Arthur:

Another opportunity has presented itself to us as friends and neighbors to meet together to do honor to one of our young ladies who is about to be married and leave the neighborhood.

A good many of us here tonight have known Alma all her life and watched her grow from infancy to young womanhood. The time has come, all too soon when she will be leaving us to make her home elsewhere. She will be greatly missed in the different branches of church work in which she has been a willing helper.

In the meetings of the Women's Association of which Alma is a member, as well as the social functions of the society her splendid assistance will be hard to replace.

We are indeed sorry to lose her but we feel assured that her pleasant personality and kindly disposition will win for her many friends wherever she may be.

To Arthur, we extend our congratulations for winning such a worthy helpmate. Not having lived in our community we do not know Art so well. But during the time he has spent among us he has won the esteem and respect of all who know him. We are pleased that these young people will be living not far away and we hope to often see them in our homes and at the social affairs at Massassaga.

Will you please accept these gifts as a token of our love and esteem. Our very best wishes are with you. We wish for you both good health and every joy and blessing that Providence can bestow.

Signed on behalf of your Massassaga friends and neighbors, Lillian Valleau and Mrs. D. Davidson.

A delightful lunch of fruit, candy and nuts was served to all. Later the guests left wishing the young couple happiness and prosperity.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Service Hints For the Hostess

Dinner plates, fish plates and plates on which hot entrees are to be served should always be heated. This is a must for good service. The heat of the plate naturally helps to keep the food heated.

x—x—x

Salad plates and ice cream plates should be cold. If your refrigerator is large enough, put these plates in it until you are ready to serve the courses. If you serve a salad on a thoroughly chilled plate, the salad will be nearer perfection.

x—x—x

Serving dishes are always passed at the left of the person served. This is, obviously, a matter of convenience to the guest.

Usually, also, plates are removed at the left. But this is a matter of the hostess' choice.

The maid uses her right hand to remove a used plate, and her left hand to place the clean one in its place.

x—x—x

Correctly one plate or another must remain at every place from the time the table is set until it is cleared for dessert.

x—x—x

Before the dessert the table should be cleared. That is, the salad plates or the plates of whatever course precedes the dessert, are removed. Then the maid, holding a small serving tray in her left hand, places on it the salt and pepper sets, any unused pieces of flat silver and any other small dishes that are on the table. Then she brushes the crumbs from each place at table. To do this, she uses a folded napkin held in her right hand, and brushes the crumbs onto a small tray or plate held under the table edge with her left hand. (It is not good form to use a silver crumb scraper.)

In other words, before the dessert is served everything is cleared from the table except the candleholders, the centre decoration, the water goblets, the champagne glasses if champagne is to be served during the dessert course, cigarettes and ashtrays.

x—x—x

The simplest dessert service consists of the dessert plate, with the finger bowl on it, the dessert spoon on the right of the finger bowl, and the dessert fork on the left of the finger bowl. The finger bowls should be half filled with tepid water.

The guests lift the finger bowl off the plate, placing it to the left of the plate; removes the dessert spoon to the right of the plate and the dessert fork to the left of the plate.

Sometimes, when ice cream or a similar dessert is to be served, a glass ice cream plate (often a saucer-shaped plate) is placed on a china dessert plate, with the finger bowl on the glass plate.

x—x—x

If you have beautiful finger bowl doilies, use them under the finger bowls. But if you haven't, be comforted by the fact that they aren't at all necessary, and nowadays most hostesses put the finger bowl directly on the plate.

x—x—x

Never put a slice of lemon in a finger bowl! It's terrible taste to suggest to a guest that he may need this.

x—x—x

"If your guests insist on smoking at table . . . and this is definitely a problem for most hostesses today . . . . provide adequate ashtrays, to protect your table or your table linen. And the ashtrays should be emptied frequently.

x—x—x

And remember that the hostess should not be served first. The first to be served is the woman guest of honour, seated at the right of the host.

Courtesy Tip

If someone leaves a handkerchief in your home, you should have it laundered before you return it. And if you are the someone who has left the handkerchief, you should immediately write a note of apology for having left it, and thanks for the courtesy and care that your friends has taken to return it.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

New York Romance on the Rocks

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I finished my work one June night and hurried to catch the bus that was pulling out. The Dispatcher knew me and held it until I arrived. When I got on the bus, I found one of the newer drivers, with whom I had ridden several times. Since there were no vacant seats I had to stand.

Well, to make a long story short, the driver and I became good friends, and eventually we went out together several times. Then one night he stood me up on a date. And another night, when he asked me to go out with him, and I refused, he slapped me across the face. And I haven't seen him since.

I keep wondering what's the matter. Am enclosing a snapshot of myself, with all my bad points brought out.

L.

The reason for the non-appearance of the young man is doubtless fear that you'll make it hot for him, or have your father or brother take over the job, after the face-slapping episode. Unhappy wives who have their faces slapped, often write that children and the inability to earn a cent keep them tied to men who slap and beat them. But I can't imagine a young, unmarried girl, earning her own living, putting up with this sort of thing. Particularly one who is as attractive as your snapshot indicates. My advice is to drop the slapper.

Desirable Friends Are Best

Dear Miss Fairfax

By sheer courage, I managed to make the acquaintance of a charming girl, and would love to marry her, but I understand she has a boy friend and I distrust my ability to cut him out. I am a widower, by divorce, and have three children, who are very helpful and make for my happiness. But I should love to have a congenial companion for a wife.

She need have no fear of embarrassing meetings with my former wife as she never bothers even to come to see our children, though she is permitted to see them by Court Order. I do not drink, chew or gamble, and am a very hard working and an industrious person. How can I go about making the acquaintance of some good girl whom I might eventually marry?

Widower

As I've said so often in this column the best way to become acquainted with desirable people is through one's own desirable friends. And as you tell me in your letter, which is interesting but too long to print, that you go regularly to church, Sunday School and Bible class with your children, the best place to start in is through these associations. Tell your pastor you'd like to meet some nice girls or widows of suitable age. Join the men's societies, and go on their outings. Ask some married lady, the wife of one of your friends, to give a picnic for you, you furnishing the supper. And here's wishing you the best of luck.

She Loves Him Dearly Despite Age Difference

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I just know it's not a case of infatuation though he is more than twice my age, old enough to be my father. But I love him dearly. He's very nice and polite to me, and is not married.

He and his mother live together, and she is very sweet to me. I've gone places with them both, but he never asks me to go anywhere alone. I'm told by my parents I'm foolish but I can't help myself. I can't afford to quit my job, where I see him every day, as jobs are hard to find. This gentlemen acts as if he thinks very much of me, but he never makes a word of love. Perhaps because I don't give him a chance. I want to be so sure how he feels about me. I'm at my wit's end.

A Little Older Than Sweet Sixteen.

Your parents who are on the spot do not encourage you to give 'way to your feeling. So I, who am not on the spot, can only give you some impersonal suggestions. I have known marriages with the same disparity of years, of which you tell me, to be very happy. However, if he should ask you to marry him, before you consent better sit down and do a little arithmetic. Something like, when I am 20, this gentleman will be 45, and when I'm 30, just in my prime he will be 55. Sometimes 30 likes to go out and dance and 55 likes to wear slippers and stay at home. Think these things over as your friendship develops.

DOES BOTTLE BOTHER BABY?

IF SO Mrs Robert E. Brandon, of Markham, Ontario, has this message for you: "As so often happens to bottle-fed babies, stomach trouble and constipation were so troublesome we despaired of ever raising our first baby. A neighbour recommended Baby's Own Tablets and they proved so satisfactory we have never been without them for over thirteen years, with the result we have five extra sturdy children. So far they have missed all the so-called children's diseases and four of the five were bottle fed."

And Mrs. M. Butchart, of Toronto, says this: "Baby's Own Tablets are excellent for bottle-fed babies as they assist in digesting foods which cause indigestion."

Baby's Own Tablets are equally effective in diarrhoea, simple croup, colic, colds, simple fever and teething troubles. Sweet-tasting, easy to take, safe. Analyst's certificate in every box.

Never be without Baby's Own Tablets—sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

Refrigerator 'Cooking'

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

NOBODY NEEDS to spend much time bending over the kitchen stove in warm weather. The best culinary strategy is to let the refrigerator take charge of the cooking. So long as warm weather persists, try to take a holiday from cooking hot dishes. Chilled fruit juice or consomme, a salad and a nourishing sweet make up a healthful meal. Evolve delicious sweets than can appear with pride no matter what the season.

For a nourishing salad, combine lightly two cups cooked rice, one cup peas, four tablespoons each pimento and relish, three tablespoons grated cheese, teaspoon salt, lettuce and dressing, and three tablespoons celery, minced. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce with dressing.

Tomato and Chicken Salad is made with one-half cup boiled rice, three-fourths cup diced cooked chicken, one-half cup cut string beans, two tablespoons chopped green pepper, one-half cup diced celery, one-half tablespoon minced parsley, two-thirds cup mayonnaise, two-thirds cup whipping cream, tablespoon gelatin, two tablespoons cold water, one-half teaspoon salt and tomato ice.

To make the tomato ice, heat two cups tomato juice, let partially cool. Add one tablespoon gelatin moistened in cold water. Then season with one teaspoon each lemon juice, salt, Worcestershire sauce. Freeze.

To make the salad, combine chicken, beans, rice, pepper, celery and parsley. Combine mayonnaise and whipped cream. Soften gelatin in water five minutes, then melt it over hot water. Cool. Add salt and combine all ingredients except tomato ice.

Then Combine

Line refrigerator pan with waxed paper. Pour a layer of tomato ice, frozen previously to a mushy state, into freezing tray. Then arrange layer of chicken salad and cover with another layer of tomato ice. Freeze. Serve in slices on lettuce. Yield:—16 2-inch squares.

Chocolate Chip Ice Cream is one of those sweets that receives a welcome whenever it is announced. This delicious frozen custard, crunchy with chips of mellow chocolate, is just about the quickest ice cream there is to make, too. It can be whipped up in about 15 minutes and freezes in about an hour. It does not melt rapidly, another good feature. The recipe requires two-thirds cup evaporated milk, one egg, one-fourth cup sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two squares sweet chocolate, shaved or grated. Chill milk thoroughly. Then whip until stiff. Beat the egg. Add sugar and vanilla. Fold in stiffly-whipped milk. Stir in the chocolate. Pour at once into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze. Yield: one pint.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Children Who Have Proper Early Training Will Use Leisure Wisely

If you are going to teach your child how to spend his leisure hours, you must start when he is quite young. Perhaps the training will start with small trips to a park, or to the lakeshore or seashore for a picnic and bathing.

If you live in the city, the child will be fascinated by a trip to the country where he can get acquainted with cows, pigs and other farm animals. If this is beyond your means, then a ride on the street car to some point of interest will delight him.

When parents do this for a child he very quickly learns to find a satisfying interest in the real activities of life, instead of relying on made-to-order entertainment. Besides this, it is a good idea to introduce into the program for leisure hours some events in which the children can take an active part.

Of course, we can't be at the beck and call of the children all the time. We can't let them play with father's shirt studs or spread toys all over the house. But we can give them enough freedom in the home so that they will stay in it for leisure activities in which the parents haven't time to take part.

If the children are taught to put things back in place when they are finished playing; if they are properly impressed with the things they must never do in the home, they will play there happily and freely without being a nuisance to the parents or to anyone else.

This business of making the home so attractive that the child won't want to leave it all the time when he is seeking pleasure, is something that takes real thought on the part of the father and mother. Remember, it isn't something that happens just by accident; it must be planned, if it is to be a success. And it is something that the parents will get as much fun out of as the children themselves.

However, no matter how smoothly you have worked out your family routine with this in view, when your boy or girl begins to approach adolescence you will see signs of restlessness and perhaps discontent. Don't be upset about that. It does not mean that he is ungrateful; that he doesn't appreciate what you have done, or tried to do for him. It is merely the manifestation of his increasing desire to things with boys and girls his own age, instead of with his family.

Parents who have made home life pleasant for the child and have taught him constructive things to do in his leisure hours will find that even when he grows older, and isn't home so much, he will still enjoy from time to time the interests cultivated at home. And what is more important, it is altogether likely that in his activities with other adolescents, he will search for a good time in a well-founded, wholesome way. I don't think anyone can ask for more than that.

When adolescence begins to change the child into a man, it is time for parents to begin to train him or her in self-reliance. As many of the small decisions as can be, should be left to the individual. Don't always be making up his mind for him.

Of course, there should be a general time limit, to ensure that he won't stay out too late. Letting him make decisions doesn't mean that he should be allowed to run wild.

London Finds Hitler's Speech Is Full of Mistatements

London, Sept. 20 (CP)—The text of the British statement on Fuehrer Hitler's Danzig broadcast follows:

Herr Hitler's speech is full of the crass mis-statements which usually fall from his lips and to which the world has now become accustomed.

It is surprising that man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth.

Thus for example we now hear from Herr Hitler:

"At that time there lived in Poland a man of energy and action. I tried in common with Marshal Pilsudski to find a solution that would secure peace in this we put aside the Versailles Treaty and attempted to reach a temporary solution.

"After the death of Marshal Pilsudski however the mortal fight against all Germans in Poland began anew. This fight naturally embittered and ruined the relations between the two nations.

"It was possible for us only with difficulty to look on while the German minority was barbarously ill-treated.

"The world which is always shaken to the depths when a Polish Jew who has recently emigrated to Germany is deported, remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment."

What He Said Before

So says Herr Hitler.

The world remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment for the very good reasons that from the time of Marshal Pilsudski's death until this spring Herr Hitler represented his relations with Poland as excellent.

No word was said in Germany of the maltreatment of Germans in Poland. On the contrary this is how Herr Hitler himself described his friendship for Poland:

In the Reichstag of May 21, 1935: "We recognise the Polish State as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and the cordial friendship of candid nationalists.'

In the Reichstag of Feb. 20, 1938: "In the fifth year which followed the coming into force of the first great international conference concluded by the Reich, we state with genuine admiration that our relations with that State with which we had perhaps the greatest antagonism, are not only characterised by a detente, but that in the course of the past years, these relations resulted in a more and more friendly drawing together.

All Friction Removed

"I know full well that this is chiefly due to the fact that at that time there was not a western parliamentarian in Warsaw, but a Polish marshal whose commanding personality realized the importance for Europe of such a detente between Germany and Poland.

"The value of this was questioned by many at the time, but it has now passed the test and I may well say that since the League of Nations has ceased its continuous efforts at disturbance in Danzig and appointed a new commissioner, a man of personality, this most dangerous place for the peace of Europe has entirely lost its menacing significance.

"The Polish State respects the national conditions in this country and that city and Germany respect Polish rights. Thus it was possible to find the way to an understanding which, emanating from Danzig, in spite of the assertions of many mischief makers, has succeeded in removing all friction between Germany and Poland and made it possible to work together in true amity."

Understanding Found

Once again in this Sport Palast on Sept. 26, 1938, Herr Hitler said: "Poland was ruled by a man and not by a democracy. With his collaboration it was possible to bring about in less than one year an agreement which to begin with excluded the danger of a clash for a period of ten years. We are all convinced that this agreement will result in a lasting appeasement. We realize that there are two nations which must live side by side and neither of which is in a position to eliminate the other.

"A State with 33,000,000 inhabitants will always strive to have an outlet to the sea. It was therefore necessary to find a way to an understanding. This way has been found and will be consolidated. This was really a peaceful action which is worth more than the whole of the babbling at the palace of the League of Nations in Geneva."

To return to the present speech. Herr Hitler asks further on with reference to his proposals for a settlement: "I do not know in what state of mind the Polish Government could have been to reject such proposals."

Word Flagrantly Broken

The answer is that the Polish Government had before their eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German Government at Munich. They knew that these demands were only the preliminary to further exactions.

If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises.

"Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe" was an undertaking which had been broken too fragrantly and too often. The tale of Herr Hitler's broken promises is so long that he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations in the west.

And now compare what Herr Hitler tells us of Russia with what he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril.

Another Changed View

This is what he says now: "We have found that it is in the best interests of both our nations to have an understanding with each other. Thus the British assertion of the unlimited world political aspirations of Germany is finally contradicted. We shall never again fight a war in the interests of the Western democracies. Make a note of that my English gentlemen."

This is what he said then (in the Reichstag on Jan. 30, 1937):

"Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, of world destruction. . . . As far as Germany is concerned, I do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:

"1. We look upon bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world.

"2. We shall try and keep this danger away from the German people by every means at our command.

"3. We are, therefore, endeavoring to make the German people as immune as possible from this contagion.

"For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous baccilli. I request the German workers to avoid all contacts and relations with these international parasites, and consequently it will never occur that one will see me dining and wining with them. Furthermore, any treaty links between Germany and present-day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatsoever."

Again at the Nuremburg Party rally on Sept. 14, 1937: "I reject most emphatically to be joined up with those whose program is the destruction of Europe and who do not even try to conceal this program. To refuse to collabrate with such elements does not mean to isolate oneself, but to secure oneself."

Again, in the Reichstag on Feb. 20, 1938: "There is one State with which we have never sought close relationships and with which we do not want to have any close relationships. I mean Soviet Russia.

Travesty of Facts

"We must look upon Bolshevism as upon the incarnation of the destructive qualities of human nature, and we do so even more than ever before."

There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children.

The German Government have already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German Government can legitimately complain.

Finally, Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts.

He was determined on war and hoped to the last that Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when no reply had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German Government.

FRENCH CABINET

Firm Rejection of Bid

The Cabinet communique, first formal statement of French policy since the start of the war September 3, implied firm rejection of any German overtures for peace on terms such as were read here into Adolf Hitler's speech at Danzig yesterday.

The new measures approved by the Cabinet were described in the communique as "military, economic and financial". Their exact nature will become known only upon publication in the official journal.

On the Western Front, where the French General Staff's morning communique reported only German artillery fire, the armies appeared to have been held in leash pending clarification of the diplomatic situation.

Concentration Around Aachen

The French press published dispatches from Brussels reporting that Germans were concentrating around Aachen, which it was pointed out, is not on any of the direct routes leading to the fronts farther south where the French and German armies are fighting.

The French General staff, watching the situation closely, was reported taking precautions to meet "any eventuality". What measures were being taken remained a military secret, but informed persons believed they included strengthening French positions along the French-Belgian frontier with the British army co-operating.

The Cabinet's communique, issued after a three-hour meeting at the Elysee Palace, declared the union of France and Great Britain is "closer daily".

The meeting was the cabinet's first since Premier Daladier formed a war government Sept. 13.

The communique, without mentioning Adolf Hitler directly, served as the French reply to Hitler's speech yesterday at Danzig.

Nazi Offensive Expected.

Scattered fighting, meanwhile, surged along France's northeastern frontier, where a major Nazi offensive was expected with the arrival of troops released from the campaign in Poland.

Official reports on the progress of hostilities claimed several successes and voiced satisfaction with operations on the naval front. A semi-official announcement said "four or five" German submarines had been sunk by French warships—these in addition to a U-boat destroyed on Monday night.

"France and Britain will not let the dictatorship of Hitler condemn the world to slavery and ruin of all moral values and the destruction of liberty," said a commentary issued to the press.

Offer Falacious, Says Press.

Newspapers declared Hitler's 'peace offer' was 'falacious', and one said:

"Our answer is 'No, a thousand times no', because we do not want to begin the war again in six months under even worse conditions. Hitlerism must be destroyed."

Operations on the Polish front were acknowledged in Paris to be virtually ended, with only 16 or 17 Polish divisions reported in position to carry on the fight against an estimated 70 Nazi divisions.

By CHARLES FOLTZ
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Basel, Sept. 20 (AP)—Swiss observers reported today French and Nazi forces apparently are ready for a tremendous "test by fire" of the German Westwall fortifications.

The French, these observers said, have completed mass movements of men and materials preliminary to a major offensive against the heavy fortifications guarding the Reich's western frontier.

At the same time, the Germans were said to have concentrated behind the defences all the men and equipment that could be spared from the Polish campaign.

Action along the Blies River and Mandel Creek east of Saarbruecken, where French troops yesterday met resistance, led Swiss military men to conclude the French may have gone as far as they can with the use of patrols.

All along the western front between the Moselle River and the Vosges foothills at Wisembourg, a distance of about sixty miles, the French are meeting resistance which can be smashed only by a large-scale attack, observers declared.

Swiss tacticians strongly praised French military methods to date. They said General Maurice Gamelin, commander of the French-British forces, had gained offensive positions for his troops with minimum losses by the adroit use of small patrols.

It was the general view of Swiss observers that the French and British may strike through the hills in any one or all of three main sectors:

1. North of Sierck, with the Moselle River and neutral Luxembourg protecting the left flank and the Saar river the right.

2. Northwest from Saareguemines, which lies in the centre of the front between the Blies and Saar rivers.

3. North from Bitche on the extreme right.

In front of the French lines near Bitche lie the flat Rhine plains and the Palatinate City of Landau, but military experts call that path into Germany "a death trap".

Berlin May Counter Naval Blockade With Air Attack on England

President's Letter to Employees Details Manner in Which Company Will Aid in Prosecution of War

Berlin, Sept. 20 (CP)—Adolf Hitler's war policy speech in annexed Danzig was taken today by some observers as an indication the Nazis might attempt to use the German air fleet for an attack on England in retaliation of Britain's naval blockade.

Indication that the German Feuhrer might use the blockade as a pretext for mass bombings came when he referred to the blockade as a "fight against women and children."

Then he said: "The time could rapidly come when we could apply a weapon against which we cannot be attacked."

A few hours after Hitler recounted the progress of German troops in Poland, the Army High Command claimed new advances.

A communique said the battle near Kutno ended with more than 105,000 prisoners taken and 'enormous' losses to the enemy in dead and wounded. Hitler claimed 300,000 prisoners were captured.

The communique added:

"Along other fronts the enemy has practically given up resistance with the exception of a point northwest of Lwow where fighting with strong scattered enemy forces still continues."

The communique termed the battle near Kutno "one of the biggest destructive battles of all times."

OCCUPY GDYNIA HARBOR.

BERLIN, Sept. 20 (AP)—The German Army High Command today issued the following communique on operations in Poland:

"The battle near Kutno ended yesterday southwest of Wyszogrod. One hundred and five thousand prisoners were taken but the number is increasing steadily. The amount of war material captured cannot be estimated at present. Enemy losses in dead and wounded are enormous.

"Along other fronts the enemy has practically given up resistance with the exception of a point northwest of Lwow where fighting with strong scattered enemy forces still continues.

"Fighting near Gdynia ended with occupation of the naval harbor."

NO CHANGES IN WARSAW ZONE.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 20 (AP)—The following communique from the commander of Warsaw's defence was read last night over the Warsaw radio (11:50 p.m., 6:50 p.m. EDT):

"The day of Sept. 19 brought no changes in the Modlin and Warsaw zones.

"In the central zone our troops are fighting valiantly.

"The military command announces that Soviet troops have arrived in the environs of Lwow.

"We are forced again to protest the bombardment of Warsaw's central part. Among the edifices destroyed are the Royal Palace of Belvedere, the Parliament Buildings and several old Churches as well as hundreds of other buildings, hospitals and legations.

"Warsaw will resist. We have confidence in our government and confidence in our great allies in France and Great Britain. Warsaw is doing its duty.

"St. John's Cathedral has been bombed. The projectiles continued to fall before the church during Mass. When crowds of the faithful were emerging German airplanes machine-gunned them.

"A guardian of the Belvedere art treasures was killed in the park. Many war cemeteries are now in the public parks of Warsaw."

B. C. I. Enter Competitive Sports Under C. O. S. S. A. After Absence of 3 Years

Will Sponsor Six and Twelve-Man Rugby Squads Says Director

OFFICERS NAMED

Schedules for Both Loops Adopted at Enthusiastic Meeting

After an absence of three years from C.O.S.S.A. sports competition, the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School returned to the Bay of Quinte group of the provincial Secondary Schools rugby football group at the annual meeting of the Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. held in Belleville.

Only boys' sport will be sponsored by the B.C.I. & V.S., in conventional 12-man rugby football and also in the newly instituted six-man football game. In the conventional 12-man game Albert College and Belleville Collegiate will enter competition, with Trenton Collegiate, O.S.D., Albert College and Belleville Collegiate all sponsoring teams in the new-fangled six-man football group. Schedules in both groups were adopted.

Schools Represented

All schools in the Bay of Quinte district of the C.O.S.S.A. were represented at the annual meeting, that saw new group officers elected to office. Picton C.I., Marmora H.S., Madoc H.S., Albert College, O.S.D., Napanee C.I., Trenton C.I., Stirling H.S., and the Belleville Collegiate were all present. The group was again divided into two sections, north and south. In the northern division Tweed, Madoc, Marmora and Stirling will all compete in rugby football, basketball and ice hockey.

In the southern group, however, Picton and Napanee declined to operate football teams in the group while only the Belleville Collegiate and Albert College will sponsor the conventional 12-man rugby squads in provincial C.O.S.S.A. competition, Trenton and the O.S.D. signifying their willingness to foster six-man football squads, however.

Elect Officers

The election of officers of the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S.A. resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.: W. J. Morrison, O.S.D.
President: Shaw McEwan, Trenton.
Vice-Pres.: John Good, Stirling.
Sec.-Treas.: T. E. Moffatt, Tweed.

The various conveners for the group were also named and included—twelve-man rugby—N. A. Beach (Albert College); six-man football—Geo. Laughlin (B.C.I.O); hockey—El Mundy (Stirling); Girls' basketball—Miss Townsend (Trenton) and Boys' basketball—Andy Egan (Napanee). The Picton delegation announced that Picton Collegiate would have to definitely withdraw from all secondary school sporting activities this season on account of increased expenses, but would endeavour to place a hockey team in the C.O.S.S.A. if at all possible next winter. This decision pertained to boys' as well as girls' sports.

Schedules Adopted

The rugby football schedules for the northern group will be issued by Secretary Moffatt of Tweed, at a later date, while the two district football schedules were adopted for the southern groups last night.

In the 12-man football group, that is composed of Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate, Albert will play their home games on their new school campus while the B.C.I. will hold forth on the Fair Grounds. This schedule was announced as follows:

Oct. 4th—B.C.I. at Albert.
Oct. 11th—Albert at B.C.I.
Oct. 18th—B.C.I. at Albert.
Oct. 25th—Albert at B.C.I.

The fifth and deciding game will be played on Nov. 1st if necessary.

With Trenton, O.S.D., and Albert College and B.C.I. in the six-man football group, this schedule was announced as follows:

Oct. 6th—Trenton at Belleville; Albert at O.S.D.
Oct. 13th—Albert at Trenton; Belleville at O.S.D.
Oct. 20th—O.S.D. at Trenton; Albert at Belleville.
Oct. 27th—Trenton at Albert; O.S.D. at Belleville.
Nov. 3rd—Belleville at Trenton; O.S.D. at Albert.
Nov. 10th—Trenton at O.S.D. and Belleville at Albert.

In the six-man series neither Belleville nor Albert College will qualify for the C.O.S.S.A. playdowns as these two schools are represented in the conventional 12-man provincial playdowns.

Major Bowling League Ready For Opening Games

Despite the balmy atmosphere the "maple knockers" are preparing for a fall and winter campaign of their favorite sport bowling. A meeting of the Major League was held at the Tip Top Tailors store under the direction of Newton Wilburn, the president of the loop and some worthwhile suggestions for the betterment of the loop were made and adopted. Already there are five teams entered which include Belleville Golf, champions of last year, Belleville Fruit, Adams Shoe, Deacons and Tip Top Tailors and a sixth team to round out the loop is being sought.

Prizes will be given for the best score by a team, the high individual average, high three string and high single for the season. All prizes will be substantial cash donations and worthwhile striving for. The first four teams will enter into the playoffs and in case of defaulted games, the team appearing will receive two points and if they roll their three string and go over 3,100 pins will be given four points. All the players will be handicapped on a basis of 210 as scratch. Each player will be given two-thirds of the difference between what he rolls and 210 for each game. Those rolling over 630 for three strings will not receive a handicap.

The official opening of the Fall and Winter loop will take place on September 28th and the boys are quite enthusiastic and are getting in a few practice games before the opening. Stub Barrett will be in charge of the alleys again this winter and he has assured the bowlers that the alleys have been put in splendid condition during the summer months and everything has been arranged for the comfort of all bowlers.

Wings Hold Two-Game Lead for Championship of International Loop

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 20—(AP)—With a 2-0 lead in the finals of International League Governor's Cup playoff series following their 2-0 whitewashing of the Bears here last night, Rochester Red Wings will aim for their seventh consecutive victory in post-season competition at Newark tonight.

Manager Billy Southworth named Ken Raffensberger, Rochester southpaw, as his probable mound choice. Opposing him will be Hank Borowy, former Fordham University ace.

Si Johnson, veteran righthander, subdued the Bears last night, allowing only four hits and striking out the side in order in the ninth inning.

ARGOS' KICKING, OUTSIDE WINGS WILL BE WEAKER

Football Champs Not Falling Apart, However

HAYMAN BLUE

By GEORGE GRACE
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Toronto, Sept. 20—That past master at presenting a pessimistic physiognomy was in again! Lew Hayman, the man who can cast verbal palls of gloom while at the same time he chortles deep within himself, was speaking:

"It looks like a bad year. No kicker—no end replacements. And that Ottawa and that Montreal getting stronger every day."

And Mr. Hayman had just cause for moaning. His chosen task in the autumn of each year is to guide the Argonauts of this city through their schedule of football games in the Big Four. For the past two years he had performed in this role so capably that his charges had not only posted a fine record in sweeping aside opposition in their own league, but had gone hurtling straight ahead until they had won two Dominion championships.

And They're Still Good

This year the Scullers, as Hayman's team is frequently referred to for variety, look very, very good again in the practices they have held so far, and in keeping with the unwritten law of football coaches, Lew is (for publication purposes) deep in the blue.

If a good team one year is shot full of holes by movements of its players or retirements and the coach has a green but enthusiastic squad to work with the next fall, that coach usually bubbles with enthusiasm—that is, of course, as far as it is possible for a coach to bubble with enthusiasm. Which isn't too far.

But when the gridiron picture has a rosy hue to everyone else the unwritten code calls of the coach most concerned to drink deeply from the nearest cup of woe—and there's usually one fairly close at hand.

So Lew was taking deep draughts over the plight of his champions. Of course many of his men were not in shape, others had peculiar ideas as to their relative importance to the team—and there were other common or garden variety of complaints. But the chief trouble seemed to centre on his kicking and outside wings.

Last year the hoofing was in the capable hands of Bob Isbister and when large Robert moved to Hamilton the champs lost more than just a kicker. As an all-round backfielder—kicker, steady man, secondary and extension runner—the scion of the Hamilton rugby Isbister had few equals. And so far none of the rest of the Argonaut backfielders had shown signs of picking up in those numerous departments to make up for his loss.

At outside wing Hayman had a couple of fellows named Cutler and Thornton—the best pair at their positions in the country. The runners those boys held to infinitesmal gains in the open field and around the ends, if laid end to end, could be worked into an attractive design. Thornton is back, but Cutler has called it a day, and replacing him on the line is proving to be a bit of a task.

One good outside wing is handy to have around, but unfortunately there are always two ends to a line and two sides to approach a ballcarrier from. Tony McCarthy of Ottawa gave away little if anything to the Toronto pair in ability last year, but he could only be in one place at one time.

So Lew has his problems. Not bearing much resemblance perhaps to those of Ted Reeve with his Montreal Royals, Frank Tyndall and his Queen's university squad, Art Massucci and his Sarnia Imperials or some others you can probably think of, but problems, nonetheless.

And containing sufficient gloom to last through a good slice of conversation. It was only when football talk was interspersed with baseball talk—you never can get a gridiron mastermind completely off his subject—that Coach Hayman began to wax enthusiastic. The subject of his enthusiasm was Red Rolfe, Yankee third baseman, and when he got to work expounding the many virtues that made Mr. Rolfe stand out over Cleveland's Ken Keltner, St. Louis' Harland Clift, and others, one might have thought on meeting him at that point, that Cutler and Isbister had rejoined the team.

Louis Already Plans Victory Celebration

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—"Confidence" is Joe Louis' middle name for tonight's fight with Bob Pastor.

The heavyweight champion has his victory celebration all planned.

First he'll attend a "little party" at the home of his co-manager John Roxborough. Then he'll keep a promise to drop into a certain night club, and thence to a second night club in Detroit's little Harlem for the "main celebration."

"I got a table reserved there for 14," he said.

Two Pick Pastor

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Joe Louis to flatten Bob Pastor by a knockout in less than a dozen rounds—that's the consensus of the newspaper experts here from all sections of the country to cover tonight's world's heavyweight championship battle.

Only two of the writers polled—Jack Miley of the New York Evening Post and Al Buck of the same paper—picked Pastor.

Cardinals Gain Full Game On Reds in Tightest Race In History of National Loop

Cards Take Dodgers 6-1 While Reds Swamped by Phillies 13-1

100th WIN FOR YANKS

Paul Waner of Pirates Hits Safely in Twenty Straight Games

(By Bill Boni Associated Press Sports Writer).

The accepted theory among big league baseball managers in recent years has been that the best bet for stopping New York Yankees is to feed them left-handres.

This theory has a certain amount of justification in the records. Since Cincinnati Reds already are accepting ticket orders for next month's world series, it also must have entered the mind of Manager Bill McKechnie.

But how long it stayed there is something else again. When it comes to effective southpaws, Manager Bill is none too well-equipped. He tried to get by with one again yesterday, and the results were sad indeed. McKechnie called on Johnny Vander Meer to face the Phillies, but Johnny didn't face them long. He pitched to three men and filled the bases, threw three bad ones at the next batter, and was through for the afternoon.

Lose By 13-1

So were the Reds. They lost the ball game by 13-1 and, since St. Louis Cardinals turned back Brooklyn Dodgers 6-1, the Reds had their first-place margin reduced to 2 1-2 games.

The Cards, meantime, got fine pitching from Max Lanier, rookie southpaw who gave Brooklyn five hits, while his mates pounded out 14 safeties to break the Dodgers' five-game winning streak and push them a notch deeper into fourth place.

That push was aided by Chicago Cubs' 3-2 decision over New York Giants, gained chiefly through Hank Leiber's homer, a wild pitch by Harry Gumbert that put the deciding run on base, and effective pitching by Charley Root.

Waner Second in Batting

In the other National League engagement, Paul Waner's triple and single ran his consecutive-game batting streak to 20 games, moved him into second place in the league hitting parade and helped down Boston Bees 5-3.

The champion Yankees notched their 100th victory by 6-2 over Chicago White Sox, to top American League activities, which also saw the second-place Boston Red Sox improve their claim to beating St. Louis Browns 6-2; Washington Senators nosed out Cleveland Indians 10-9, despite an Indian triple play, and Detroit Tigers whip the Athletics 8-4, with the help of Hank Greenberg's 30th homer.

BIG "T" MAN BACK IN N. Y.

William Tilden, Racquet Star, Hurries Home When War Breaks Out

New York, Sept. 20—(AP)—The big "T" man is in town. He is William Tate Tilden, the man who made big business out of a racquet.

He arrived on the United States liner Washington with several hundred other hurry-homers, convinced that 2 1-2 years abroad is just enough.

He looks about the same as when he left does "Big Bill." He still has that long, lean, hungry look. His thinning hair is perpetually at high tide, his eyelids droop sleepily, and his gestures are the same quick, flighty movements which intrigued galleries from Forest Hills to the Malay Peninsula.

"We—Don Budge, Les Stoefen, Ellsworth Vines and I—played quite a bit in England, and also Paris, Bordeaux and Marseilles," he said.

"We were planning to leave for South Africa last Thursday, to start our world tour, but decided it wasn't such a good idea to be world touring right now."

40,000 EXPECTED TO WATCH LOUIS AND PASTOR BOX

Fight Will be Over 20 Round Route and Champion Favored to Win

LOUIS ANGRY

Brown Bomber Thinks He Can Mow Pastor Down in Five Rounds or Less

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—After a lapse of nearly three years, champion Joe Louis tonight resumes his chase after the little imp who once eluded him and injured his pride.

Joe and Bob Pastor meet at Briggs stadium before a crowd that is expected to reach the 40,000 mark. This time the feeling is that the big negro will catch and pulverize his quarry.

This time he will have 201 pounds in everp respect than he was when of the 10 they rougnt in Madison Square Garden before Louis became champion. He will have an advantage of about 15 pounds in weight, and he is a greater fighter in every hespect than he was when free-wheeling Bob held him to a hollow decision.

Angry For Three Years

Louis has been angry at Pastor for nearly three years. He has felt all that time that the New York boy made a sucker out of him, and he has yearned to get Bob in the ring with him again.

And tonight, before the home folks, he finally gets his chance to close out that account. He fully intends to knock Pastor kicking in the first round. Bookmakers around town are offering odds of 7 to 1 against Pastor's chances, and doing practically no business at all.

Pastor Confident

Pastor has a chance, of course. He is young, is an exceptionally clever boxer and hits pretty well. Last night, sitting around the hotel and talking, he said he thought he might knock Louis out. His Manager, Jimmy Johnston, said it was a cinch.

"Don't forget that I told you what was going to happen to this great champion. Louis has been trapped ever since he agreed to fight us 20 rounds. He'll be worn out about half way, and then watch Bob work on him."

It could happen, one supposes. But it is necessary to string along with Louis, in about two rounds.

Basketball Team Members To Get Back to Vancouver B. C. Forced to Sign Notes in Shanghai

By H. L. JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver, Sept. 20—(CP)—Vancouver Westerns came home last night from a two-months' basketball tour of Japan with an enviable record—but travelling "on the cuff."

Manager Pete Winckler and eight of his charges reported 12 victories out of 19 starts. After playing six games in Japan, one in Manchoukuo, three in Korea, six in Manila, two in Hong Kong and one in Shanghai, they were en route to Tokyo to catch their ship home when the second Great War broke out. Their boat was held two days at Shanghai and they missed their connection home.

"Without funds we had to sign promissory notes to get here," Winckler said. "They wouldn't let us ashore and then they gave us five minutes to decide whether we were going to sail or stay in Shanghai. We decided to sail— so here we are."

Play Rough in Manila

"They played awful rough in Manila," said the manager of the team that held the Dominion basketball crown in 1937. "We had to be escorted out by the police once but we won four games out of six down there."

Among other experiences, the team was dined by Prince Takamatsu, second brother of the Japanese Emperor.

The team—11 players and manager Winckler—sailed on a Japanese liner from Vancouver for Tokyo June 21 on a tour sponsored by Japanese newspapers. All expenses were paid by their sponsors while they were in Japan.

Four of the players—guards Emmett Ritchie and Dick Wright and trainer Fred Bolton and Jimmy Bardsley, came home earlier by another route.

"The Japanese play quite a different brand of ball from us," Winckler said, "but we couldn't learn much from them. They are light and fast and have a queer style around the net, jumping off both feet every time they make a shot.

"They still use the old laced ball, though, and we were hampered quite a bit by that. But I think we did pretty well. Of the seven games we lost, five were by but two points two by four points and one by seven points."

Ken J. Colling

Something that has been needed at the Belleville Collegiate Institute for many years came into being recently in the institution of a Boys' Athletic Society, an organization to foster and sponsor sports and athletics for inter-school competition. For the past three years B.C.I. has not been represented or competed in the C.O.S.S.A. sports program, but this week under the sponsorship of the Boys' Athletic Society of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, the "tri-color" will again wave before the Bay of Quinte group breezes in common competition with district secondary schools in rugby football. Providing this venture proves satisfactory and a financial success, no doubt the B.C.I. will return to the interscholastic hockey wars as well. In years past the Belleville Collegiate was a powerful threat throughout Central Ontario in the C.O.S.S.A. football wars and on several occasions won top honors. Wally Hilton, now with Western, Bud Johnson at Queen's and Jimmie Follwell at the O.A.C. are all products of previous champion Belleville Collegiate rugby football squads.

A new form of football will be introduced to the grid fans of this district in six-man rugby, a game introduced first into Canada by George Laughlin, physical director at the Collegiate, three years ago. Grouped with the Belleville Collegiate in this new and thrilling game will be Trenton C.I., Albert College and the O.S.D. In the conventional 12-man football game however, only Albert College and the Collegiate entered teams for competition in the Bay of Quinte group, but Marmora, Tweed, Madoc and Stirling are all in common competition in the Trent Valley group of senior interscholastic football and the winners of these two groups will meet for the district honors in November. The conventional game will open with B.C.I. at Albert College on Oct. 4. In the opening game Albert College will play on their newly-acquired football field, which is situated on the school campus directly west of the present site of Albert College. The Collegiate, however, will play all of their games at the Fair Grounds, as in years past.

For the past three years Athletic Instructor George Laughlin has been carrying on a campaign of inter-form sports at the Collegiate, during which six-man football has been featured. No doubt the system has developed more players than under the old system of one team in the school. Mr. Laughlin stated he intended to continue the practice of inter-form sport competition and leave the sponsoring of the Collegiate senior interscholastic football squad solely in the hands of the Boys' Athletic Society. What effect the return of the Collegiate to the senior interscholastic football wars will have upon the proposed Belleville Junior O.R.F.U. team's future is hard to forecast, as many of the players counted on by Eddie Schryder are students at the B.C.I. and will naturally lean their football efforts towards the school rather than a city team. However, the return of the B.C.I. to the interscholastic rugby set-up should prove not only popular, but will have a tendency to develop players for the subsequent return of the O.R.F.U. game to Belleville in future years.

We understand Newt Wilbur is trying to induce our Ontario Intelligencer "inkslingers" to set-up into the Major Bowling League this fall and thereby round out a six-teamed loop. Already the Major League has five teams ready for the fray, the chamipon Belleville Golf trundlers, Belleville Fruit, Adams Shoes, Deacon Sportwear and Newt Wilbur's Tip Top quintette. The Major Bowling League at the Recreation Alleys this season will introduce a new system of scoring, inasmuch as all players will be handicapped on a basis of 210 as scratch, thus if a good bowler happens to fall by the wayside with several blows in one individual game, his total score will not be too badly affected. Another good feature will be the penalty imposed upon teams failing to appear on scheduled dates, which is carried in full detail elsewhere in today's issue. Likewise the bowling leagues at the Y. M. C. A. alleys will soon announce their season's schedules and soon the trundlers will hold full sway, so says Stub Barrett, genial manager of the Recreation Alleys.

Old time hockey and baseball fans will doubtless be surprised to hear that Vince Brennan is employed in Belleville once again. Vince will be in the city for some weeks with a large and well-known tailoring company, that employs Newt Wilbur as the local branch manager. Vince Brennan played hockey and baseball for Belleville just after the turn of the present century, being as classy a shortstop as ever snagged a ground ball on this city's sandlots.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about Leo Durocher's play with Brooklyn this season is the marked improvement in his hitting since he has "managerial worries". It is rare that a playing manager improves at bat after taking on the cares of running a ball club. More often it is the other way. The great Napoleon Jajoie, after averaging .360 at bat eleven years ago in the majors, fell to .299 in 1907 and .289 in 1908 as playing manager. In the latter year, while managing Cleveland, he lost the pennant by a half game. Relieved of his managerial worries in mid-season, 1909, he was back to .324 and in his first complete freedom from worries in 1910, he bounded to .384. It has been just the opposite with Durocher. His two seasons just before assuming the Brooklyn management were his poorest at bat in the majors. He fell to .203 with the Cardinals in 1937 and the once "All American Out" raised it only eight points to .211 in his first season with Brooklyn, 1938. This season, as head man of the Dodgers he is clipping along at a .285 pace, some 45 points above his major league average.

Joe Louis defends his world's heavyweight crown for the eighth time tonight in Detroit against Bob Pastor, who surprised the fistic world by staying the route with Louis two years ago. Upwards to 40,000 are expected to see the second bout, that is over the 20 round route. This bout marks the first time a heavyweight title has been defended in a 20 round bout, the Johnson-Willard bout being the last championship bout we remember to have gone over 19 rounds. "If he gets on his bicycle again, I'll catch up with him about the seventh or eighth," predicted the champion, while Pastor poohhoos such talk and says—"I stayed the limit with Louis, when I was 23 years of age, but this time I'll catch him fos a K.O. and I'll make it early," were Pastor's words. However, we feel if Louis catches up with Pastor, be ready to turn your radio off between the sixth and eighth. Incidentally the fight doesn't go on the air until 10.30 p.m. Belleville time, unless called before owing to threatening weather.

B. C. I. Machine-Shop Facilities Offered To the Government

All facilities of the machine-shops and manual training rooms of Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School have been offered to the government, Chairman Russell Wotten stated this morning. The offer, it was added, was subject, of course, to the approval of the Department of Education, Toronto.

Shortage of skilled machine and lathe operators in Canada will likely result in the training of youths in this important work, it has been suggested.

Canadian Destroyer Drops Depth Bomb In Suspicious Area

Halifax, Sept. 20 (CP)—A Canadian destroyer dropped a depth charge during a search for a suspected submarine "off the Nova Scotia Coast" yesterday, according to a statement issued last night by the Commander of the Naval Dockyard here.

The statement, by Commander H. E. Reid, Senior Naval Officer at Halifax, said "fairly reliable reports indicate that a submarine may have been operating off the Nova Scotia Coast today.

The Commander did not reveal the spot where the charge was dropped. Shore observers said, however, that a column of water shooting skyward astern of a destroyer off Chebucto Head indicated a charge had been dropped there.

The statement said the explosive had been dumped overboard in a "suspicious area." It was not known whether the charge took effect.

(Chebucto Head is near the entrance of the outer harbor and about 10 miles from Halifax.)

The naval officer did not disclose the source of the report that the submarine was off the Province.

Commander Reid's announcement:

"Fairly reliable reports indicate that a submarine may have been operating off the Nova Scotia coast today.

"Search by sea and air was instituted. As a result, a destroyer dropped a depth charge in a suspicious area.

"Results of the attack by the destroyer are unknown."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, Dont make yourself too comfortable, Willyum, we're due over at the Hewses for a little bridge this evening.

I'm looking fallward to it, I wont say with what, pop said. Cant we call them up and inquire whether either of them hasn't got a slite head ake? That's only the polite thing to do, isn't it? he said, and ma said, Now Willyum it's absurd to be so rediculous.

I have time for a smoke first, anyway, pop said. Horse blanket to blazes not a single cigar. Benny, chase around to Pawll's cigar store and get me 3 Queen Billies, he said.

And he gave me the money and I started to go, and pretty soon pop heard me still down in the hall and he called down, For Peet sake haven't you gone yet, come back here.

Wich I did, and pop said, Now I'd like to know why you were still in the house when you should of been half way back with my cigars, and I said, I was trying for about the 5th time to walk all a ways to the front door with my eyes shut without brushing against anything, and if you think that's easy you ought to try it.

Yee gods when are you going to get some inkling of the value of time? pop said. Time is money, do you know what that means? he said, and I said, Yes sir.

I doubt it, pop said. You're like a lot of other people. They realize perfectly that there are a hundred cents in a doller but they haven't the faintest conception that it takes 60 good minutes to make an hour, so they waste hours at bridge that could be spent reading good books, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum we're not going to call off that engagement, so speaking of wasting time that's just what you're doing if you have any such ulterior thought.

I guess it's just one big vicious circle and we're all pushing it around, pop said.

Meaning wasting time, and he made me give him his money back so he could get his own cigars on the way.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, September 21

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THIS MAY not be a day of much action or satisfaction in a business way, judging by the mutual and lunar aspects. Things may move out moderately in commercial grooves, but there is promise of progress in all matters pertaining to art and culture, and in social occupations. There may be some sudden rearrangements of plans or environs involved in this, but shun undue extravagance. In social or sentimental relations there may be much activity and pleasure. Feminine interests flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a successful, pleasant and progressive year if their interests lie in channels of art, music, culture or similar matters, rather than in purely commercial lines. But in these directions be careful not to be extravagant or lavish. Social, sentimental and romantic associations are assured happy indulgence.

A child born on this day may be restive, unsettled, adventurous and fairly ambitious, but it may lack tenacity and practicality, leaning toward indulgence and extravagance, especially in siocial or romantic enjoyments.

"I Stole a Million"

|---|---|
| Joe Lourik | George Raft |
| Laura Benson | Claire Trevor |
| Paul Carver | Dick Foran |
| Nick | Henry Armetta |
| Patton | Victor Jory |
| Double-Hat | George Chandler |
| Billings | Joe Sawyer |

The next attraction at the McCarthy Theatre, "I Stole a Million", is the actual story of a man who really stole a million and to give you an advance insight on the story we are herewith outlining briefly Joe Lourik's story as told on the screen.

I know I am covered with the stigma of guilt and don't deserve an ounce of sympathy, even from the girl I love.

I am asking no quarter. But, before I play my last card, I want everyone to know the truth, which can be done by attending the theatre that is playing the picture, the story of my life, they will flash a thousand pictures of me as portrayed by George Raft—and I want you to judge and condemn me personally.

I want you to see how I was doomed by a minor-mishap. I felt that I had been double-crossed by destiny—that I had been denied my heritage.

As the price for my escape from innocence I had about decided to play the game, as long as I had the name.

That's when I met Laura Benson. On the screen, you'll call her Claire Trevor, but she'll always be Laura to me.

I fought desperately to land a job. I slipped and gambled—with my last cent. Then came the police—wanting me.

I ran as I would from the rumble of an approaching horror. With passionate intensity, I fought to save the greatest love I had ever known.

Then they threatened HER—arrested her as an accomplice in crime!

I don't remember much that happened after that. They say I went mad with my unquenchable thirst for thrills—drunk with desire to defy every man-made law—that I was reeking with the poison of my purpose—to take what I wanted wherever I found it, because the world had stolen my happiness!

Whatever I did, you can see for yourself—up to the time I discovered a solution to the whole mess I had made of myself, and figured—a way out!

Up to that point of my life, they tell me I stole a million!

Do you think I deserved to beat the rap?

I can hear you saying, "Definitely Not!"

But come, and see!

The McCarthy Theatre program in addition to "I Stole a Million" will also include an excellent Andy Clyde comedy entitled "Trouble Finds Andy Clyde", chapter two of "Mandrake the Magician" and an unusual cartoon entitled "Magic Beans".

AT THE BELLE

"Bachelor Mother"

Paired for the first time, Ginger Rogers and David Niven are costarred in the Belle Theatre's new romantic laugh hit, "Bachelor Mother".

Weaving a unique and clever love story into its hilarious plot, "Bachelor Mother" has Ginger as a salesgirl in a metropolitan department store, in which Niven appears as the store's efficient and business-like executive-son of the owner, played by Charles Coburn.

Passing by an orphanage during her lunch hour, Ginger espies a woman leaving a baby on the steps and rush away. She goes to pick up the child and is seen by one of the institution's matrons who assumes that Ginger is the baby's mother. Her denials merely make matters worse, and an investigator is sent to the department store to check up.

This brings Ginger to Niven's attention who magnanimously enhances her job—if she will be a good "mother" and take proper care of "her" baby! Ginger goes berserk and desperately endeavors to make the orphanage take the child. Failing, she tries to wish it on to Niven.

Horrified, Niven lectures her on her inhuman conduct and using her job as a threat, forces her to rear the youngster. The consequent association between Ginger and Niven arouses the jealousy of her self-appointed boy friend, a young stock clerk in the store, who anonymously misinforms Coburn that Niven is the father of Ginger's child.

This leads to a hilarious climax of the picture, when Coburn tries to make Niven marry the girl so that he may claim the infant as his grandson.

In keeping with the atmosphere of "Bachelor Mother", elaborate settings were constructed for the department store sequences as well as for the Coburn-Niven home, and for various night clubs and dance halls. As in Miss Rogers' recent "Vivacious Lady", Coburn again plays the role of the auburn-haired star's prospective father-in-law, while such favorites as Frank Albertson, E. E. Clive, Ernest Truex, Ferike Boros and Leonard Penn have important roles.

"Moving Vanities", a funny Leon Errol comedy, "Tempest Over Tunis" a timely and interesting traveltalk, and "The Zoo", a clever screen realism complete a splendid varied program of entertaining junior features.

Present Gift To George Cook

Minto—On Wednesday evening of last week a number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. Fred Cook in honor of his son George, who has given his support to military force and the next day was to go to Madoc. The gathering showed the esteem in which George is held in this community and we are sorry to learn of his departure from our midst. Mr. Jack Donahue called the gathering to order and George was asked to come forward and Mrs. Harold Morgan read the following address:

Minto, Ont., Sept 12, 1939

Dear George:

Having learned of your departure from this community, to take an active part in the military support of our country and to help maintain the rights for which our Union Jack stands.

You have always been one of the young and lively boys of this community, and we regret to see you go, yet we feel proud of you. We would like to show in some small way our feelings toward you.

Please George accept this ring, remembering when you look at it your many friends at home.

Signed on behalf of the community, Harold Morgan, Lorne Hagerman.

George thanked his friends for the gift, after all joined in singing "For he's a jolly good fellow." Lunch was then served.

herself in the near future. Italian ships were reported on all seas.

While General Franco of Spain has cancelled off a scheduled visit to Rome this month, Fascist officials suggested that Franco and Premier Mussolini were keeping in close touch. There was a belief Franco might visit Rome in November.

In Belgrade, negotiations for recognition of Soviet Russia by Yugoslavia and conclusion of a Non-Aggression Pact were reported reliably under way. Hitherto, Yugoslavia and Russia have not had diplomatic relations.

The Baltic States were concerned by reports from Tallinn that the Russian Navy had blockaded the Coast of Estonia.

Despite Russia's assurances of neutrality, there were indications she intends to dominate the North Baltic, where she is said to want an ice-free port.

Representatives of five northern neutrals ended a two-day conference at Copenhagen last night with a joint declaration of their intention to remain neutral and uphold their rights to trade with all countries. Represented were Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Iceland.

TWO CAPTURED

Montreal burglars, who were convicted of robbing Mr. Barlow's store at Bonarlaw some months ago and sentenced to prison. Gauthier and Le Blanc were only released from prison recently and apparently proceeded directly to Mr. Barlow's store. The man captured in Peterboro following an exchange of shots by Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond, Madoc, is said to be Cecil Hutt, of Peterboro', while a companion escaped, police revealed.

Notified Police

After Mr. Barlow had captured Gauthier and Le Blanc in his store, he immediately notified Constables Gray of Marmora and Dymond of Madoc. Before the arrival of the police, however, Hutt and his companion, acting as lookouts in a waiting motor car, became suspicious and speeded rapidly away upon the arrival of Constable Gray, nearly causing an accident. Later, Constable Dymond observed a motor car speeding towards Marmora from Bonarlaw and gave chase. The occupants in the fleeing car tossed pillows and blankets out of their speeding vehicle along highway No. 7 in an effort to wreck Constable Dymond's pursuing car. When they arrived in Peterboro Constable Dymond was assisted by waiting Peterboro' officers, and shots were exchange with the result that the fleeing bandit car crashed against a street curb in Peterboro' and wrecked. Police soon captured Hutt, but his companion escaped.

The trio captured were today lodged in the local jail awaiting trial.

This afternoon Provincial Constable A. Dymond and Chief P. Gray of Marmora, remanded the three men to the custody of the Hastings County jail, at which time it was learned that a Marmora taxi driver, by the name of Sopha, had materially assisted Mr. Barlow in the capturing of Gauthier and Leblanc.

WARSAW BURIES

Russian troops along the Rumanian border cut the stream of refugees from Poland, and thousands were diverted into Hungary. Soldiers among them were disarmed and civilians were sent to special camps.

Broadcasts from Warsaw, entering the 13th day of siege, presented graphic picture of a city whose defenders had vowed to resist the Germans to the death and seemed to be doing it.

Confidence in Allies

"Warsaw will resist," said a communique read from the Capital's radio station last night. "We have confidence in our government and confidence in our great Allies, France and Britain. Warsaw is doing its duty."

The communique went on to tell of widespread destruction from German bombs and shells, of bombs that fell before St. John's cathedral as worshippers emerged from mass, of machine-gun attacks from the air on churchgoers.

The communique ended: "Many war cemeteries are now in the public parks of Warsaw."

Later, the Polish commander, a General Czuma, came on the air and broadcast a report his men had inflicted heavy losses on German infantry in the Praga suburban district to the east and also on the west.

"We Will Not Surrender"

Mayor Stefan Starzinski asked: "When will Britain and France give such aid to Poland as will save us from the fury of German barbarism, from new deaths, from destruction of the remaining buildings of our city?"

The announcer explained the "death of hundreds of thousands of women and children and other defenceless civilians of Warsaw" had "forced" the Mayor to put that question to Poland's Allies.

Every one of the speakers who alternated at the Warsaw microphone declared "we will not surrender." The station remained on the air throughout the night.

Polish Marches Played

Between the speeches, rousing Polish marches were played. As the night wore on, it became apparent the announcer had been instructed at half-hour intervals to read, in Polish, French and English, the Mayor's message asking that Allied help be sent.

Apparently the radio staff wearied as dawn approached. Announcements were reduced in number and the station reverted to its novel device of letting the world know that Warsaw was still in Polish hands by playing the opening bars of Chopin's "Polonaise" every 30 seconds.

A message last night from Mayor Starzinski to President Ignace Moscicki "wherever you may be" said Warsaw citizens were "doing their duty in an heroic manner." (President Moscicki is in Rumania.)

From Cernauti, Rumania, came stories of wealthy Polish aristocrats forced to sleep on billiard tables in the town's main coffee house.

There were touching scenes as Hungarians welcomed their traditional friends. There was warm food for all from temporary kitchens and sweets for the children.

Ukranians Uprising?

Poles who had passed through the Ukraine said Ukrainian uprisings had started as soon as Russian intervention was announced. The area 12 miles within the Polish frontier was said to be in lawless confusion.

At least five Polish battalions, fully equipped and followed by a supply train and field kitchens, crossed the border into Hungary and laid down their arms.

Polish railroad men said they were bringing 400 locomotives to Hungary when they were cut off by German armored cars. With the line blocked, the railroad men fled, leaving the locomotives to the enemy.

Why The Weather?

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and artillery! Nearly everyone believes that heavy projectiles fired from heavy guns go smashing through the air to their targets unaffected by weather conditions. As a matter of fact the artilleryman must take account of temperature, density and movement of the air to fire at all accurately. The projectile describes a curved path from the gun to the target, which path has considerable elevation, sometimes several miles. While traversing this path the projectile encounters densities and wind directions and speeds of different values which accelerate, retard or deflect it. To correct for these the weather unit of the army sends suitable data to the artillery many times a day.

Speech!

By AMY CAMPBELL

There was such a look of anxiety on her husband's countenance as he stepped in to dinner, that Bella Morris thought the worst.

"Well, I'm in for it at last," he announced. "I've got to make a speech at the club dinner!"

"Oh," said Bella in such relief Bill looked at her with severe envy.

Bill was like many men in that he secretly longed to be able to make a public speech if he ever had to. But he had openly sworn that he would never have to.

Bella was an optimist about everything and she believed, as few wives can, that there wasn't much Bill couldn't do and do well. She said: "You can do it better than anyone else there. Come on and have your dinner."

Bill followed his little wife feebly, but by the end of the meal there was a definite change for the better in him. His color was back. The speech was the topic of the family group of four. Isabella, their eighteen-year-old, informed Bill it was ridiculous of him to feel as he did. Nobody expected oratory in a club speech.

Bill Junior was quiet with some male understanding. "I'll get a book on public speaking from the Lib for you, Dad," he said in a way that did wonders to Bill's self esteem, until his daughter added: "one with gestures," and as if this were not enough, "Illustrated, you know."

After that the days of the Morris family were practically devoted to arranging and promoting the details and rendition of Bill's speech. It was his own idea that he try reciting some rhyme downstairs while Bella sat upstairs listening to see if his voice carried. It would be a gathering of hundreds and Bill felt, since he was going into it, he would like to be heard.

Bill Junior's book from the library had many valuable hints but as Bill Senior read them he felt they were written for the really clever after-dinner speakers who were already well established in the public eye. The book struck panic in him. He wanted to leave town or be taken suddenly ill the night of the club dinner.

The night of the dinner Bella glowed as she saw Bill drive off with a smile she knew he had manufactured just for her. "Your dad," she told her stoical children, "will be the hit of the evening. Something tells me!" Her children answered: "Sure" in a tone that lacked conviction.

As his hour approached, Bill with more frequency, mopped his perspiring hands. He seemed to be living through centuries. Men with no terminal facilities whatever went on and on in enviable abandonment and the crowd of smoke-dazed men was practically insensible when it neared Bill's turn. Even Bill felt he was gradually becoming entirely numb.

He was suddenly electrified to hear his own name called and in the din of feeble but polite applause he rose and lifted his eyes. After that he practically knew no more. He had thought he was familiar with the good old phases—Lord knows he had recited them often enough—but now he could remember nothing. He was conscious only of a swirling sea of faces.

He looked about him for a few times. He tried to swallow and found it impossible. He recalled suddenly he was to introduce himself and make a brief speech of welcome. It must be done. He had to do it, so he put his head back and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Every word he had prepared escaped capture. An utter helplessness seized him. He took one long wise look at the volcano of faces and said loudly—so Bell could easily have head had she been upstairs—

"Gentlemen — BILL MORRIS. Very pleased to meet you!"

And then in trepidation over the sound of his own voice, he turned in a terrible deliberation and sat down.

There was a brief silence and then the crowd seemed to go mad. They cheered and applauded and those near him nodded to Bill waggishly and pounded his shoulders. Some one was heard to say: "Neatest thing we ever heard, Bill. It takes you to think them up," and somewhere nearby he heard a remark that this was what made Bill such a big success in every way. He wasted on one's time. He always sair the right thing. Good old Bill.

When Bill could get to a telephone, he called Bella.

"Don't wait up, Bella. I've got it over and I don't care when I get home now. Just wanted you to know they seemed to like it—"

"Like it?" she breathed ecstastically. "Like it!" Then she sighed. Bill could hear her and it always meant something surprising. "They just went mad about it, would be better. Bill, you're that clever and you won't ever belidve it of yourself. After this you'll rely on your own unusual phrases when you have to make a speech, won't you?"

"Sure will,' Bill agreed absently. A belated wonder struck him: "How did you know about it so soon?"

"Why, why, you funny thing," Bella stuttered. "Didn't you know the dinner speeches were being broadcast? Didn't they tell you? You broadcast beautifully, Bill. Beautifully!"

It was then Bill realized how hard he had taken it. The mike and the mention of being on the air entirely lost on him. What a lot of unsuspected sensations there were left in the world. He had been on the air for the first time. Bella was a great girl. A great girl!

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 20—(CP)— Demand on Toronto exchange today revived prices. Industrials, base metals and western oils prices were marked up as much as 1 to 3 points in early trade. Trading was much heavier than on Tuesday.

All active steels ruled higher and gains predominated in the utility, paper, food and flour milling groups. Abitibi issues advanced on heavy trading under the outlook for a favorable reorganization of the company. The New Hamilton Bridge shares traded between 6 1-8 and 6 1-2. Gold shares, both common and preferred, were delisted.

Nickel, Noranda and smelters firmed 1 3-4 to 2 points and the cheaper base metal issues were strong. Gold shares were quiet but slightly firmer. Western oils, including Home, Calgary-Edmonton and Okalta, gained 6 to 10 cents.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Sept. 20—(AP)—War stocks encountered opposition on a forward drive today and the market gave up much of the ground won in early dealings.

Many traders cashed profits as steels, motors, chemicals and other groups extended the advance begun in the preceding session. Gains of fractions to more than a point were in the majority near the final hour.

Transactions were about 2,000,000 shares.

Product Market Remains Quiet

Toronto, Sept. 20.— Quiet trading, with little change in prices was reported for butter and eggs, at Toronto yesterday.

An easier tendency was evident on the butter market as demand was absent. Fresh Ontario receipts remained light, but resale lots were available to buyers in need of supplies. It was said that the print trade is now falling off, and this was inclined to slow trading. No. 1 Ontario creamery solids were quoted at nominal at 27 cents per pound.

Supplies were also small on the egg market, but offerings were sufficient to meet the quiet demand. Grade A medium was on the scarce side, and prices on this grade held firm.

LAKE FREIGHTERS COLLIDE IN CANAL

Both Boats Damaged Above Water Line According to Report

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 20 — (CP)—A collision between two Lake freighters, the Sarnia Steamship Line's Lockwell and the Canada Steamship Line's Fernie, was reported today to have taken place Monday in the Welland Ship Canal near Port Weller.

Both ships were said to have been damaged above the waterline. They were able to continue on their courses, the Lockwell with pulpwood bound for Thorold and the Fernie carrying general merchandise to Montreal.

One unofficial estimate was that the Lockwell damage was estimated at $10,000, while that to the Fernie was approximately $2,000.

GUNS OF WARSHIPS

fire from points east of the Island of Laesoe was heard between last midnight and noon today, and was too heavy to be practice firing.

(The Island of Laesoe lies in the north end of the Strait of Kattegatt, near the Skagerrak, which commands the strait. British warships have been reported patrolling that area.)

A line of ships northeast of Laesoe Island was sighted by the Island's police chief who said sounds of cannonading came from the vessels.

About 200 shots were fired before the sounds stopped, the police official said after watching with binoculars. He was unable to determine the character of the line of vessels.

Canadian Writer Finds Blackout In London a Strange Experience

Darkness Seems Like a Dream After Brightness of Canada's Cities

TRAFFIC CONFUSING

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 20—(CP Cable)—Sprawling London, with its nightly blackout, colored by dim traffic beacons, pin pricks of light from automobiles and intermittent spots on the sidewalk from the pedestrian's flashlight, makes the newly-arrived Canadian, fumbling his way, want to pinch himself to see if it is true.

To one accustomed to the nightly glare of Montreal's Ste. Catherine Street or the lights of downtown Toronto, the darkness seems more like a dream.

You leave a brightly lighted restaurant and pass through a heavily-curtained door to the street. You pause on the step to accustom yourself to the darkness, flash a torch, and feel your way along. One eventually decides only rookies use light all the time and tries to get used to feeling and walking in the dark.

Ghostlike buses, the interiors dull blue roll along at reduced speed. The dull glow of a burning cigarette carried by an oncoming pedestrian helps you along. The sudden light of a torch or a dark shape nearby causes the walker to come up with a start.

Keeps to Centre of Sidewalk

Fearful of walking into a sandbagged fireplug or sandbags piled against buildings, one instinctively keeps to the centre of the sidewalk and sometimes out on the roadway. You cross the street warily, however, remembering that casualties on the home front from traffic accidents in the blackout have been mounting. The left-side driving also is confusing to the newly arrived.

By day the crowds rush along, just as in Canada, but all carry bags containing gas masks, lunches and other paraphernalia. Huge heaps of sandbags hide many building fronts and display windows are boarded up or criss-crossed with tape to prevent shattering.

Arrows Point to Shelters

Everywhere are red arrows pointing to air raid shelters and to trenches in the park or first aid stations. There is apparatus for decontamination should the enemy drop gas bombs. It is a comforting feeling that England is ready for an emergency.

This feeling became greater when the writer called for a gas mask fitting and saw complete hospital equipment ready for use at the distribution point.

There is not much to do at night but go home. Most motion picture theatres close at 6 p.m. but public houses remain open and many hotels still have music in their dining rooms.

So you feel your way along the street and fumble around for a while before finding the correct home address. Before turning on lights it is well to be sure the windows are carefully curtained lest you invite a police visit.

You go to bed with a gas mask by your side, wondering whether your sleep will be shattered by the shrill warning of the air raid siren. If so, it will mean rushing across the street to the air raid shelter "for 100 persons."

ROME COLONELS LOOP WINNERS

Defeat Amsterdam in Rubber Game of Three-in-Five Series

Rome, N. Y., Sept. 20—(CP) — Twice pennant winners in two years of operations in the class C baseball circuit, Amsterdam Rugmakers still sought today their first Canadian-American League playoff championship after losing out to the Colonels of Rome for the 1939 crown.

Colonels, who finished third to Amsterdam in the regular season, bested the Rugmakers, 4-3, here last night in the rubber game of a best-of-five final. Last season, the pennant winners lost a chance for a double title when inclement weather forced a halt to their final series with Cornwall Bisons.

The Rugmakers, known as the "Little Yanks" because of a working agreement with New York Yankees, were within two innings of the championship last night. The Romans, trailing 2-1 in the last of the eighth, came up with a three-run rally, however, that brought victory.

PREDICTED WAR OUTBREAK IN 1940

H. G. Wells Sees His Forecast Substantially True

(By Pat Ussher)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 20.— (CP)—Outbreak of war in Europe fulfils a year ahead of time a prediction made by H. G. Wells.

The distinguished author who has been writing books steadily for almost half a century, some years ago forecast a major war in Europe would start in 1940.

Today, on the eve of his 73rd birthday, he had the gloomy satisfaction of knowing his prediction substantially true.

Wells, noted as a historian, economist, expert on sociology and education as well as a novelist, caused a furore this summer when he summarized his pessimistic views about the world outlook in a book called "The Fate of Homo Sapiens". The conflict which has just broken out grimly underlines the significance of Wells' remarks.

His View of Mankind's Fate

In the book he saw mankind "being carried along the stream of fate to degradation, suffering the death". There was an alternative, however —"wilful and strenuous adaptation by re-education of our species now."

Wells, who has frequently assailed existing systems of education, concluded "A salvaging of the species is still just possible. That is as much as the most hopeful mind can say."

"The fate of Homo Sapiens" did not represent a new viewpoint on life by Wells. It was simply a restatement of view he had held for many years.

Wrote Own Obituary

Two and a half years ago Wells prepared his own "obituary". Here's how he outlined his latter years:

1938— Injured in a brawl with Fascist youths.

1942—Health impaired by spell in concentration camp under Communist dictatorship.

1955—Granted small civil list pension.

1963—Died of heart failure.

His first prediction hasn't come true. And not even Wells knows whether those that follow will come true.

HITLER'S SPEECH

"For the unhappy victim of this cynical attack the result has been tragedy of the grimmest character. The world, which has watched the vain struggle of the Polish nation against overwhelming odds with profound pity and sympathy, admires their valor which even now refuses to admit defeat.

Polish Obligations Not Forgotten

"If Britain and France have been unable to avert defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her they have not forgotten their obligations to her, nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

A note of deep cynicism crept into the voice of the man dressed in sombre black clothes when he referred to Hitler's Danzig speech. He noted Hitler's references to the humane methods by which he had waged the war, but the accounts of German bombing of open towns and the machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

No Reference by Hitler to Fallen

At this point Mr. Chamberlain's indignation prompted him to stray from his carefully prepared text. His voice betrayed his deep emotion when he said extemporaneously:

"What I have searched for in vain in his speech is one single word that Hitler remembers the brave men who have already lost their lives in this quarrel of his making, or their wives and children who have been bereft forever of the head of their family because their leader's lust for power had to be satisfied."

"I have only one general comment to make. Our general purpose in this struggle is well known. It is to redeem Europe from perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties. No threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

New White Paper

The Prime Minister said Hitler's "misstatements of fact" included his declaration that France agreed to Italian mediation while Great Britain refused it. He said a new white paper would be issued tomorrow "so that public opinion may have no difficulty in forming its final judgments."

"The British Government did not seek this war but their hopes were shattered by the unprovoked and brutal aggression of Germany upon our Polish allies," said Mr. Chamberlain.

He said that on the Western Front "valuable strategic and tactical objectives have been secured by the French and the ground gained has been held in the face of increasingly severe German resistance."

At sea, the Prince Minister told the House, there had been "intense and continual naval activity, mainly in the form of attacks on U-boats carried out by destroyers, small craft and the fleet air arm acting under cover of the main fleets and squadrons.

British Offensive on Submarines

These attacks, he declared, had been made "night and day."

"The great difference between the last war and this one is that whereas in the last war we were on the defensive against the U-boat campaign, we are now carrying out an offensive against the U-boats and they are continuously and relentlessly attacked whenever they disclose themselves."

Earlier, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said their was "every reason to believe" that the submarine which sank the aircraft carrier Courageous Sunday had been subsequently sunk.

Mr. Chamberlain said Britain's attitude toward neutral nations was "in striking contrast to the policy pursued by Germany."

"The primary aim of British policy at sea is to destroy or render ineffective warships of the enemy, to prevent the enemy augmenting their warlike resources from overseas, and at the same time to protect our own and neutral commerce.

Protect Own Commerce

"The interests of neutrals are the same as our own. In war, as in peace, we depend for our life upon the uninterrupted flow of trade and it is our fundamental policy to preserve as far as possible conditions of normal trading.

"Suppression of traffic in contraband of war must of necessity cause some inconvenience to neutrals. It is our intention to reduce this to a minimum."

Dominions Prepare Their Share

The Prime Minister referred to preparations in the Dominions to take a full share in the war effort and declared the resources of the empire "in the aggregate are stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war."

Mr. Chamberlain, who seldom indulges in histrionics or oratorical effects, brought the House to its feet by quoting these words of a Polish General talking to the allied military mission: "We shall fight. A large part of our country will be overrun and we shall suffer terribly. But if you come in, we know we shall rise again."

With the apparent purpose of allaying public anxiety as to whether the Allies were striking vigorously enough against Germany, Mr. Chamberlain declared:

No Sacrifice Too Great

"There is no sacrifice from which we will shrink. There is no operation we will not undertake provided our responsible advisers, our Allies and we ourselves are convinced that it will make an appropriate contribution to victory."

He declared against uncertain adventures "calculated to impair our resources and to postpone ultimate victory."

"One lesson which military history teaches is that that road leads to disaster," he said.

"Strategy," Mr. Chamberlain went on, "is the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment."

He said he would "not hazard a guess at this stage of the war as to when or where the decisive force will be assembled or when the decisive moment will arrive."

He said this must depend upon events and added:

Increase of British Strength

"The scale of our preparations and the fact already announced that we are basing them on the assumption that duration of the war may be at least three years ensures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come."

Arthur Greenwood, Acting Leader of the Opposition, charged Russia had become an aggressor and declared "It is a matter of very deep regret that Poland was not provided more generously with sorely needed assistance."

SECOND TORPEDO MISSED

Ottawa, Sept. 20 (CP)—The submarine which sank the passenger liner Athenia in the North Atlantic fired a second torpedo while the vessel was sinking, according to Rev. G. O. Woollcombe, a survivor now recuperating at his home here.

Dr. Woollcombe said the second torpedo missed the Athenia. He and others in the same lifeboat heard the whirr of the torpedo's propellors as it passed beneath the lifeboat, and several persons saw the missle, he said.

TONS OF GRAIN SHIPPED EAST

167 Million Bushels of Wheat Have Been Delivered to Country Elevators

Winnipeg, Sept. 20 (CP)—Tons of grain continued to flow through Winnipeg toward terminal elevators at the heads of the Great Lakes today as Western Canada farmers worked to complete harvest of what promises to be the largest Prairie crop since 1928.

Grain trains came to Winnipeg from as far west as Alberta, draining western marketing points of the 1939 wheat yield which the last Federal government estimate placed at 422,000,000 bushels. Last year's crop totalled 336,000,000 bushels. In 1928, more than 566,000,000 bushels of wheat were taken from Prairie farms.

Since Aug. 1, start of the current crop year, more than 167,000,000 bushels of wheat have been delivered to country elevators.

Normally a large share of the Prairie wheat yield is moved west but owing to the war Pacific harbors are at a disadvantage in shipment of grain to overseas markets.

Officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway announced that during September a new record in volume of grain moved east from Winnipeg to the lakehead was established. Average movement from Winnipeg to the C.P.R. has been about 1,553 cars a day.

No figures are avaiable on Canadian National Railways movement but activity in the C.N.R. yards can be compared with the C.P.R.

ARTHUR HUFF TELLS OF EUROPE

Impressions of Europe were given to the Kiwanis Club at their meeting on Tuesday afternoon by Arthur Huff of Bloomfield, who visited many of the countries this year on his bicycle and by hitch hiking methods. Mr. Huff visited many of the hostels for youth in Europe and Denmark and he stated he found the German youth not unlike the youth of this country but they were embued with the ideology of the Hitler regime and appeared ready to defend their belief against all odds. Mr. Huff worked his way over on a cattle boat and then purchased a bicycle travelling nearly 8,000 miles by this method besides hitch hiking for same 800 more. The speaker was introduced by Ted Hughes and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Jim Barclay. President Dr. "Dick" Flynn presided with Jim Cowan as Sergeant-at-Arms and Jack McIntosh as song leader. Leo B. Riggs accompanied the community singing on the piano.

Albert Boynton, general chairman of the Karnival Committee, reported everything in order for the affair and asked the co-operation of all the members, while Morley Weyman, chairman of Publicity stated that 60 merchants had entered the Shopping Tour contest and that the public were taking a great interest in trying to find the mistakes in the dressing of the windows entered in the competition. The club was most appreciative of the fine co-operation of the merchants to put this contest over.

Mr. Huff stated in speaking of Germany, that the country was quite anxious to get their colonies back and that while he was there the troop movement towards the east in Germany was quite heavy.

RUBY M. AYRES

"Is there Peace in our Camp, Elizabeth?"

She did not answer in words but impulsively, she slipped her hand into his.

He turned his head, his fingers closing round hers, and they looked at each other for a long moment in silence.

"I will—ring you up—when I come back from Paris," Elizabeth said tremulously.

A wave of emotion crossed his face, though there was the echo of a laugh in his voice as he answered:

"If you do—I shall be there," and then he released her hand and drove on.

For the rest of the way, Elizabeth kept her eyes closed, only conscious of her overpowering weariness. Her limbs and eyelids seemed to be weighted with lead, and yet the end of this journey was the last thing she wished for.

Her heart missed a beat when presently Lawless spoke.

"Here we are. I think the order of the day must be a double brandy and some hot soup, if we can get it."

He came around the car and opened the door for her, giving her his hand.

"Are you very tired?" he asked gently.

"No—at least—" She did not finish, and together they entered the hotel.

The blaze of light in the lounge made Elizabeth blink. She stood still for a moment, unconscious that Lawless was still holding her hand, until someone gave a loud exclamation.

"So there you are!" I've been wondering what on earth had happened. And—Kim! How in the world?"

Elizabeth stood silently by while Lawless explained.

"I happened to be staying at the Selbys' and, as there was no other car available, I offered to bring Elizabeth. We got caught in the fog, of course. How are you Miss Thornley?"

She gave him her hand.

"Very well, thank you. A little put out, naturally. They tell me it may be hours before the boat can leave. Still, I'm thankful nothing has happened to Elizabeth. I've been imagining all sorts of disasters."

INSTALMENT 14

Miss Thornley glanced at her niece. "You look worn-out," she said briskly. "You'd better go to bed at once and have some food sent up. I've engaged a room for myself, but as I was not sure whether you would ever get here—"

"I'll make arrangements," Lawless broke in and he walked away to the bureau.

"Well!" Miss Thornley said blankly. "This is a coincidence. You did not tell me Kim was to be at the Selbys'."

"I didn't know." Elizabeth roused herself with an effort. "I tried to hire a car but I couldn't, and Roy was out, so the only thing was to let Mr. Lawless bring me." Her voice was curiously flat. "The fog was dreadful. I never thought we should get here at all."

Miss Thornley looked at her critically. "Well, let us hope it will be all right in the morning," she said after a moment.

Lawless came back.

"I have engaged the room next to yours for Elizabeth," he told her. "And I have asked them to send up hot soup and brandy."

Miss Thornley nodded approval.

"Good—but what about you?"

"I shan't stay. I'd rather get back."

"Get back? In this fog!" She asked sharply.

"I'll make the effort, anyway," Lawless told her. He turned to Elizabeth.

"I'll say good night. The porter has your suitcase and coat."

"Thank you." She gave him her hand. "And thank you, very much ....for everything."

"I wish you'd stay," Miss Thornley protested. "It is absurd to start back on such a night. Besides, you must be tired. Why not take a room and wait till morning?"

"I hope to be halfway back before morning," he answered. "I'm a hardy customer; nothing tires me."

"Well, I think it's absurd," Miss Thornley protested, and she went on trying to persuade him while Elizabeth stood quietly beside her wondering whether there could be any worse suffering on earth than waiting in the presence of a third person to say a calm good-bye to the man you love, trying hard to appear indifferent.

At last it was over and Miss Thornley touched her arm.

"Come along. Bed is the best place for you."

Elizabeth looked at Lawless.

"Good-bye," she said again.

"Good night."

Going up in the lift, Miss Thornley said, "I see he calls you 'Elizabeth' Well, I suppose it's natural, seeing that you were almost his sister-in-law. Kind of him to have brought you all this way, but then, Kim is kind. I always liked him. Is this the floor?" she enquired rather unnecessarily as the lift stopped. "Thank you. Come along, child.

To Elizabeth the long corridor with its red carpets and rows of closed doors seemed endless, and she was so tired that it was a tremendous effort to force herself to keep pace with her aunt's brisker steps. But at last they stopped and the porter who carried her suitcase stopped.

"This is the room madam."

"And if there is any news of the boat sailing early, I hope I shall be informed at once," Miss Thornley said.

She followed Elizabeth into the room.

"Have you got everything you want? Ah, here is the soup. Now drink it all, and the brandy too, and then go straight to bed. We may have to leave very early tomorrow." She bent to kiss the girl's cheek. "Good night, my dear, and don't worry. We may find that Penelope is much better. I am only next door if you want anything."

Elizabeth gave a quick sigh of relief as the door closed between them. Then she took off her hat and coat and flung the window wide; for the room seemed stuffy and the night was warm, in spite of the fog.

Away in the far distance, across the sea, she could hear the shrill screech of a ship's siren, and then presently another, nearer it seemed, answering.

She drank the soup and sipped the brandy, but it burned her throat and she left it unfinished while she undressed. But every movement was purely mechanical, and though there were so many things she wanted to remember and to think about, as soon as her head touched the pillow she fell asleep.

She awoke hours later to find Miss Thornley standing beside her.

"They say the boat will leave at half-past nine. It's only eight now, so there's plenty of time. I've ordered breakfast to be brought to my room for us both. Get up and have your bath. I'll pull up the blinds for you. The fog has gone and the sun is shining. Do you feel all right?"

"Oh, yes."

Elizabeth put her slim bare feet to the floor, her hair falling about her face, her eyes still sleepy.

"You look like a child," Miss Thornley said, "and the image of your mother," she had almost added.

But she thought better of it and with a last word of injunction, she departed.

Two hours later, they were on board and slowly moving out to sea under a clear sky.

"There's quite a breeze," Miss Thornley said. "I suppose that's why the fog has disappeared so quickly. Are you a good sailor, Elizabeth?"

"Yes, I think so."

"I've booked two deck chairs. There they are, with our suitcases beside them. Sit down, if you think you're likely to be ill."

"I shan't be ill. I'd rather walk about."

Elizabeth paced the length of the deck, her eyes turned to the white cliffs which stood out like stone against the blue sky.

Where was Lawless now, she wondered. Back at High Chimneys, perhaps, having breakfast with Roy and Barbara.

In the train, Miss Thornley dozed until it was lunch-time, and then she and Elizabeth went along the corridor to the dining-car.

"You'd better make a good lunch," Miss Thornley said practically. "You hardly touched your breakfast." She glanced out of the window. "I wonder what happened to Kim?" she said. "Did he speak about Penelope at all?"

"Only to say that he hoped she would be better."

Miss Thornley sighed.

"I'm sure I hope so, too. Poor Penelope, she seems to be very unlucky, so like your father. He was unlucky, too, except financially. Still, we must hope for the best. I should like you to see something of Paris, if it's possible."

They reached Paris about four o'clock, and as they drove away from the station Elizabeth looked eagerly through the window at the crowded streets.

"We will stay at a quiet hotel I know," Miss Thornley said. "There is sure to be plenty of room at this time of the year, and I know the manager."

When they arrived she rattled away in French to the commissionaire and to the porter, and later to the man in the office, while Elizabeth stood by, lost in admiration.

She was feeling a little overawed by the strangeness of her surroundings, and a little excited, too. But her spirits fell when Miss Thornley said: "I am going to ring up the nursing home to inquire how Penelope is. It may be necessary for us to go straight there. Stay here in the lounge and order tea. I shall be back in a moment."

But Miss Thornley was gone some time, and when she returned she looked a little flushed and worried.

"Penelope has diphtheria," she said, as she sank into a chair beside her niece. "Heaven alone knows where she contracted such a thing. The doctor himself is utterly mystified. They have had to send her away from the nursing home to the Fever Hospital, and, of course, we shall not be allowed to see her."

She was silent for a moment.

"I spoke to the matron," she went on. "She seems to be a very charming and intelligent person. She told me that in her delirium—and apparently she has been, and still is, very seriously ill—Penelope's one cry is for Kim." She sighed heavily. "The matron seemed to think he had come with me. I suppose, in the circumstances, she naturally concluded that he was the poor child's fiance. Pour out the tea, Elizabeth; I am dying for a cup."

She glanced at the girl for the first time.

"Aren't you well?" she asked sharply. "You look so white."

"I'm quite well, but it's rather hot in here."

"Take off your coat," Miss Thornley said practically. "It's always the same in French hotels. They seem afraid of fresh air."

Elizabeth slipped off her coat and laid it across a chair-back.

"I feel so utterly helpless," her aunt went on. "How on earth can I send for Kim, or even write to him that Penelope keeps calling for him?"

INSTALMENT 15

"Kim probably wouldn't come anyway, and if he did it might only be out of pity," Miss Thornley said to Elizabeth. She sipped her tea and put the cup down. "What do you think about it all, Elizabeth?" she demanded bluntly. "You must have formed some opinion. You've talked to them both. You must surely have gathered something!"

"Penelope told me that she didn't care for him any more."

"Penelope would!" Miss Thornley declared. "What else could she say?"

Elizabeth said, very quietly: "But if she broke the engagement, she can't care for him any more. Can she?"

"Ah!" Miss Thornley said darkly. "But I've never felt sure that it was she who broke it. All she ever said to me was, 'I've broken my engagement, and please don't say you are sorry or ask any questions.' So, of course, I did not do so, and as I never saw Kim Lawless afterwards until last night; that is all I ever heard. Still, I think I shall call and see the matron presently. She may be able to tell me something more. You'd like to unpack, I expect, or would you care to come with me?"

"I think I'll unpack."

"Very well, I shan't be long, but I really feel that I cannot settle to anything until I know exactly how matters stand."

When she had gone, Elizabeth went up to her room. It was very well furnished and comfortable, with a bathroom leading out of it, and a window which overlooked a square, paved courtyard. She opened it to its fullest extent and began to take the things from her suitcase.

"I always seem to be packing and unpacking," she thought. For it was only two days ago that she had arrived at High Chimneys—last night at Dover—tonight in Paris.

She had only brought a very few clothes and they were soon put away, and then she stood still with an odd feeling of helplessness. What could she do now?

It was very quiet everywhere, except that now and again she could hear the whirring of the lift on the landing outside, rising or descending.

And then Elizabeth's thoughts flew to Penelope—and Kim! Perhaps not very long ago they had called each other by endearing names, and yet at this moment, Kim was far away in England and Penelope lying ill in a strange place, calling for him.

Elizabeth's hands suddenly clenched as, in imagination, she fancied she could hear her sister's voice—that beautiful voice—crying out for the man she loved, and through the aching pity of her heart there rushed such a storm of jealousy that she was afraid.

She walked over to the window and looked out on the little paved courtyard with unseeing eyes.

With a sharp sigh of pain she realized that she was thinking of Lawless as if he already belonged to her and that complete happiness was impossible because the shadow of Penelope stood between them.

She gave herself a little shake and turned from the window, realizing that it was getting dark. She switched on the dressing-table light and began to brush her hair—Stella always loved having her hair brushed, especially after Pip died—she said it was so soothing and made her sleepy. A passionate longing for her mother rose in Elizabeth's heart. To feel the clasp of her arms—arms that had seemed to make everything so safe and happy, just to hear her voice with its soft tenderness.

But her mother had gone too far away for loving arms ever to reach her.

Someone tapped on the door and Miss Thornley's voice spoke her name.

"Elizabeth! Are you there, Elizabeth?"

"Yes—oh, is the door locked?"

She sped across the room to open it, resenting the interruption and yet welcoming it.

"You haven't been long," she said.

"More than an hour," Miss Thornley answered.

Broad Plans Laid to Prevent Profiteering in Commodities Undertaken by a War Board

Hector B. McKinnon, Board Chairman, Moves Swiftly to Check Fluctuations in Price and Supply

GATHER INFORMATION

In First Twelve Days of September Refineries Produced 30 Percent More Sugar Than Average for Period

Ottawa, Sept. 21 ((CP)—Broad preparations to prevent war profiteering across the whole commodity front already are being undertaken by the Government's new wartime prices and Trade Board.

While dealing swiftly with obvious fluctuations in price and supply of sugar and butter the last few days ,the Board also is laying a thorough groundwork for future activity to protect the housewife and the man-on-the-street—as well as the Government itself—from excessive price increases and variations in supplies as the war proceeds.

Survey Stocks

Right now the Board has trade experts preparing surveys of present and prospective stocks and methods of distribution of various ordinary commodities. At the same time inspectors are gathering first-hand information all across the country, in addition to the protests flowing in from individuals, organizations and authorities of all kinds against claimed irregularities. All this is supplying the Board with enough work to keep it sitting 15 hours a day.

When the Board was set up Sept. 3, it was immediately confronted with numerous retail price changes although the general level was not rising as rapidly as in the United States where there was no direct connection with the war. The Board had first to deal with a nation-wide clamor against the apparent sugar scarcity.

BOX COMPANIES ARE INDICTED

True Bills Returned on Indictments Charging Conspiracy to Restrain Trade

Toronto, Sept. 21—(CP)— An Assize Court Grand Jury Wednesday returned two true bills on indictments charging conspiracy to restrain trade against several companies and individuals engaged in the manufacture of containers and materials used in their production.

Charged in the first indictment are H. J. Bradden, Brampton Pulp and Paper Company; Gair Company of Canada, Ltd., and the Bathurst Power and Paper Company, Ltd.

It is charged they "unlawfully conspired, combined, agreed or arranged together and with Dominion Boxboards, Ltd., to unduly prevent or lessen competition in the cities of Toronto and Montreal and other places throughout Canada where the articles or commodities are sold, in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter sale transportation or supply of articles, which may be the subject of trade or commerce and did thereby commit an indictable offence."

In the same indictment they are charged with conspiring to restrain or injure trade and to unduly limit the facilities for producing, manufacturing, storing or dealing of the articles and to "unduly prevent, limit or lessen the manufacture of such articles."

NO INQUEST ORDERED

Picton, Ont. (Special)—No inquest will be held into the death of Harry Vance, forty-year-old local resident whose body was found in a barn near his home on West Main Street yesterday. Coroner Dr. Lighthall decided today after investigating circumstances surrounding Vance's demise.

Previous to coming to Picton, the deceased resided in the Orser neighborhood for twenty years. His father died recently in his 73rd year.

COL. GEO. A. DREW DELAYS PROGRESS OF THE SESSION

Not Willing to Submit to Redrafted Succession Duty Act Bill

HUNTER CRITICAL

"Spurious Offers of Service" to Country in Wartime Idle Gesture is Claim

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—Conservative Leader George A. Drew delayed progress of the Ontario Legislature's special war-time session today to debate the government's redrafted Succession Duty Act.

The Opposition's protest against powers given to officers of the Ontario Treasury Department in the contemplated legislation seemed certain to delay prorogation until Friday night. Premier Hepburn had predicted the House might prorogue today.

Declaring that the administration's new measure to collect death dues "departs radically from any law in any British country," Col. Drew forced adjournment of last night's sitting before the Act could be advanced to the committee stage. He and his followers voted with the government to give the bill second reading but reserved the right to criticize it clause by clause.

RUSSIAN FORCES STRENGTHEN HOLD ON EAST POLAND

Reported Seizure of Grodno Marks Russian Advance of 135 Miles

CAPTURE KOVEL

Moscow, Sept. 21 (AP)—Russian forces strengthened their hold on eastern Poland today as communiques reported new advances by the invading Red army along the wide front.

In the north, the Soviet high command announced Russian troops occupied Grodno, 16 miles from the east Prussian border and 90 miles southwest of Wilno, ancient Capital of Lithuania.

In the south, Red troops were reported in possession of Kovel, Ukrainian village 100 miles north of Lwow, Poland's third largest city. Occupation of both Wilno and Lwow was announced in previous communiques.

(German reports said the Poles were still resisting in and around Lwow.)

The reported seizure of Grodno marks a Russian advance of approximately 135 miles into Poland.

The fortified areas of Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny also have fallen to the Russians, Soviet high command claimed.

W. R. Campbell Will Head War Supply Board to Survey, Organize and Mobilize Resources of Canada

MISSION CO-OPERATES

British Mission Headed by Sir James Rae Will Assist New Board in Obtaining Supplies for England From Canada

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—A new War Supply Board faces the responsibility of surveying, organizing and mobilizing the resources and industries available to Canada for the prosecution of the war.

Wallace R. Campbell of Windsor, Ont., President of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, has been appointed chairman, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last night, and Robert C. Vaughan of Montreal, Vice-President of Canadian National Railways, will serve at least for the period of organization, as vice-chairman and director general of purchases.

Further members of the Board, including one from Quebec Province, will be appointed shortly, the Prime Minister said. Hon. Gordon Scott of Montreal, former Quebec treasurer, and Watson Sellar, Comptroller of the Dominion Treasury, have done much preliminary work on formation of the organization as joint directors.

Authorized by Parliament

Formation of the War Supply Board was authorized by Parliament at the emergency war session prorogued a week ago. The Government also received authority to create a new Ministry of Munitions and Supply should that step eventually be deemed necessary. The War Supply Board replaces the Defence Purchasing Board authorized at the last regular session of Parliament and set up early in the summer with Mr. Vaughan at the head. The declaration of war, the Prime Minister said, required the setting up of a body "with a much wider field of activity than day-to-day purchases."

Steamer Wins in Race Against Submarine

London, Sept. 21 (CP-Havas)—An account of a homeward bound British steamship's successful race against a submarine which dropped two shells around her from a range of 4,000 yards was released last night by the Ministry of Information.

"For obvious reasons, neither the name of the captain nor ship can be made public," the statement said.

"The chief officer saw the U-boat coming to the surface but 4,000 yards away, two points abaft to the starboard beam.

"As the captain arrived on the bridge two shots landed within 100 yards. The master promptly altered his course and compelled the U-boat to give chase.

"For some time the U-boat managed to gain on her quarry. But the steamship eventually attained the speed of 15 knots.

"By three o'clock she was doing approximately 16½ knots. She started to draw ahead and at 4:10 the submarine, about four miles astern, gave up the chase and disappeared.

Straw Vote in U.S. Shows Two-Thirds Of People Against Strict Isolation

New York, Sept. 21—(CP)— A survey of editorial opinion throughout the United States, conducted by The Christian Science Monitor of boston, revealed a ratio of four newspapers to one favoring repeal of the arms embargo and urging Congress to take this step as it gathered in Washington today.

Another "straw-vote" by the magazine Fortune showed almost two-thirds of the American people against a strict isolationist policy for the country. This national survey revealed 83.1 per cent of the people wanted the Allies to win the war, while only one per cent favored Germany.

The Christian Science Monitor polled the editorial opinion of 120 newspapers in city and hamlet. Eighty-eight papers, with a total circulation of 11,514,522, favored repeal of the arms embargo. Twenty-two others, with a circulation of 2,504,146, were against such repeal.

"It is significant", said the Boston newspaper in summing up the findings of its poll, "that support for repeal of the embargo and support for the President's general foreign policies in this emergency are as great among Republican newspapers as among Democratic newspapers."

700 FIRMS MAKE SHELLS OR PARTS IN GREAT BRITAIN

6,500 Contractors Work for Ministry of Supply on Countrywide Scale

HUGE WAR ORDERS

'Use Every Ounce of Endeavor and Ton of Output to Win War'

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—Creation of a war supply council and broad plans to use "every ounce of endeavor and ton of output" in the United Kingdom for the winning of the war were disclosed in the House of Commons today by Leslie Burgin, Minister of Supply.

Giving the nation a revealing glimpse of the extent of the weapons Britain is forging, Mr. Burgin declared his department had placed orders for war supplies exceeding £70,000,000 ($277,000,000) since the outbreak of hostilities.

That is nearly £4,000,000, daily for the nineteen days of war.

Mr. Burgin will head the Supply Council with Sir Harold Brown as Director of Munitions Production and Lord Weir as Director General of Explosives.

To allay fears of a "shell shortage", Mr. Burgin gave the commons impressive production figures.

He disclosed 700 firms are making shells or the components of the shells and 6,500 contractors are working for the Ministry of Supply on a countrywide scale.

FRENCH THREATEN APPROACHES TO ZWEIBRUECKEN

Advance Units Fight Numerous Pitched Battles With German Patrols

PRISONERS TAKEN

French and German Aviation Clashed in Series of Battles for Mastery of Air

By JOHN MARTIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Sept. 21 (AP)—War dispatches said today the French army is threatening approaches to Zweibruecken, Germany, at the upper end of the Blies river valley.

These advices reported French advance units had fought numerous pitched battles with German patrols in the Zweibruecken zone and farther west, near Saarbruecken, another German city which French were attempting to surround.

Zweibruecken, about sixteen miles from Saarbruecken, lies five miles within Germany and Saarbruecken two miles.

These reports indicated each side was seeking prisoners in the zone between the northern reaches of the Maginot and Siegfried Lines from wrom to pry secrets of strategy and troop disposition.

The French expected a major German offensive on the western front.

Local Activity.

Local activity by advance units on the western front was announced by this morning's general staff communique.

Bullet-Proof Armor Worn by German Shock Troops, Report

Rome, Sept. 21 (CP-Havas)—A new kind of gladiator has appeared on the Western Front—German soldiers in bullet-proof armor carrying portable machine-guns capable of firing 120 shots a minute.

The special correspondent of the Popolo di Roma attached to German headquarters at the Westwall today gave a graphic description of the troops.

These super-armed men serve as special shock troops. They have been selected for their strength, their agility, and quick reflexes. They have been trained in the most highly-specialized aspects of hand-to-hand fighting in the modern manner. They are organized in small detachments each under command of an officer.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

It was just a co-incidence but the announcement of a Canadian expeditionary force of two divisions came only a few hours after Adolf Hitler's challenging speech at Danzig Tuesday. It was one more indication the free nations of the British Commonwealth are behind the United Kingdom in the war against Naziism.

Canada moves into the war picture a bit faster in 1939 than was the case in 1914, possibly due to improved means of communication. Thus the Defence Minister's announcement Tuesday night that two divisions would be trained and equipped for overseas service came just nine days after Canada officially entered the war while in 1914 the first expeditionary force was authorized 13 days after this country went into the first Great War.

Circumstances were a bit different in 1914 as then Canada entered the war simultaneously with Great Britain. This time Canada did not proclaim a state of war until after Parliament approved the government's policy of entering the war and the proclamation came a week after British action.

Little Heard of British

Little has yet been heard of the operations of the British expeditionary force in France except that the Tommies are there. This is not surprising in view of the time required to move large bodies of men and equipment and the record of 1914.

Then Great Britain declared war on Aug. 4 while the German armies were already sweeping through Belgium. Three days later the first British troops landed in France but the landing was not completed until Aug. 16, 12 days after the declaration of war.

It was not until Aug. 23, 19 days after the declaration of war and seven days after landing was completed that the "contemptible little army", as the Kaiser termed it, went into action at Mons.

The movement of British forces to France this year is a military secret but considerable numbers had landed on and prior to Sept. 11, eight days after the declaration of war. So far official communiques have not reported any direct contact between the British and the enemy but on the 1914 time-table it should be any day now, unless different tactics are employed which might involve holding the British in reserve for a time.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

Sept. 21, 1914—Russians captured Galician towns of Jaroslav and Dubiecko from Austrians. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told London recruiting meeting "It is no time to talk of peace we are just beginning."

Revolt of Outlawed Iron Guard, Long Expected, Comes According to Announcement Before Radio Closed Off

(By LLOYD LEHRBAS)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bucharest, Sept. 21—(AP)—Premier Armand Calinescu, foe of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard and staunch advocate of Rumanian economic and political co-operation with France and Great Britain, was assassinated today.

The Premier was shot at 12.30 p.m. (7.30 a.m. E.D.T.) from another automobile which drove alongside his own in a Bucharest street.

Troops were called up at once to prevent a coup by Iron Guardists. The Rumanian government convened to take necessary measures to meet the crisis.

(Rumanian diplomats in Budapest said the slaying was "highly significant just at a moment when German and Russian troops are approaching Rumania's northern frontier".

(They also disclosed the Bucharest Government had suppressed news of Iron Guard agitation throughout Rumania, which was said to have begun as soon as Germany invaded Poland.)

(Other Budapest sources said they believed a revolt of the outlawed Iron Guard, long expected, had come.)

The assassination was announced over the Bucharest radio, which gave no details.

"A transcript in Budapest said the broadcaster was cut off after making the announcement and declaring there was "terrible excitement" in Rumania.

(When the Associated Press correspondent attempted to give additional details of the assassination, the telephone connection between Bucharest and Copenhagen was broken.)

Diplomatic circles here had said an economic war over Rumanian oil was under way, with a German mission in Bucharest attempting to obtain vast quantities of the output for Germany's army and air force.

RADIO AT WARSAW SUDDENLY SILENT AFTER SHELL FIRE

Only Communication Between Polish Capital and World Ended

PLANES HEARD IN MIKE

By ROBERT ST. JOHN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Budapest, Sept. 21 (AP) — The Warsaw radio suddenly lapsed into silence early today shortly after noises that sounded like the explosion of artillery shells were heard through its microphone. The announcer had carried on far into the night.

Temporarily, at least, the only communication between the German besieged Polish capital and the rest of the world was ended.

Warns Against Undue Optimism Over Revolt in Czechoslovakia

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—The Daily Telegraph today warned against undue optimism over the reported uprising in Czecho-Slovakia.

"The foes in Hitler's citadel rise against him," the newspaper said. "The Czechs revolt against their oppressors. The heart of every man who cherishes human freedom leaps at the news. But do not pin too much hopes on this rebellion. It comes too soon. Maybe Hitler's agents forced it prematurely into the open, afraid of what might come if the movement were allowed to develop.

"But crushed or not, quenched in blood or flaring up, it gives Hitler a new and sobering problem to think of."

The diplomatic correspondent of the Manchester Guardian wrote:

"The Czech revolution comes unexpectedly.

'It is to be feared that what might have been a formidable force against the Germans will have spent itself prematurely."

Flying Patrol Boats Rescue Entire Crew Of Ship Sunk by Sub

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—The Ministry of Information today announced two Royal Air Force flying patrol boats rescued the crew of 34 of the steamship Kensington Court which sent out an SOS after it was attacked by a submarine.

The announcement said the thrilling Atlantic rescue was the first time an entire ship's crew had been picked up at sea by flying boats.

The Kensington Court was a 4,683-ton vessel, owned by the Court Line. London was her port of registry.

Flying boats responding to the SOS arrived alongside a lifeboat from the sunken ship 10 minutes before she went down.

The pilots saw a tiny boat crowded with men while others were in the sea clinging to the sides," the announcement said. "While one flying boat kept watch from the air the other came down on the water alongside the over-

TESTIMONY GIVEN AT MURDER TRIAL

Three Friends of Mrs. McDonald Tell of Events Leading Up to Finding of Body

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 21—(CP)—At least six Crown witnesses today remained to be heard as the murder trial of Charles McDonald, 31, Chatham shipping clerk, entered its third day.

McDonald is charged with slaying his wife, former Chatham beauty queen, whose body was found the night of May 1 on the drying room floor of a beauty salon she operated here.

Testimony yesterday concerned events leading up to the finding of the body by three women friends of Mrs. McDonald.

Mrs. McDonald died from a bullet wound in her breast. A rifle was found beside the body and Constable Fred Peardon testified he found a box in the salon which contained the same calibre bullets as those found beside the body.

Police said McDonald was sitting beside the body "moaning and crying" when they entered the room and repeatedly said, "I didn't do it."

Spent Week in Windsor

It was testified Mrs. McDonald spent the last week of April in a Windsor tourist home after signing separation papers. McDonald refused to sign the papers, met her when she returned to Chatham the last day of April and talked to her again the morning of May 1, after she spent the night at a Chatham hotel.

Frances Bowen and Pearl Hastings, employed at the salon, and Mrs. Lily Maine, a friend of Mrs. McDonald, testified they were to meet Mrs. McDonald at the beauty parlor the night of May 1, then attend a movie.

Miss Bowen said McDonald met her at the front door of the salon, said his wife was indisposed and refused her admittance. She called Mrs. McDonald but heard no answer, she testified.

The women said that later when they went to the shop, they were admitted by McDonald after a brief conversation. They entered the drying room, saw the body on the floor and McDonald was quoted by Miss Bowman as saying, "Oh my God she has shot herself." Miss Hastings testified there was a towel across Mrs. McDonald's chest.

Liner's Capture Not Denied by British Gov't

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—Reports the liner Bremen, pride of Germany's merchant fleet, had been captured by the Royal Navy and escorted into a British port gained prevalence today in the absence of Government denials.

The British Press Association, commenting on the reports, said stories that the Bremen was on the way to England had been current for several days.

"Though no official confirmation was forthcoming in London this morning," the Press Association said, "The story of the liner's capture was not denied."

The Bremen sailed from New York, Aug. 30, two days before the German Army entered Poland, and her whereabouts since that time has been a mystery.

(In New Orleans, Baron Von Spiegel, German Consul General, was quoted as saying the Bremen was "safe and sound" in the Soviet Russian port of Murmansk but he did not give the source of his information.)

(On Sept. 16, German Field Marshal Hermann Goering, in a speech to munitions workers, said British efforts to capture the liner had "misfired.")

KIWANIS EMBLEM MADE IN FLOWERS

Beautifully arranged and artistically designed the large floral Kiwanis Club emblem now appearing in the window of the Dorothy Quick florist shop on East Bridge Street is attracting a lot of attention.

Deep red gladioli form the background of the design which is circular in shape. Pure white gladioli shape the large letter 'K' that forms the centrepiece of the emblem.

The management paced the lovely display in the window in honor of the Kiwanis Karnival that concludes tonight.

AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSEBUSH IN BLOOM

With beautiful pinkish-red blossoms defying the cool Autumn breezes, an American Beauty rosebush in the garden of Mrs. William Hart, 67 Burton Street, is attracting the attention and admiration of passers-by.

Three times this year the bush has produced fragrant blooms, that measure at least three inches across the top. At present nine buds, on the verge of opening, are scattered among the foliage while two large blooms are growing in all their fragrant beauty.

Results of military courses taken at summer camp this year include the granting of captain's qualifications to Lieut. George Laughlin; Lieutenant's certificates to Second-Lieutenants J. M. Cousins and H. A. Prink; Sergeant's certificates to Gunners J. Stock and Cyril Gardner, and Bombardier's certificate to Gunner J. Steward. All are members of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery.

BOY TURNED OVER TO TRAINING SCHOOL

Observing a teen aged boy wandering about the streets at an early hour today P.C. Taylor questioned the lad and after escorting him to the police station, the officer and Sergeant Booth ascertained the lad had run away from his foster home. The boy gave his name as George Walters, aged 13 years. He is a ward of the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, but had run away from a foster home provided by the boys' institution, he admitted. The boy was turned over to the Bowmanville authorities later today.

GASOLINE THIEVES ACTIVE IN CITY

Gasoline thieves were again active in Belleville late last night, when a quantity of gasoline was stolen from a parked car near Burton street. Residents nearby informed police they saw two men emerge from a Burton street alleyway carrying a large can. Subsequent check-ups by police disclosed that gasoline had been siphoned from a parked motor car at a nearby tourist home. Neighbors in the area supplied police with the license plate of the automobile in which the two men drove away and the ownership of the vehicle was being sought today. "No doubt the car in which the men were travelling was a stolen vehicle," suggested Sergeant Arthur Harman as he continued investigations today.

R. C. A. F. Starts Recruiting at Kingston

The Royal Canadian Air Force began recruiting all ranks at a newly opened office in Kingston today.

The recruiting office will be one of eight stations for the R.C.A.F. in Ontario. Each depot is given a daily quota from Ottawa to enlist and this quota may be changed from day to day.

The names of those who apply will be filed according to their classification and they will be summoned as required. In charge of recruiting at the Kingston depot is Flight-Lieutenant G. W. Jacobi.

Medical requirements for all ranks of the Air Force are stiffer than for other units, as physical fitness is a prime requisite for the service. Recruits will be required, in addition to routine army drill, one of the "trades" of the Air Force. The new station will serve the entire surrounding district as well as the city.

Overproduction of Butter Would Cause Reduced Prices States Minister of Agriculture

Dominion Gov't. Urges Farmers Not to Shift from Cheese to Butter Production

66% CHEESE EXPORTED

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—It is the intention of the Dominion government to set up machinery to handle the sale of Canadian cheese to the United Kingdom, Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced last night.

"Negotiations have already been initiated, and arrangements will be made to make sure that the additional shipping and insurance charges due to war conditions will not recoil upon the producer," the Minister stated.

Mr. Gardiner urged that farmers should not shift from cheese production to butter production or vice-versa at this time "in the hope of making great profit." Increased butter production, he said, "can only result in a reduced price for butter because of a glut on the home market." Practically all Canadian butter is consumed in Canada, while 66 per cent of Canadian cheese is exported, mostly to Great Britain.

At the last regular session of parliament, the government placed a premium on cheese to encourage production of cheese rather than divert butter fat to butter production.

"We are still in the early stages of the war," Mr. Gardiner pointed out, "and must realize that all the difficulties confronting the British government in dealing with questions of supply cannot be ironed out at once. Ten days ago it was thought that the price of cheese was pegged at a price in Britain which would net the farmer about 10 1-2 cents a pound. Trading in cheese was practically at a standstill.

"It would now appear that this price was simply intended to prevent profiteering in stocks then in dealers' hands in Britain, and did not indicate that the United Kingdom expected to buy cheese at a price which was obviously not high enough to allow farmers to remain in the production of cheese.

"There is every reason to believe that Great Britain will take all the cheese we can send forward, and we are satisfied that she will be prepared to pay a price for it which bears a proper relation to the price she will have to pay her own farmers or the farmers of New Zealand for cheese."

PAIR ARRESTED IN KINGSTON ON CHARGES OF THEFT

Arnett Harraman and Willis Francis of Ohio Allegedly Stole Car on Pretext of Buying Same

CAR SOON RECOVERED

After having their application into the Canadian army rejected because of their nationality, two United States-born men procured an automobile from Riggs Garage in this city on the pretext of purchasing the vehicle yesterday, but were later arrested in Kingston on charges of theft of a motor car. The men gave their names as Arnett Harraman, 24, a shipping clerk from Richmond, O., and Willis Francis, 23-year-old welder of Pleasant Valley, O. The men were well dressed when they appeared at Riggs Garage and informed employees they resided in Sidney Township and desired to purchase a used car.

After garage attendants had been convinced the two men intended to purchase the vehicle and solidified their intentions by purchasing five gallons of gasoline, the car was given into their custody for inspection shortly before 5 p.m. last evening. When the men did not return in 30 minutes, as they had promised, city police were notified. Police broadcasts were issued by telephone to outlying districts with the result that the two men were arrested in Kingston in possession of the car taken from the Riggs Garage.

Chief Kidd and Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard went to Kingston and escorted the two men and the stolen car back to Belleville, having the vehicle back at Riggs Garage within a very few hours from the time it was taken. Harraman and Francis confidentially told the Belleville police they had come to Canada to join the army, but had been rejected as they were American citizens. They had taken the car and were enroute to Maine where they were told they could obtain employment. Today the two men were arraigned before a Justice of the Peace and remanded in custody on charges of stealing a motor car.

GENERAL STORE ROBBED

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 21—(CP)—Police are investigating the robbery of Omer Buell's general store at Mallorytown which resulted in the loss of cigarettes, lighters, men's shirts and socks and women's hosiery valued at more than $200.

Quaternion Y. P. U. Holds Wiener Roast

On the great flat rock under the shadow of the C.N.R. bridge near Foxboro, and in the light of the moon augmented by glow of bonfire and lanterns, and the music of the Moira, whose waters, like those of Shiloh, flow softly, the Quarternion Y.P.U. held their corn and wiener roast last Tuesday night. Mr. P. Beach of Albert College spent an hour and a half in putting on games that were enjoyed by all. After that came the corn and wieners with coffee and watermelon for dessert. Mr. Harry Atkinson led in a sing-song and Ralph Greatrix swung the crowd up to the stars in our great "Yell." Miss Jean Shorey, Flossie Terry and Bill Wright were the refreshment committee and rendered great service in making all preparations for food and other things. Mr. J. Gowfell supplied the wood and planks for seats, and a very bright and happy lady Mrs. Hetherington who will be 80 in December, gave the use of her stove and came down with her daughter, Mrs. Elder in the closing minutes to receive the hearty applause of the young people. Votes of thanks were tendered to Mr. P. Beach, Mr. Gowfell the refreshment committee, and The John Lewis Company for use of lanterns. Miss M. Bonter announced the programme for the coming month, emphasizing the fact that one night would be given to the study of "Movies" and stated that arrangements were being made to attend, before then, some picture in a body. The gathering closed by all joining hands singing "The More We Get Together", "Blest be the Tie that Binds" and the Mizpah benediction. All were happy. Even Mars seemed brighter than usual. There were over one hundred present.

Picton Radio Blows Up During Speech Of German Fuehrer

One Picton family is wondering whether Hitler released more than verbal dynamite in his address to the world the other day. In the home of Rupert Wheeler, Ferguson Street, the radio was emitting the fiery utterances of Der Feuhrer when suddenly a flash of blue flame shot out of the machine, and the radio went dead.

"It's no wonder it quit," Wheeler remarked afterwards. "Hitler's ravings are too much for any self-respecting radio."

PROGRESS TOLD HOME AND FOREIGN U. C. MISSIONS

Rev. W. J. Pike of Hamilton and Rev. D. Strangway of West Africa Depict Graphically Results of Work

Work of the United Church in some of the cities of Canada among the "new Canadians" and the service of medical missions in West Africa were told to a large conference at Bridge Street Church on Wednesday evening for leaders and members of the church of Belleville Presbytery. Mr. H. W. Ackerman, chairman of the Bay of Quinte Conference M. and M. Committee was in the chair. Rev. W. J. Davis of Bancroft, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery Home Mission Committee conducted the devotional exercises.

Rev. W. J. Pike, Superintendent of All People's Mission, Hamilton, painted a picture of his work among the foreign element in Edmonton and at Hamilton. He said that "we were right in the midst of Italies, Germanies, Russias and Palestines" in sections of such cities. His work among the "new Canadians" was a gripping story. Why go back for 2,000 years?" it was asked. "The seamless garment is here around us." He referred to the work of church hospitals and of religion as miracles of today. "Medical missions give spiritual sight to the blind as well as physical sight."

Rev. Mr. Pike gave instances of the christianizing influences of the hospitals and missions. One story was that of a child with club feet, whom her parents thought was so intended by God that she would never walk. But science triumphed after a long time ,and during that time the doctors and missionaries had kept the child in constant remembrance of her parents. When the parents saw the child walk, their joy was unbounded. The child knew not barriers of race and color as she threw her arms around her Chinese nurse.

Mr. Pike told of poor settlers learning the language slowly and becoming familiar with hymns and so coming into the church. At Hamilton All People's Mission, foreigners and Anglo-Saxons came for help and were fed.

Meeting Communism.

"We meet communism, flagrant, godless, in the cities," said the superintendent. He told of a poor family which had lost its father and head through an accident. The Communists came and offered, "If you let us bury him, we will give him a great funeral". Mr. Pike approaching the Communists suggested that the widow would like a religious service, but the Communist leader said, "We've no use for the church and don't care about God." Mr. Pike replied, "But you are in Canada." He had an opportunity to speak after the hubbub and worse which attended the Communist funeral, during which the family had been shoved to the side by the Reds. As Mr. Pike spoke, silence fell on the crowd and he told of the dead man as having partaken a few days before of the Sacrament. The widow came to Mr. Pike and said, "Thank God my husband died with God in his heart".

The colporteurs are doing an invaluable service for Christianity, Mr. Pike said.

Diseases in W. Africa, Missions.

West Africa has been called "the white man's grave", said Dr. W. E. Strangway, medical missionary on furlough, telling that at first 76 per thousand was the annual death toll among whites, but this had been reduced to 3.6 per thousand through science, by taking daily doses of quinine, using screens on their doors and windows, and other measures. But among the natives there is about as much disease as there was years ago. The church missions at every meeting gave the people medicines to relieve but the news grew. Doctors were sent out, and nurses came, hospitals and dispensaries were established. Today from 90 to 100 diseases are listed in the monthly report, all the familiar diseases known in civilized lands, as well as the tropical diseases. Malaria is at the top of the fatal diseases. Dr. Strangway spoke of the fight against malaria, and said it is impossible to attack the problem because of the economic situation, drugs are expensive, the people have no money to buy netting. "Unfortunately I see little hope," said the doctor. He told of the infant mortality of 60 out of 100 under a year to show the ravages of disease. Some of the treatment is by way of the herb doctors, but these in time, he predicted, would disappear. The Portuguese doctors sent out had too vast a territory and were largely settled on the fringe of the vast colony one thousand miles wide and long. They have however gradually conquered sleeping sickness. But really doctors can do very little with the immense problem of disease.

Medical work is an assistant of the church work. Teachers and their wives are taught first aid. But medicine has to cope with witchcraft.

Dr. Strangway pointed to a bright spot in regard to leprosy. Early leprosy is now cured, deeply set leprosy is arrested. "I see hope that within a limited time, leprosy will be eradicated." It is said there are two million lepers in Africa, one or more in almost every village. But the cure is known and practised.

Dr. Endicott spoke briefly, urging the success of the campaign to get people to church, so as to deepen the church life, to hold daily prayer, and to support the church financially.

Mr. James D. Bankier sang during the service.

Mr. Ackerman praised the work of Rev. Dr. James Semple, chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, Rev. Mr. McKee of Wellington and Rev. L. S. Wight of the committee on the success of their efforts.

The National Anthem was sung and the meeting closed with the benediction.

OBITUARY

MRS. FRED WATSON (Picton)

The death occurred very suddenly at her home here from a heart attack, of Carrie Spencer Lee, wife of Fred W. Watson. She was born at Hilton, Ont., and came to Prince Edward County when young. Before coming to Picton following her marriage, she resided at Cherry Valley. She was a member of the United Church. Her sudden death came as a great shock to relatives and friends as it was quite unexpected.

Rev. J. B. Creeggan of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene conducted the funeral service at her late residence with interment in Glenwood Cemetery. Pall bearers were William McSteven, William Crawford, Hiram McQuaid, William Nettleton, Bruce MacDonald and George Welch.

Besides her husband, she is survived by three nieces, Mrs. S. Turner of Kingston, Mrs. G. M. Foster, Toronto and Mrs. B. Watson, Kingston.

Company of H. & P. E. Reg't. at Madoc Has Recruited to Strength

With the company of the regiment stationed at Madoc now at full war complement, officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment are concentrating their recruiting activities toward completion of the remaining three companies at present accepting recruits at Trenton, Picton and Belleville.

According to a statement issued this morning, the regiment is approximately 750 strong, and recruiting will be carried on at all points until the full war-strength is made up.

A list of Belleville recruits will be published as soon as obtainable.

Twelve Members Trudeau Motor Sales Have Joined the Army

With the young men of Canada enlisting in various units of the Canadian Active Service Force, business men, merchants and other employers are beginning to view with concern the situation that is developing as trained employees leave to join the colors.

While some firms have been hit more or less hard, others have had the experience of seeing valued employees leave in groups to serve the Empire.

Particularly serious, for a time, was the situation at the Trudeau Motor Sales Company of this city. Twelve out of a staff of fourteen have joined the army to date. Five of the group enlisted in a body. Other firms have reported similar conditions, but under existing circumstances are facing the issue with a grin and conducting "business as usual".

Police Blotter

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1938 model Plymouth coach last night and sought its recovery. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates 3-N-756 when taken.

Marjorie Haies, a student at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, reported the theft of her bicycle to city police late yesterday afternoon. The bike had been stolen from its usual parking position outside the school. As is usually the case in these thefts, police are convinced the bicycle was merely taken by a joy rider and will soon be abandoned and recovered.

An imebriate and five transients shared the cell block at the police station last night, one of the transients stating he was enroute to Kingston, where he hoped to join the Canadian army. "They're all filled up in Toronto," remarked the man as he signed the transient register.

Kiwanis Street Karnival Provides Amusement for All

Funds Obtained Will Help to Assist Worthwhile Objectives

STREETS BLOCKED OFF

Kiwanian guns roared out the first salvos in the battle for effective cooperation along the national service front here last night when the crack troops of the first city service club "battalion" to go into action captured the hearts and a large percentage of the pockets of the friendly enemy John Public in their first skirmish at the long-awaited Kiwanis Street Karnival.

Beneath their new standard "In Peace or War, Kiwanis Serves", the clubmen, grimly determined to make this their initial sortie in a new zone of operations a success, launched their offensive on six widely separated sectors.

They conducted a successful "blockout" of Front street from Victoria avenue to the Bridge street intersection (with the gracious permission of the city fathers, and the fine cooperation of the city and district motorists) where the melodic strains of sweet music mingled and intermingled with the lively tunes of those grand old melodies that grandma and grandpa danced to years ago when war was something that was strictly confined to history books, and those of the hilarious jitterbuggian type so popular with the young people of today, as the crossroads of the district forgot war, death and taxes to indulge in terpsichorean revelry beneath the light of a brilliant though somewhat cool harvest moon.

Adding a real military touch (it was the only game of chance allowed in the army) were the various Bingo games. Attractively decorated booths and concessions along the right-of-way catered to the inherent love of chance that is alive in all humans. There were wheels where you could get your smokes. Wheels where you could get candy and other prizes. Refreshment concessions catered to the inner man, woman and child.

There was music galore. The crack Belleville Municipal Band, already an established favorite with music-lovers of the city and district dispensed melodies old and new in their own inimitable manner. Prior to the karnival proper the band entertained the early arrivals with catchy tunes.

Window Shopping.

A new game was introduced to Bellevillians and judging from the large numbers participating in the pastime, it was doubtless the feature of the Kiwanis Club's street karnival. The game was known as "window shopping", during which the citizens had to be on the alert and possess good eyesight, as well as knowledge of goods displayed. Various merchants along the main street had their display windows well lighted for the occasion. The puzzle was to find advertising mistakes in the business windows. Each merchant displaying goods had at least one error visible in their window display. It might have been an error in the spelling of a word, or a piece of merchandise placed wrongly on display and many other catchy methods that made the game quite popular and saw hundreds of children, as well as adults, take part in this new Kiwanis feature. Citizens gazed at length into some windows, where the purposely-made mistakes were so cleverly conducted and displayed that it took those participating considerable time to solve the problems arranged by the window displays.

Mileage-Guess Contest.

Another popular feature presented by the Kiwanis was still a second guessing contest. Erected on a ramp was a new automobile which had the rear wheels suspended and the engine in full operation. The car was in gear, thus registering the mileage of the vehicle during the progress of the karnival. Here the problem confronting the individual guesser was to endeavour to judge the speed of the revolving wheels, and subsequently arrive at the number of miles the speedometer would register during the full evening, which it was in operation. Unlike the former contest, however, this mileage guessing problem developed into a purely guessing question, as the speed of the car was advanced and retarded at different intervals. In both contests prizes are to be awarded the lucky winners.

Hope Chest.

Popular in the eyes of the fair sex was the annual Kiwanis Club "hope chest" draw.

Beautifully arranged in the windows of the Walker Hardware store on Front street, where all the articles, delicate and otherwise, dear to the feminine heart that a hope-chest is supposed to contain, the handsome prize drew the unstinted admiration of crowds of feminine patrons of the karnival. The committee in charge of Mrs. (Dr.) R. A. Flynn, moved about the crowds offering chances for a nominal sum. The chest, valued at $100 will be drawn for tonight.

Blue-bereted Kiwanians, veterans in service club work, won their spurs in this new sphere of activity. They moved about their appointed tasks with the east and aplomb of seasoned warriors on this new front, and their enthusiasm on this the first night of their endeavor in national service augurs well for the success of the venture and the financial benefit to the coffers of the patriotic purpose to which the funds will go.

Youth and age had its fling in the later hours. To the rippling rhythms of Don Fairman and his augmented Tophatters orchestra, young and old enjoyed dancing on that part of Front street near Campbell. There was joy and hilarity as elderly and youthful rural residents of the district "hoed it down" to the lilting music of the old-fashioned barn dance. Beneath the brilliance of the colored "holiday" lights of Front street that in turn shone down against the background of a silvery moon, modern youth "jitterbugged" to its heart's content. They fox trotted and waltzed until a late hour, and no doubt tonight will see the impromptu dance hall packed with enthusiasts of this form of entertainment.

The karnival itself is a distinct innovation and a novel departure from the usual Kiwanian style of public entertainment. There is no admission to the "grounds". The street which is blocked off is open to pedestrians who are at liberty to wander wherever they choose. It does not cost a cent to "look". The sky is the roof of the auditorium. A truck is the orchestra dais. The sidewalks are the bleachers to this novel game of Kiwanian endeavor.

Members of the club, from President Dr. "Dick" Flynn, exuded a spirit of confidence in the general public last night. There was gaiety and laughter as they moved about their appointed tasks. But beneath all the light-heartedness, there was a grim purposefulness.

Ready to Serve.

For this group of prominent business and professional men of the city who under the banner of Kiwanis have for the past decade performed yeoman service-work among the underprivileged children of the city and district, have set themselves to a task at which the majority of them are "recruits".

The first to recognize the awful import of the meaning of the word war among city service-club organizations, they realized the immensity of the job that confronts organization and individual alike on the "home front" if Great Britain, Canada and their gallant allies are to pursue the present conflict to a successful conclusion.

They are the first club to take up the cudgels of national service in the city. They had other plans for the proceeds of the street karnival long before war was declared, and they had plenty of sources in which the money could be used.

Britain Declared War.

Kiwanis immediately stood shoulder to shoulder with other organizations of the city in a voluntary affirmation of loyalty to Canada and the Empire. They wasted no time. Plans long formulated for the raising of funds for their ordinary service work were amplified as the new national need arose. Their efforts were increased, and inspired by the spirit of love of country, freedom, liberty and British principles, they immediately donned the uniform of national service, and plunged wholeheartedly into the fray.

There is no personal nor collective gain for them in this, their first patriotic venture. You are not giving money to the Kiwanis Club—you are giving it to the nation in its dark hours. There will be stressing need for funds and necessities in the near future. Everyone will be called upon to do his or her part. Sacrifices, perhaps, will be made. And the Kiwanis Club of Belleville stands at the salute ready to serve "in peace or war".

They ask you to patronize their karnival. The nation needs your help. The boys "oven there" need your help. The evacuated children of England need clothing and blankets. Attend the Kiwanis Karnival tonight.

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS FOR DEMOCRACY

That the Western Democracies are determined to deliver a death blow to Hitlerism, was the statement of the British Prime Minister who declared on Wednesday that neither Hitler's threats nor the invasion of Poland by Russia would deter Britain and France from their object. Inspired by the deathless valor of the Poles in fighting against awful odds, Mr. Chamberlain made it clear that anything that Adolf Hitler said at Danzig the day before did not alter the situation. There will be no peace with Hitlerism.

No encouragement could be found by Germany in the statement of the Premier. He set no term to the duration of the war except to impress that Naziism must be crushed. Encouraging to the British and French were the words that Britain is taking the offensive against the U-boat menace, that her losses through submarines of the foe were far less today than they were in the Great War. British strength will steadily grow through the vast resources which are Britain's.

THE MISSING WORD

No man could have a more stinging reference made to him than was made to Adolf Hitler by Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday. He referred to Hitler's Danzig speech, and Hitler's references to the humane methods by which he would wage war, but, said Mr. Chamberlain, the accounts of German bombing of open towns and the machine gunning of refugees have shocked the world.

Then followed words which forever condemn Adolf Hitler and his policy. Said Mr. Chamberlain, "What I have searched for in vain in his speech is one single word that Hitler remembers the brave men who have already lost their lives in this quarrel of his making, or their wives and children who have been bereft forever of the head of their family because their leader's lust for power had to be satisfied."

Great military leaders there have been who have wept on account of victory because so many died and suffered, and so many were bereft forever of loved ones.

Hitler must have seen on his way to Danzig all the evidences of the war which had been begun by his orders on the morning of September first. But no hint of the sorrows of that war appears in his speech.

FOREVER POLAND

Any hope that Germans might have that the war might end with the Russo-German partition of Poland, as a fait accompli, must disappear before the expressed opinion of the peoples of Britain and France. They sheathe not the sword while Hitler is able to dominate the policies of Germany in any part of Europe.

Hitler's bold effrontery in trying to place blame on Britain chiefly merely reacts in strengthening the already firm and staunch British attitude against Hitlerism.

It was only the cruel steel-like mind of Nazi Germans who could suggest such a thing as that Britain and France would halt their struggle with Germany because Poland was laid prostrate. Such could not know the British and French spirit. Poland would not have been outraged, her men, women and children slain, had the Nazi Government not forced war and refused arbitration because of the lust of the German regime for power.

Poland's forces still fight and even if she is shrunken by the German and Russian grabs of territory to but a small part of herself to act as a buffer state between the Russians and the Germans, she is Poland and will be Poland in spirit and ultimately Poland in fact. Today she is the Poland of battered armies through the overwhelming might of German militarism which knows not manliness and generosity and through the non-aggression pact with Russia. The appearance of these two powerful nations in their armed power standing beside Poland makes one ask where is the sense of chivalry in Germany and Russia.

For a time many Poles, men, women and children, must live abroad as exiles or under the shame of German domination which forces the conquered to fight and labor against their own country's ideals. But the Poland that was will be the ghost at Hitler's feasting and gloating over the hammer blows of his lightning war.

Those who tell Britain and France that there is nothing to fight for do not tell the truth. There is more to fight for than ever for all have seen the German machine come upon a comparatively small nation and practically wipe it out. Then there is the other unprotected world of small democratic states and the central European states which would fall into Germany's jaws did not champions of right appear in France and Britain. The spirit of democracy must be fought for. A look at the settlement of Poland which Hitler says will ease the tension of the world shows that plainly enough.

It is the might of the lawless which has prevailed over Poland. But there is like the law of society, the law of heaven which does fall on those who outrage life and civilization.

Hitler has not spoken nor broadcast the last word on Poland. British and French guns and men will answer Hitler from in front of his Siegfried line, with the acts and prayers of the Poles working for their country's restoration.

VANCOUVER HAS A PERVERTED MUSICAL TASTE, APPARENTLY, for an itinerant bagpipe player was haled into court there and charged with being a nuisance. The player had a habit of playing in residential sections and in the lobby of apartment houses, accepting whatever coins came his way for his musical efforts. The magistrate offered Jock his freedom if he would promise to discontinue his bagpipe concerts where his music was not appreciated. Jock was highly insulted and reminded the magistrate that the pipes constituted a legal musical instrument, and that as a free British subject he would play them wherever he chose. "Well, you had better choose to play them in Oakalla, (provincial jail) for that is where you are going to spend the next two months," said the magistrate.

"ENGLAND DOES NOT OWE US ANY MONEY. We sold her steel at $285 per ton, and she owes us steel, but we do not want that. I suggest that she give us Nassau and Bermuda in payment, and then we could get back all the Americans who live there to dodge taxes." So said Jules S. Bache, big businessman, on being interviewed by newspapermen when he returned from Europe recently. England bought United States steel during the Great War at $285 a ton, price today about $54. Yankee ranters about war debts unpaid never go into particulars.

Largest Cattle Show in History

Registered as one of the fair feature attractions particularly for Hastings County Cattle Breeders was the Black and White Day sponsored in conjunction with the fair by the Stirling Agricultural Society, Hastings County Holstein Breeders' Club and the Ontario Livestock Branch. E. Hubble were owners of most prize winners.

All classes of the horse show were superior in quality than any of previous years, and in a fairly large showing of swine, Messrs. D. W. Heath and George Hutchinson shared honours in reaching the money in all events.

Also the Stirling school section of general gardening and horticulture, household science, manual training and art. Also featured with the fair's most interesting project was the Stirling Boys' Grain Club Achievement Day directed by Mr. H. L. Fair, B.S.A., local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Prominent among local prize winners in the fruit division was Mrs. H. R. Detlor scoring four firsts and a second in that group. Mrs. L. E. Bryant led in exhibiting ladies' work gaining a total of fifteen firsts, sixteen seconds, and nine thirds. Local winners in this division included Miss Jennie Clemments with five firsts, seven seconds and several thirds. Miss Evelyn Bailey, Miss Gena Spry, Miss Alice Lake and Mrs. A. Ivan Caldwell, local market gardener, carried off nine firsts, three seconds and six thirds in this group.

Flower Show Attracts Many.

The centre section of the west end of the building was a mass of gorgeous colors created by the skilful arrangement of the flower show arranged and directed by the officers and members of the Stirling Horticultural Society under the leadership of President Fred Houchin and Secretary-Treasurer J. B. Belshaw. North of the flower show in the section formerly utilized for the Hastings County championship school fair Stirling students of the public and high schools displayed their knowledge in many crafts.

On the south side of the building various branches of the Ontario Women's Institute displayed to great advantage many things of interest to home builders and various types of handicraft created by the ladies of their organization. Men were much interested in the display of shopwork taken from the workshop and manual training room of the Stirling schools. Here they saw articles reaching almost mechanical perfection created by their sons and placed in competition. Displays of art craft and household science projects, the future women of the district also held the attention of many visitors that filed through the building throughout the entire day.

Booths, Games, Attractions.

Music was provided throughout the day by Stirling Citizens' Band under the direction of band leader Maurice Bell, and novelty entertainment of the day included juggling, tightwire and clown acts provided by a group of Toronto artists near the grandstand. Booths and games of chance arrayed in a lengthy row in the infield were well patronized. The ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church served full course meals and lunches in a most satisfying manner to an increased number of patrons.

Horse Race Keenly Contested.

Lovers of fine horses witnessed the showing of some of the finest specimens ever to enter the ring at Stirling according to superintendents and judges. Later they watched with interest the trotting races on a track that was in fine condition. The results of the two classes were as follows:

Hastings County Rural Softball Tournament

Variety was added to the splendid sports programme by the softball tournament for the rural championship of Hastings County. A special prize for the winning team in this event was donated by George Thompson, County Warden. Softball fans were given a real treat as three league championship teams representing Huntingdon, Rawdon and Sidney Townships battled for the County championship. The fast moving Sidney squad played two excellent games ousting Huntingdon and Rawdon champions by fairly close scores to gain the award of the County Championship and the Warden's special prize, a sport sweater for each member of the team.

The Games

Rawdon gained a bye and Sidney met Huntingdon in the first game of the series and opened the batting in their half of the second with two home runs scored by Gerry Pyear and Radford. Huntingdon went into the lead scoring three in the third and Sidney got four more in the fourth and three in the eighth totalling nine. Huntingdon with Naylor on the mound played fine ball but their total only reached six.

Second Game

After a brief rest period the winners took on Rawdon champions for the all important game with Shortt returning to the mound to continue his fine performance. Rawdon showed considerable strength after the fifth inning but in the meantime the Southerners had rapped in no less than fifteen runs, four in the first and fifth and two in each of the other three. They failed to score after the fifth. Rawdon got two in the first and one in each of the third, fourth, fifth and seventh.

Dance Held at Night

Climaxing a successful day of real activity the younger people of the district and many visitors remained for the special feature presented at the Stirling theatre and the dance which began at 10 p.m., in the Stirling Community Hall. Stocks Found Normal

It called in the refineries and found stocks normal. However, to insure more than adequate supplies, the Board asked the refineries to distribute 25 per cent more than normal, and during the first 12 days of September the sugar refineries produced an extra 50,000,000 pounds, or about 30 per cent more than average for the period.

The Board checked wholesalers and retailers throughout the country, most being cleared of any suspicion of restraining trade. The refineries had made no change in price since April 27, 1939. To bring all the sugar possible on to the market, the Board finally asked certain manufacturers, such as canners and biscuit makers, to release part of the annual supplies these firms bought last Spring. Despite the fact that canners are canning more than usual this year, several millions additional pounds were poured into the market.

80 Inspectors Working

With the close co-operation of 80 inspectors of the Weights and Measures branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, equipped with special powers, and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Board was able to assure itself of the actual situation regarding sugar supplies in wholesale and retail hands.

An important part of the Board's work in connection with sugar also had been its negotiations to assure adequate raw supplies to the refineries.

Hector B. McKinnon, Board Chairman said today the Board is proceeding immediately with special studies into flour, butter, coal, wool, millfeed and similar products. An administrator already is functioning over the wool industry controlling supply and regulating distributing between civil and military uses. Exports of cross-breed wools, which might be sold in the currently attractive United States market, are being licensed, especially in view of Canadian need of such wool for military purposes.

May Be Special Control

Similar administrators also may be considered necessary to regulate other industries as time goes on. Price rises in butter and flour when there are abundant supplies may lead to special controls. The suggestion a few days ago that trading on exchanges in butter might have to be restricted to certain people was alone sufficient warning to effect a gradual softening of the butter market ever since.

The complex situation regarding flour and mill feeds and their tie-up with the export market is being worked out by the Board with the co-operation of the millers.

Looking Far Ahead

A fuel administrator is a distant possibility. While the coming winter is unlikely to provide difficulty regarding price or supply, the Board is examining the prospects for the winter of 1940-41 in time to take any necessary action.

In the field of meats and other agricultural products, the Board is working closely with the Agricultural Supply committee headed by Dr. A. M. Shaw, director of marketing, who also is a member of the Board. The work there is directed to maintaining a normal flow of all kinds of agricultural produce in abnormal times, to preserve a balance within agriculture itself, even by price control.

W. R. CAMPBELL

A British mission headed by Sir James Rae, Undersecretary of the Treasury, has been here for some time to prepare for shipment of war supplies and foodstuffs to Britain. The mission will co-operate with the new Supply Board in gearing Canadian industry, agriculture and mining to the wartime pitch of production of supplies for Canada and Britain.

Pay $1 a Year

Both Mr. Campbell and Mr. Vaughan will retain their connection with their peacetime jobs, serving the country for $1 a year, the Prime Minister said.

Mr. Campbell, 57 next month, was born in Windsor, and joined the Ford Company in 1905, a year after it was established in Windsor.

Mr. Vaughan is a year younger than his colleague, and was born in Toronto. He started his railway career in Toronto at the age of 14 as a Canadian Pacific Railway messenger. He later transferred to the Grand Trunk Railway, then the Great Northern Railway, and eventually the Canadian National. He rose steadily, becoming Vice-President in 1920.

Statement Issued

Following is the text of Mr. Mackenzie King's statement:

The Prime Minister announced today the appointment of Wallace R. Campbell, of Windsor, Ont., President of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, and Robert C. Vaughan of Montreal, Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways, as members, without salary, of the new War Supply Board, the setting-up of which was authorized at the end of last week. Mr. Campbell is appointed chairman and Mr. Vaughan vice-chairman and director-general of purchases. Other members of the Board, including a member from Quebec, will be appointed at an early date.

To Stay With Company

The Prime Minister indicated that, while Mr. Campbell will give practically full time to the work of the Board, he is, with the complete approval of the Government, not severing his connection with the organization with which he has been identified for so many years. The Prime Minister expressed the profound satisfaction and appreciation of the Government that Canada was, at this time, to have the benefit of the services of an industrialist and business man of Mr. Campbell's nationwide and outstanding reputation and experience.

The Prime Minister was equally appreciative of the contribution which Mr. Vaughan had made and is making in connection with this vitally important phase of war activities. He recalled that when the act setting up the Defence Purchasing Board which was a peace time measure, was proclaimed a few weeks ago, Mr. Vaughan was asked by the Government to assume the chairmanship, which he agreed to do for a period of three months until the organization was in working shape and the Board of Directors of the Canadian National Railways, at the request of the Government, agreed to loan Mr. Vaughan for organization work for the period referred to.

Wide Field For Board

The whole situation changed, however, on the declaration of war, requiring the setting up of a body with a much wider field of activity than day-to-day purchases. Accordingly, as forecast by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, the new Board had been authorised with the responsibility of surveying, organizing and mobilizing the resources and industries available to Canada for the prosecution of the war.

SUGAR

To The BUYING PUBLIC

BECAUSE we have tried to intelligently handle the sale and distribution of Sugar, which for the first two weeks of the War, was equal to the whole month of September a year ago, a number of people who did not seem to understand the circumstances, have said that we were not fair in the way we are limiting the sale.

IF we had not put restrictions on the purchase quantity, we would have only had Sugar for a few days of the month's supply, providing we could have secured it the first few days after the outbreak of War.

A NUMBER of people, who were not Loblaw's customers, came in our stores for Sugar and, not being willing to comply with our restrictions, became very critical and attempted to get more than their immediate requirements by visiting other stores to buy little else but Sugar.

WE endeavoured to head off this class of buyers. We have tried to be fair to our customers and believe we have satisfied all but a few.

IF those, who have objected to the way in which we have dealt with the Sugar situation, would come forward with a better plan, Loblaws would welcome it.

Wednesday, September 20th, 1939.

To OUR CUSTOMERS

WE are again able to secure only a portion of our weekly Sugar requirements. Therefore, we would ask our customers who have Sugar on hand, to defer making further purchases at present in an endeavour to enable those who have no Sugar, to secure at least a small part of their immediate requirements.

EVERY day we are endeavouring to secure further supplies and if we obtain more this week-end, it will be sent to our stores immediately.

ACCORDING to published Public Government report, there is no shortage of staple food commodity. In some instances the public have purchased more than their family weekly needs, consequently causing a temporary shortage which often results in higher prices.

THE turmoil that we are all encountering since the declaration of War, has prevented an even flow of merchandise to our warehouse and to our stores, which accounts for our stores being out of certain lines of merchandise.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, September 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

MOST propitious and progressive signs are noted in this day's planetary positions. These may be suddenly and dramatically precipitated, and may carry ambitious persons to high stations of attainment. An adventure or a spectacular experience may be involved. If not in connection with a unique or novel invention, the thrilling experience will be in romantic realms, with elopement or sudden marriage among the probabilities.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which there may be a thrilling adventure. Whether in the realm of science, invention or just sentimental romance, the experience is bound to be spectacular and of throbbing enjoyment to "parties of the first part," as well as to the public.

A child born on this day may be conspicuously endowed with talents, versatility and originality, as well as dramatic and creative ability to make remarkable success of its life.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Cancelling a Social Debt

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I wish to state a hypothetical question to which I should like your answer, please.

Mrs. Jones entertains and invites Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Brown accepts the invitation. Within a reasonable length of time, Mrs. Brown entertains and invites Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Jones cannot accept Mrs. Brown's invitation, as she has a previous engagement. My question is—Does Mrs. Jones's invitation cancel her indebtedness to Mrs. Brown even though Mrs. Brown did not accept it?

This little matter was being discussed among some friends not so long ago, and I would like your answer on the subject.

P.

Strictly speaking, yes: Mrs. Jones's invitation does "cancel her indebtedness" to Mrs. Brown.

But "strictly speaking" is a pretty bleak and not-too-friendly way of regarding the give and take of hospitality. Don't you agree?

Let's analyze the situation. Mrs. Brown has been kind and generous in her hospitality to Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Jones gives a party and invites Mrs. Brown, who, because of a previous engagement, cannot accept the invitation. Mrs. Jones smugly sits back, saying, "Well, I've done my social duty now. It's Mrs. Brown's bad luck that she couldn't come. Now I'll wait for her next move."

Of course, if we enjoy balancing the budget of our social life and our social bows in this debt and credit way, we can. But I doubt if we will get very far in our enjoyment of ourselves, in our friends' enjoyment of us, or in our progress along the way of making new friends.

Of course, too, if Mrs. Jones doesn't like Mrs. Brown very much, or has no special interest in developing the friendship, she need make no more effort toward developing it.

But if she does like Mrs. Brown and if she is interested in developing the friendship, the most natural thing in the world for her to do is to give Mrs. Brown another chance —invite her to her next party, or ask her, for example, to tea with her alone. Mrs. Brown will probably be delighted to have Mrs. Jones call her up some day very soon, and have her say, "I was so disappointed that you couldn't come to my party. I had been looking forward so much to having a chat with you, and I wonder if you could have tea with me this afternoon or some other day this week, either here or at the Meadow Club. It would make me so happy if you could."

This type of graciousness opens the door of friendliness, and keeps it open, if both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Brown wish to keep it open. Here's where the personal equation, as well as the social equation, comes in! And only Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Brown hold the key to that door.

Who Issues the Invitation?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Please let me know if it is proper to invite the friends whom your friend has introduced to you, or should you wait for them to extend an invitation to you? At a luncheon in my friend's home recently there were several of her friends I liked particularly, and I would enjoy entertaining them. Should I wait for them to invite me to their homes before I invite them to my home?

W.

It is entirely in order for you to invite to your home, for some special occasion, the friends of your friend whom you have met and found attractive. This is the way of friendship . . . .the way firendships grow and blossom.

But . . . and this is a very important but . . . it is unfriendly to the hostess or host through whom you met these new acquaintances if you do not include this hostess or host in your invitation.

It is easy to analyze why this is true. Your friend is gracious and generous in his or her hospitable invitation. You meet and enjoy the guests. Then you immediately appropriate the guests for your social inclinations . . and seem to forget the hostess or host through whose favor you met them. Obviously this isn't the way of thoughtfulness.

So the thing to do is, when you make your decision to invite the new acquaintances, first to call up or see your hostess or host and tell her or him your plans. Of course your friend will be delighted that you wish to offer this hospitality; will be proud, too, that you proceed in this courteous way.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Once Made Violent Love, Now He's Engaged to Another

Dear Miss Fairfax

Today I learned of the engagement of a man who two weeks ago was overwhelmingly affectionate to me. Both of our families were very much against our seeing each other. However, I am sure this is not the reason for his sudden turnabout. It may be that the party who informed me of the engagement was merely trying to get a reaction for reasons of his own; but I doubt it.

Do you think that I should write to him, or try to contact him, or just let things go on? I am not heartbroken, merely

Wondering

So glad you're not heartbroken. That type, who falls for every girl and makes love to all and sundry, hands out plenty of heartbreaks to sweethearts and wives. No, I should not attempt to write or make contacts. Chalk it up to human experience, and thank your lucky stars your affections haven't been touched.

She Could Take a Joke, But Not He

Dear Miss Fairfax

I've been going with a young man for about six months. I'm 17 and he's 23. We always had good times together and I thought he was fond of me. But the other day my young brother and some of his little friends thought of a trick to play on us. They went to the home of one of the other little boys and one of them called my friend to the phone, and disguised his voice to sound like mine. They kidded him along and then hung up. Then they called me up too, but I caught on right away and kidded back to them.

But it seems that he can't take a joke, and now he won't speak to me. When I see him he snubs me. I treated him swell, and we used to have good times at my house, dancing and playing the piano and singing. Now he talks to other boys about me.

Worried

At the delightful age of 17, why worry about a young man so lacking in many of the essentials? If he couldn't tell the difference between your voice and that of a young child playing a prank, it looks as if he were not particularly bright, doesn't it?

And a boy who will talk about a girl with whom he has been on such friendly terms is not well bred, is he? How can you talk to him, if he won't even look at you on the street?

I've not told all you've confided about this young man, and I hope you'll forgive me for saying I think you've been very foolish. I suggest you find some friends who are more worthy of a nice girl friend.

She Found Out Too Late That She Loved Him

Dear Miss Fairfax

About a year ago I became acquainted with a young man, and liked him right at the beginning. And may I say, he loved me immediately. We went around together and then I became tired of him because he was at the house almost every day. This kept on, when all of a sudden I realized that I was falling head over heels in love with him, being unaware of it all the time I was going with him. Soon we both cared devotedly and began making plans for the future.

Within the past few weeks everything seems to have gone to pieces, and my dream-house is tumbling down over my ears. He has started running with other girls, and rather cheaps ones, and I'm heart-broken. He still comes over occasionally, and knows how he is hurting me, although I try my best not to let him see how hard it is on me. Is there any hope for us?

C. E.

To try to rekindle a dead love, my dear, is like trying to make a fire out of ashes. Don't try to force things. Keep on with your own life; live it bravely and happily. Sometimes they do come back. If not, you see that your deep affection and loyalty were a mistake. He wasn't worthy. Time cures all things, even sorrows.

Red Cross Revises Instructions For Knitting Socks for Army Wear

Revised instructions for the knitting of socks, issued to all groups now engaged in supplying war requirements, were released last night by the War Work Committee of the Red Cross. Necessary changes have been made to obviate difficulties experienced in knitting from the originally released instructions. Instructions now read:

Please make a wearable sock, pressing or using stretchers. Length of foot when finished, 11 inches. Four and three-quarters ounces of 4-ply fingering. Needles: No. 11, by Bell gauge.

Cast on 60 stitches, rib 4 inches, 2 plain, 2 purl. Knit 7 inches (11 in all). Heel: Knit plain 28 stitches on to one needle, turn, purl back these 28 stitches, turn, knit plain. Repeat these two rows (always slipping the first stitch) 11 times (12 in all), or 24 rows.

With the inside of the heel toward you, purl 15 stitches, slip 1, purl 1, pull slipped stitch over, purl 1. Turn, knit 4 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit 1, turn, purl 5 stitches, slip 1, purl 1, pull slipped stitch over, purl 1. Turn, knit 6 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit 1. Turn, purl 9 stitches, slip 1, purl 1. Pull slipped stitch over, purl 1. Turn, knit 8 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit 1. Turn, purl 13 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, purl 1. Turn, knit 14 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over knit 1.

Pick up and knit the 12 stitches down the side of the heel piece and knit two stitches off the front of the needle. Knit the 28 stitches of the front needles on to one needle the last two stitches knit on to the third needle, on which pick up and knit the 12 stitches at the other side of the heel piece. Divide the heel stitches on to the 2 side needles and knit right around again to the centre heel. First needle, knit to within 3 stitches of the front end of the side needle, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit 1.

Front needle plain. Third needle, knit 1, skip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit plain to the end of the needle. This reducing to be done every other row until there are 56 stitches on the needles (front needle 28, side needles 14 each). Knit plain until the foot from the back of the heel measures 9 inches.

Kitchener Toe: Decrease for toe. Knit 6 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, knit 6 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over. Repeat this around the three needles. Then knit 6 rows plain, knit 5 stitches, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, and repeat around the three needles. Then 4 plain rows, knit 3, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, repeat to end of three needles, then 3 plain rows, then knit 2, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over. Repeat to end of three needles, then 2 plain, knit 1, slip 1, knit 1, pull slipped stitch over, repeat to end of 3 needles. Then 1 plain row, then 1 row, decreasing, if necessary, so as to leave 7 stitches on front needle and 4 on each of the back needles. Knit the back stitches on to one needle. Break off the wool leaving about 10 inches. Thread this into a darning needle, put through the first stitch on front needle as if for purling, but do not take the stitch off. Then put the darning needle through the first stitch on the back needle, as if for purling, and take off.

xThen through next stitch on back needle, as if for knitting, and do not take off. Then through the first stitch on front needle, again knitting and slip off. Through the second stitch on front needle purling and do not take off. Through the first stitch on back needle purling and take off.

Repeat from x until all the stitches are worked off. N.B.—Each stitch must be gone through twice, except the first and last on back needles. Always keep the wool under the knitting needles. When reducing, it is better to slip 1 and pull the slipped stitch over instead of taking two together. In finishing off end of yarn, run yarn once down the toe so as not to make a ridge or lump.

Alternate Toe: Decrease for toe. On front needle knit 2, slip 1, pass slip stitch over. Knit to within 4 stitches from end of needle. Knit 2 stitches together, knit 2. On first side knit 2, slip 1, knit 1, pass slip stitches over. Knit to end of needle. Knit to within 4 stitches from end of second side needle, knit 2 together, knit 3. Knit around plain. Repeat these two rows until there are 10 stitches on front needle and 5 on each of side needles. Now slip stitches from one side needle to the other, making 10 stitches on 2 needles. Break wool. This latter toe is favored by many experienced knitters.

Stewardship and Missions Are Theme of Conference

Meetings Under Auspices of United Church Held for District in Bridge Street and Holloway Street United Churches

A conference on Christian Stewardship and the Dominion and World Wide Missions was held Wednesday afternoon and evening at Bridge Street United Church with a banquet in Holloway Street Church.

Rev. W. R. Merrick, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery Missionary and Maintenance Committee presided and welcomed the delegates. The conference was largely attended.

The devotional message was given by Rev. H. B. Herrington, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery. "Ye shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria and the uttermost parts of the earth," was the text.

"Jerusalem corresponds to our own local community where each witness, through their daily living, by example, the spirit of kindness, service and humility," he sad.

"Judea represents the county as a whole with all its problems of political corruption, race superiority and intemperance.

"Samaria corresponds to hostile countries where there is need of teaching the way of love and the uttermost parts of the earth makes the world the field."

The Madras Conference.

Mr. H. D. Taylor, Secretary of Foreign Missions of the Dominion Board was introduced by Mrs. F. L. Hooper, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, Belleville Presbytery.

Mrs. Taylor, who was a member of the Christian Conference at Madras last December, brought a challenging message to this missionary conference held in Belleville.

The Madras conference comprised of 470 members, had delegates from seventy different countries speaking fifteen different languages. Inspiration and the fruits of Christianity were evident, said Mrs. Taylor, in the increased membership, there being delegates from India, the home land of the conference, Africa, America, Japan and China, all warring factions of the world being represented and all felt drawn together with common loyalty to one Christ.

Gathering at a time of unparalleled perils, meeting under the shadow of warring countries, the opening address by Dr. Mott was unforgettable, said Mrs. Taylor.

If the Christian churches had done their uttermost, then they might despair, they were reminded, as they considered the world chaos, but realising this, there was optimism. Jesus said, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Light—follow Me." This being the strong challenge to all at the Madras conference.

At the Christmas morning service witnesses told in their own tongue of the growth of Christianity in their home churches. The fellowship during the seventeen days where they knelt together for Communion and Prayer, discussing problems, recognizing world-wide evangelism, was a visible example of Christian unity.

One church in one part of the world cannot shed its responsibility to churches in other parts of the world.

Witnesses.

The church does not exist to take permanent care of hereditary Christians, but every member should witness the vitality and power of Christ's love and they were challenged to go forth saying, "I am a baptized Christian, woe unto me if I preach not the gospel to all nations".

At this conference, they, too, recognized the sins and failures within individuals. "We cannot truthfully say" Mrs. Taylor reminded her hearers, "that we live in a Christian country where a large percentage show no allegiance to any church but we can say a large number in our land are Christians, and the Madras challenge to all churches was to express its unity in brotherhood. Mrs. Taylor vividly described the unity of the Christian Japanese and Chinese delegates whose countries were at war and she asked us, could we do the same today with Germans?

Mrs. Taylor's closing message was a challenge to the members of the Belleville conference. The call goes out—to whom great things have been given—to him God expects much, and to ever bear witness.

Mrs. Taylor and her husband were missionaries in China from 1920 until 1931. After his death in 1935 Mrs. Taylor joined the staff of the Dominion Board in 1936 as Foreign Secretary. She is a very brilliant speaker.

Stewardship

Dr. Charles Endicott, D.D., secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee directed a discussioo nn the subject of Christian Stewardship, based on the text "Ye are not your own". In view of this fact we are all stewards because of a contract entered into with Jesus Christ. So often people excuse themselves by blaming Adam's sin, this should not be, each person must accept the responsibility for themselves. The time honoured excuse of lack of time is so often given, but if there is a sense of duty, time, talents and possessions will be forthcoming for the love of doing.

Dr. James Semple assisted with the discussion dealing with the Stewardship of Time.' In each day of twenty-four hours, eight are given to work, eight to rest, and eight that people can choose what they are to be used for. If it is not possible to give all of this time, even the small fragments can be made use of . These were compared to the beautiful Cathedral window that was made from fragments of stained glass. The example of Lincoln who used his spare time to improve his arithmetic and grammar, and of William Carey, who while working at his cobbler's bench had ever before him the map of India, were cited. So many people are willing to give time and effort to serve in fraternal societies anc service clubs, but are not willing to give anything to the work of the church. If the leisure time was organized and work chosen, a great deal could be accomplished.

Talents

Mrs. W. F. Osborne sopke on the "Stewardship of Talents", and stressed the fact that even if we have no natural ability it can be trained. The talent of Leadership is very important, the reason often that people are not willing to accept leadership is because of the criticism. There is a great lack in Church work of trained leaders. The musical talent is much appreciated and used in the worship services of th church as well as the other talents of reading, story-telling, giving reports, art, dramatization, worship, being hostess, and lacking all these everyone can be friendly and wear a pleasant smile.

Money

Mr. H. B. Fetterly in speaking of the "Stewardship of Money" stated that only 25 per cent of the church members contributed to the Missionary and Maintenance fund, due in part to lack of knowledge of the great work carried on by this fund at home and abroad. If all members tithed there would be no financial difficulties, while spasmodic giving is appreciated, systematic giving counts a great deal more. If children form the habit of systematic giving there will be no difficulty when they grow up.

An open discussion followed with several of the audience taking part and contributing their own experience in the matter.

Mrs Strangway Tells of Missions

A banquet was served by the ladies of Holloway Street United Church and enjoyed by over 200 delegates. Mr. E. L. Fraser, President of the Conference Lay Association, was chairman of the supper meeting and introduced Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Strangway, missionaries on furlough from Angola, West Africa.

Mrs. Strangway told of the work they were doing in Angola, a Portuguese colony, where prior to 1850 there had been no form of civilization. It was through this territory David Livingstone travelled with his natives to send reports back to England. Several of the rocks where he rested to rewrite his diary that was lost are still there as monuments to his work. David Livingstone died in 1873. Shortly after Dr. Meeng in trying to discover the source of the illicit traffic in slaves discovered the need of the people and sent a request for missionaries. This call was responded to by the American and Canadian Congregational churches who were able to teach a few of the people to read and write and to follow Christian ideals. From this small beginning the "Church of Christ" in Angola has grown to comprise over 100,000 members with its own native ordained ministers, elders, deaconesses, etc. This church is non-denominational, and besides carrying on their own work, they are sending workers and missionaries to all the surrounding villages. Interesting stories were told of the faithful service rendered by the native graduates of the Mission Schools.

Value of Medical Missions

The medical missionaries are very important because of the numerous diseases of the people, healing of body and soul are interlinked. People who have been healed of bodily ailments are ready to listen and believe and go out and tell others.

Dr. Strangway told a very interesting story of the conversion of an old witch doctor.

This witch doctor had become very wealthy from the fees of hens, goats, pigs, cattle, etc., he had collected from his patients. However, when cataracts came on his own eyes he was helpless, his confederates took all his wealth, and still he was not cured. As a last resort he went to the Missionary hospital at Chissambi where the cataracts were removed. He was so grateful that he became a regular church attandant gave up practising witch craft. Previously he had used his power and influence against the church, but following his healing he was ready to work just as hard for it as he had against it.

COL. GEO. A. DREW

Premier Defends Bill

Premier Hepburn defended the bill as "manifestly fair," offering to give the Conservative Leader the names of 30 estates, picked at random, which have yielded revenue to the Province after fraud investigation. He said revenue that could be provided by the bill was necessary to meet wartime expenditures.

Col. Drew said that if a particular section of the law were passed "we might just as well do away with our courts altogether." The section, he declared, made it necessary for persons responsible for estates on which claims for duty are made to wait six months before their cases can be heard—and then they must make deposits and guarantees on the amounts allegedly owing.

Urged to Lay Measure Over

Asserting his belief that Succession Duties should be collected, Col. Drew urged that the measure be laid over until the next session to give an impartial committee of lawyers and judges opportunity to consider it.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, who introduced the 41-page bill to the House, pointed out that appeals under the bill would not be in the same category as ordinary lawsuits. This was a taxing measure, he said, and under its terms an appeal to the courts in Succession Duty cases was provided for the first time.

The bill designed to strengthen the government's hand before the courts in a Succession Duty drive that already has brought $23,000,000 into the Provincial Treasury since Premier Hepburn took office five years ago, gives new powers to examiners of estates.

"The relevancy of any examination, investigation of any information or question or any documents, records or things required to be produced on any such examination, investigation or inquiry shall not be subject to review or limitation by any court," it provides.

Col. Hunter Critical

The night sitting was marked otherwise by the criticism of Col. Fraser Hunter (Lib. Toronto-St. Patricks), an Imperial army veteran, of those who "make spurious offers of service" to the country in wartime.

"It is an idle gesture for members of this House of military age to publicly offer their services 'in any capacity'," he said. "A member should instead secure a medical certificate of fitness for service and promptly join the nearest unit calling for recruits."

Col. Hunter criticized the "wasting" of time in the legislature in debating the Succession Duty Act which he described as a taxation measure. He added: "Any increase in taxation the public believes should only be for the main purpose before us, winning this war."

Premier Hepburn commented briefly on Col. Hunter's remarks, explaining the Succession Duty Act did not increase taxation.

Officials Defended

Premier Hepburn defended officials of the Treasury Department from attacks which he said had been made in press editorials.

Until consideration of the new Succession Duty measures was started, the House moved quickly through measures for carrying on war-time work.

In the afternoon the House worked with unprecedented speed to push through second reading a dozen wartime emergency measures. Government Ministers explained some of the bills will be redrafted to meet opposition criticism, but general unanimity greeted the war legislation.

One measure to be redrafted provides for licences for all "public meetings in public places" and public processions and is designed to stamp out gatherings of subersive elements. Mr. Conant agreed to make provision that the enactment come into force only in municipalities which desired it.

Provisions in Act

The redrafted sections of the Succession Duty Act make the following provisions:

Exemption of gifts or legacies given during the lifetime of the deceased to charities; exemption of similar gifts more than 10 years before death to immediate members of his family and of gifts to all other persons made more than 20 years before death.

Total exemption on all gifts to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, the Canadian Red Cross and certain patriotic organizations.

Increase of from 10 to 20 per cent in surtax on gifts to relatives other than father, mother, husband, wife, grandparent, child, son-in-law or daughter-in-law. Increase of from 15 to 25 per cent in surtax on gifts to strangers.

Modification of penalties for nondisclosure, requiring payment in case of fraud of twice the amount of the duty found owing, as well as a daily fine up to $10 a day from the time the fraud was committed until discovered.

Powers Not Restricted

Confers powers on the Provincial Treasurer, special investigator or commissioner and says these shall not be restricted in "any manner." ". . . the relevancy of any examination investigation or inquiry any documents, records or things any documents records or things required to be produced on any such examination, investigation or inquiry shall not be subject to review or limitation by any court."

Allows any person from whom duty is claimed or the treasurer to refer any disputed claim to the Supreme Court for decision. Under the present Act this may be done only after an inquiry by a commissioner.

Provides a maximum fine of $10,000 and two years imprisonment for violations.

Adds airmen to soldiers and sailors in exempting their estates from duty when they die of war wounds or disease contracted within a year of active service.

Point Anne

Point Anne—On Sunday evening a large congregation gathered in St. John's Church. SAVE SUGAR
USE
BEE HIVE SYRUP

Thousands of women praise Bee Hive Syrup results in preserving their peaches, pears and plums by their favorite method—open kettle, or cold or hot pack—with hot water bath or oven processing.

With sugar hard to get in sufficient quantities and a fine luscious crop of peaches and other fruits waiting to be preserved, make your supply of sugar go further by using part Bee Hive Syrup instead of all sugar. We'll wager you'll be pleasantly surprised and delighted to discover what a tempting improvement Bee Hive Syrup can make to your preserves. Buy the 5 lb. tin or 10 lb. tin of Bee Hive Syrup for economy. Try these ideal proportions for a heavy and medium canning syrup developed by a well-known authority.

FOR PEACHES AND PLUMS

A grand tasting heavy canning syrup is made by using the following proportions: 1 cup of Bee Hive Syrup, 1 cup of sugar and 1 cup of water. Bring mixture to a boil and boil for 3 minutes. (4 times these quantities for a 6 quart basket of fruit.)

FOR PEARS

A fine medium canning syrup is made by using the following proportions: 1 cup of Bee Hive Syrup, 1 cup of sugar and 2 cups of water. Bring mixture to a boil and boil for 3 minutes. (About 3 times these quantities for a 6 quart basket of fruit.)

Emergency Sugarless Recipe!

(in the event of sugar being unobtainable)

Combine equal parts Bee Hive Syrup and water—bring to boil and boil 5 minutes.

3 Reasons Why
Addition of Bee Hive
Improves the Result

1 Bee Hive helps prevent crystallization. At times there is a tendency for preserves to become sugary. The addition of Bee Hive Syrup is a big help in practically eliminating this danger.

2 Bee Hive Syrup is a "converted" carbohydrate and therefore easier to digest than an "unconverted" carbohydrate. The use of Bee Hive Syrup makes the canning syrup more easily digested.

3 Bee Hive Syrup is not an intense "sweet," therefore the natural fruit flavours are allowed to dominate more pleasingly. Your peach preserves will have more of the peach flavour, when Bee Hive Syrup is used.

Bee Hive Syrup comes in 2, 5 and 10 lb. tins. While the "White" Bee Hive may be used for preserving, the "Golden" is the most popular.

Recipes by Ann Adam

PLUM JAM

Wash thoroughly, stone and cut in halves or quarters enough plums (about 2 quarts) to give 8 cups prepared fruit. Place in large saucepan and add 3 cups granulated sugar and 3 cups Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup. Stir over heat until mixture reaches boiling point. Simmer, stirring frequently, until a few drops of the mixture set when tested on a cold plate. Let stand a few minutes, skim, then turn into sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin and when cold, assure seal with additional paraffin. Makes 12 average-sized jars.

PEACH JAM

Peel and chop enough ripe peaches to make 8 cups of prepared fruit. Place in large saucepan and add 3 cups granulated sugar and 3 cups Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup. Stir over heat until mixture reaches boiling point. Simmer, stirring frequently, until a few drops of the mixture set when tested on a cold plate. Let stand a few minutes, skim, then turn into sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin, and when cold, assure seal with additional paraffin. Makes 12 average-sized jars.

PLUM-GRAPE CONSERVE

Wash and drain 3 quarts blue grapes; pull from stems and press the pulp from the skins. Simmer the pulp until tender, then press through a sieve to remove the seeds. Add the grape skins, 2 quarts blue plums (halved and stoned), 2 medium-sized oranges (sliced thin), 4 cups granulated sugar and 3 cups Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup. Stir over the heat until the mixture reaches boiling point. Simmer, stirring frequently, for 15 minutes. Add ¾ pound broken walnuts and continue cooking until a few drops of the mixture set when tested on a cold plate. Let stand a few minutes, skim, then turn into sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin and when cold, assure seal with additional paraffin. Makes 16 average-sized jars.

CRABAPPLE JELLY

Wash crabapples very thoroughly and cut in quarters. Add enough water to almost cover (allow about 3 cups water to each quart of crabapples). Simmer until the apples are very tender, then turn into jelly bag or double square of cheesecloth and drip juice. (The jelly bag may be pressed for a second less-clear "run" of juice, to be made up separately.) Bring juice to boiling point; to 1 teaspoon crabapple juice, add 1 teaspoon alcohol and let stand 3 minutes. If a mass of pectin forms which may be gathered from the mixture, juice is ready for addition of sweetening; otherwise, boil a little longer and re-test. For each cup of juice, allow ½ cup granulated sugar and ½ cup Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup add to boiling juice and stir over heat until sugar dissolves. Bring to boil and simmer, stirring frequently, until a few drops of mixture set when tested on a cold plate. Let stand a few minutes, skim, then turn into sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin and when cold, assure seal with additional paraffin.

GRAPE JELLY

Wash grapes well and pull from stems. Crush very thoroughly and simmer gently until tender. Turn into jelly bag or double square of cheesecloth and drip juice. (The jelly bag may be pressed for a second less-clear "run" of juice, to be made up separately.) Bring juice to boiling point to 1 teaspoon grape juice, add 1 teaspoon alcohol and let stand 3 minutes. If a mass of pectin forms which may be gathered from the mixture, juice is ready for addition of sweetening; otherwise, boil a little longer and re-test. For each cup of juice, allow ½ cup granulated sugar and ½ cup Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup add to boiling juice and stir over heat until sugar dissolves. Bring to boil and simmer, stirring frequently, until a few drops of mixture set when tested on a cold plate. Let stand a few minutes, skim, then turn into sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin and when cold, assure seal with additional paraffin.

Failed to See Pay-Off Punch And Bob Pastor Knocked Out By Brown Bomber in Eleventh

Joe Louis Defends His Title Before 'Home Folks' in Detroit

NAMED THE ROUND

Bob's Major Mistake Was Trying to Punch it Out With Champion

(By aGyle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

Detroit, Sept. 21 (AP)—A crushing right to the jaw sent Bob Pastor to his knees, dazed and helpless, in the 11th round at Briggs stadium last night, and champion Joe Louis had snuffed out one more fighter who made the mistake of facing him the second time.

The blow so numbed Pastor's senses that he didn't hear referee Sam Hennessey toll 10. They had to lift him to his tired legs, and he said: "I didn't see the punch. I didn't see it coming at all."

It must have been a deeply satisfying victory for Louis who was defending his title for the first time before cheering "home folks." Joe looked as nearly happy as he ever looks.

He had knocked the New York Jewish boy down five times in the first two rounds, and then, after what he described as a "breathing spell," had dropped him with a single blow. It was what he had dreamed of doing ever since the night 30 months ago when Pastor had danced around and taunted him in Madison Square Garden.

Thought Champ Befuddled

Some of the experts were saying after the fight that Joe wasn't the Brown Bomber of old, else he never would have let Pastor get away from him temporarily after he had slugged him to the canvas repeatedly at the outset of the battle. They thought the champ's legs looked tired and that he was befuddled in the eighth, ninth and 10th rounds, all of which Pastor won. But Joe laughed at that.

"I knew I was in there for a 20-round fight," he said. "I wasn't in any hurry at all after I hit him so much there at the start. But when I sat down at the end of the 10th I felt strong and fresh, so I told 'Chappie' (Jack Blackburn, his trainer) that I would get him the next round. Didn't I, Chappie?"

Not Brutal Fight

It wasn't a particularly brutal fight. Pastor, who weighed 183 and spotted Louis 17 pounds, came out of it with a gash on his left eyelid and a slightly bruised face. Louis had a mouse under his left eye.

Pastor got in some pretty good licks, first and last. Once, in the eighth round, he stood Louis up against the ropes and whaled him smartly. In fact, long after the scrap was over, he kept insisting to his manager, Jimmy Johnston: "I can punch with that guy, Pop."

That seemed to have been Bob's major mistake. Some time in the last 30 months he must have become convinced that he could punch with Louis. He began to do it the first round. All of a sudden, over snapped a Louis right. Joe scarcely used his famous left, incidentally, all through the fight, because Pastor was circling the wrong way. Down went Pastor, badly hurt, but he was up without a count. Three more times before the first round ended Bob hit the deck, for counts of nine and seven and nothing, the bell finally rescuing him.

A Scorching Right

Again in the second Louis dumped him with a scorching right but this time Pastor took the nine-second rest and finished the round strongly, actually, from that moment on until the 11th, when the lights went out, the game New Yorker came along better and better. He was doing all right until he failed to see that pay-off punch.

NEWARK BEARS DEFEATS WINGS

Rochester Fails to Get a Man to Third in Losing 5 to 0

Newark, N.J., Sept. 21 (AP)—Newark Bears, seeking to even off the final round of the Governor's Cup series at two games all, will send left-hander Max Macon against Rochester Red Wings today.

Macon's job has been cut out for him—a duplicate of the three-hit pitching turned in by Hank Borowy and Norman Branch last night.

Rochester failed to advance a man to third base, losing 5-0, after winning six straight playoff games, four of them against Buffalo in the semi-finals. The Bears, behind 2-0 in the series, pounced on Ken Raffensberger for four runs in the first inning and collected nine hits before the game was called because of rain in the eighth.

Borowy allowed two hits in six innings, retiring because of a blistered forefinger on his pitching hand. Branch yielded the third hit in his two innings and fanned four.

Mickey Witek, Bears shortstop, took hitting laurels with two three baggers and a single.

With one out in the first Holmes and Mack whipped sharp singles to left, but Kelleher struck out. Judnich walloped a double off the right field boards, Holmes and Mack holding third. Then Witek selected one to his liking and slammed out the first of his triples. He scored on a bounder by Mills to Kurowski. Kurowski threw late to the plate and catcher Narron shot the ball to first in time to catch Mills.

Witek smashed his second triple in the sixth and scored on a single by Schulte.

Rochester plans to start John Grodzicki in today's game. The fifth game of the series has been set for Ruppert stadium here tomorrow night.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

That night baseball is in the major leagues to stay and will continue to gain popularity is proven in the figures released pertaining to the attendance at the first 35 night ball games played in the major leagues this season. A total of 843,828 persons attended the first 35 noctural major league baseball games, for an average of well over 20,000 persons per game. When cities with populations as large as Cleveland, Brooklyn, Chicago and Philadelphia announced they must introduce and foster night baseball if they are to exist, should prove to the smaller centres, that night sports are here to stay and the only salvation in the matter of finances. Lacrosse and hockey have been played under lights for years, then football was tried and now baseball and softball. Up in Toronto several parks are equipped with floodlights for baseball and softball and until Belleville sport fans get behind a new set-up, that will include a sports stadium equipped with floodlights suitable for baseball, football, softball and all lines of summer sports.

The period of daylight sports has seen its day and the exodus of natural-light sport is on at an alarming degree, so-much-so that soon a city without floodlights will just be out of the picture. The initial outlay for a complete set of floodlights is not as great as one would imagine, we have been told by experts, who have gone thoroughly into the matter of lighting for night sports. However, in Belleville the great problem seems to be the procuring of a central or suitable place upon which a sports stadium can be started. There are several city-owned sites that might well be converted into a civic sports stadium, but in most cases this property is situated in the outlying districts, while those paramountly interested in the erection of such a structure desire a more centrally located site. As team sports today depend upon the financial support coming through the turnstiles, sports must revert to night games, as the supporting labouring class of today cannot afford to take time off from work to attend daytime sports in this day and age.

Getting back to the major baseball leagues and night baseball there are some startling figures that prove the success of night baseball. In the first 35 games played under the arcs in the major leagues the following attendance in their night games were as follows:

| Team. | Attendance. | Games. |
|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn (N) | 185,162 | 6 |
| Cincinnati (N) | 184,954 | 7 |
| Chicago (A) | 146,000 | 4 |
| Cleveland (A) | 136,995 | 5 |
| Philadelphia (A) | 120,992 | 7 |
| Philadelphia (N) | 69,896 | 6 |
| Total | 843,929 | 35 |

The membership waiting list of the Maryebone Cricket club of London, England, seldom contains the names of fewer than 10,000 cricketeers, many of whom have to wait 40 years to become members.

Atley Donald, former Louisiana grocery store clerk and sensational first-year rookie pitcher for the New York Americans won his first 10 major league games in succession, something never before accomplished by a rookie in the history of major league baseball.

Leo Goyer, who held down the right defence position of the Belleville "Hi-Speed" juniors for the past two seasons, recently migrated to Guelph, where he expects to play junior "B" hockey with the Royal City sextette next winter. Goyer is attending the Ontario Agricultural College. Incidentally we understand there are no less than seven juniors who have been imported into Guelph to play hockey. Apparently the industrial and business life of the Royal City is much better off than such likewise business in the east these days.

It is quite possible that all of the world's fighting won't be confined to the battlefields of Europe, at least that's the inference Norm Barriage, manager of the Hume arena, dropped us when he hinted that professional wrestling might return this fall. "We have been in communication with a Montreal wrestling promoter, who wants to branch out in Ontario and is considering Belleville as one of the cities he proposes to introduce top-notch heavyweight grapplers," announced Mr. Barriage today.

There can be no mixing of amateurs with professionals in the ranks of the O.R.F.U., Secretary Harold Bailey announced yesterday after the Toronto Balmy Beach rugby squad had announced they hoped to sign Bobby Porter, all-around Toronto athlete who played outfield for the Syracuse Chiefs of the International League this year. Porter will not be able to play with his old team, the Beaches, as the parent body does not permit the intermingling of professionals of one sport with their rugby amateurs (?) which brings a smile at that.

Apparently Bob Pastor's bicycle is only a ten rounder. After weathering a torrid attack in the first two rounds at Detroit last night, Pastor rallied for a few rounds, but fell victim to Joe Louis' devastating punches in the eleventh round after a sound trouncing in the tenth. After Pastor weathered that early-fight attack he made the terrible mistake of trying to fight Louis, that is standing toe-to-toe and attempting to out-slug the champion. Louis was quite confident of victory as he had arranged for a celebration party prior to entering the ring. It was Louis' eighth successful defence of his crown.

SPORT SPICE — The Reds and Cardinals continued to make it a dog fight for the National League flag, both winning yesterday as Bucky Walters tacked up his season's 26th victory for the Reds. . . . Tris Speaker one of baseball's immortals, is heading a professional indoor softball league that is to include eleven American cities and Toronto this winter. . . . With short rights Joe Louis floored Pastor five times in the first two rounds last night, always connecting with a right, but strangely when the K.O. came, Louis tagged his opponent with a left for the knockout blow. . . . Newt Wilbur dropped in today to tell us that Corbyville had affiliated with the Major Bowling League at the Recreation Alleys to give them a strong six-teamed loop.

Cincinnati Reds and Cards Likely to Decide Pennant In Closing Week of Season

Both Teams Win Wednesday and Margin Remains at 2½ Games

WALTER WINS 26th

Cards Rally With Batting Splurges in Sixth and Seventh to Down Dodgers

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It's getting constantly clearer that the National Baseball League pennant polemics aren't going to be decided until Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals come to grips themselves in the waning hours of the season next week.

For days the two have been separated by the merest of margins, unable to make a decisive gesture.

This situation was emphasized further yesterday as Bucky Walters pitched the Reds to a 3-2 victory over the Phillies and the Redbirds swarmed over Brooklyn Dodgers 10-4 to maintain their stern vigil 2½ games out of first place.

Cincinnati's conquest was the 26th of the season for Walters, who sprinkled six hits and took steps toward winning his own game by getting in the way of a pitched ball in the ninth inning and scoring the deciding run.

Typical Batting Splurge.

St. Louis staged a couple of its own typical batting bombardments to victimize the Dodgers. After being held to three hits for five innings and with two out in the sixth, the Cardinals rallied for four runs on four hits and an error. Then, when Brooklyn became threatening, they set off another five-run blast in the seventh.

The day wasn't static throughout the circuit, however, because Chicago Cubs lost to New York Giants, 4-2, and saw their last hope of repeating their 1938 pennant parade go glimmering. Carl Hubbell's hex put them ten games behind the leaders with only nine left to play.

This is the standing:

| | W. | L. | G.B.L. | T.P. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati | 87 | 54 | — | 13 |
| St. Louis | 85 | 57 | 2½ | 11* |
| Chicago | 79 | 66 | 10 | 9 |
| Brooklyn | 74 | 65 | 12 | 15 |

*One game with New York cancelled.

Yanks Not Letting Down.

New York Yankees, their American League flag safely stowed away, showed no signs of letting down as they walloped Chicago White Sox, 8-4, for Steve Sundra's eleventh victory against no defeats.

Coupled with Cleveland's 7-2 triumph at Washington, this dropped the pale hose into fourth place. The Indians' victory was accomplished on a six-hit performance by Mel Harder.

St. Louis meanwhile undermined the Boston Red Sox' second-place position with an 11-8 victory in sixteen innings, the longest game of the year in the American League. Bob Harris worked nine innings in relief for the tail-enders with four-hit hurling and his team mates helped with a three-run outburst off Fritz Ostermueller as gathering darkness threatened to end the game.

Philadelphia Athletics edged out the Detroit Tigers 5-4, in another marathon which ended in the thirteenth inning when catcher Frank Hayes tripled and raced home on an infield grounder.

Boston Bees were rained out at Pittsburgh.

TORONTO ARGOS BY LEW HAYMAN PICKED THIRD

Coach Fears Loss of Bob Isbister, a Kicker, May Spoil Chances

LINE IS STRONG

Backfield Has Speed Galore but Kicking Strength Sadly Lacking

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP)—The loss of one man, big Bob Isbister, has left such a hole in the offensive of Toronto Argonauts that their coach, Lew Hayman, does not mind going on record with the honest conviction Argos will finish no better than third in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union this season.

Hayman has lost more than a dozen members of the team which won its second straight Dominion championship last season, but nothing compared to the blow struck by Isbister's business transfer to Hamilton, where he will play with the Tigers against his old mates. No less than nine of the departed were regulars last year.

No Outstanding Kicker

"We should finish third to Ottawa and Montreal for the simple reason we haven't an outstanding kicker and the other three teams have," say Hayman. "Give me a first-class punter and I'd say we had an even chance to win again."

Argos would have better than an even chance with a kicker of Isbister's calibre, for the squad in training now abounds with strong linemen and backs of unquestioned ability. This despite the loss of such good players, besides Isbister, as Wes Cutler, one of the best outsides of the last 10 years, Johnny Munro, Doug MacPherson, George Hees, Harry Booth, Red Vail and Chuck McLean.

Among the promising newcomers, Hayman expects to find capable replacements for all but Isbister and Cutler. Argos plucked the class of university of Western Ontario's graduates in halfback Jim Farmer and burly George Willis, who will play centre and inside. From Balmy Beach of the Ontario Union the champions got outside Al Humphries and Tiger Warman, a good lineman.

Speed on Backfield

For the most part, however, there will be familiar names carrying the load for the champions. For the backfield—where Hayman packs his speed and plunging—there are, among others, the Stukus brothers, Earl Selkirk, Red Storey of Winnipeg-Argo fame, swift Art West, Mike Barber and four newcomers—Jack Moon, Don Grant from Upper Canada College, Dave Thomas and Norton Freeman, who has played and punted for Hamilton Tigers and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Two of the three Stukus boys, Annis and Bill, will share the quarter-back job with brother Frank to plunge. Selkirk is booked to do most of the kicking and though he is steady and better than fair he is no Isbister. Storey also has been kicking in practice and may develop, though the chance is slim, into the answer to Hayman's prayer.

Line is Strong

From centre to outside, the line is strong and compares favorably with any Hayman has produced in his championship years. Bud Lewis, a trick knee mended, will aid at centre and by his side will be such veterans as Clarry Burt, Art Evans, Bill Zock, Len Staughton, Frank Sirdevan, Dave Ferris and Harry Sonshine, if the latter can get into condition after a season out of the game.

The question of Argos' strength will be solved only when it is seen how the team's kickers stand up against Isbister and the league's other star hoofers and whether Storey can continue his late 1938 form. If the big redhead does he may make up for the kicking deficiency and make Hayman's prediction look silly.

Darktown Residents Of Detroit Whoop it up

Detroit, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Paradise Valley folk, residents of Detroit's darktown who knew Joe Louis from the days when he was one of them, filled the streets with merry making until dawn today in tribute to their own great champion.

Hardly had the count of 10 rolled from the loudspeakers when the buildings of the quarter disgorged their crowds. Garishly clad for the occasion, they piled into each other's arms to release their pent-up enthusiasm in a wild session of swing.

Louis himself, confident of success, had reserved places for a party of 14 in one of the elite night spots of the darktown area.

NAMING MAYOR'S HORSE

Melbourne, Australia (CP) — When the Lord Mayor and a former Lord Mayor bought a race horse, they had difficulty getting a name. The first three names they suggested were turned down by the race-horse registrar.

SCIENTIFICALLY TESTED TO ENSURE QUALITY

In the huge Tip Top Tailors plant a testing laboratory guards the quality of every inch of Tip Top's woolens. In this laboratory, staffed by experienced textile technicians, every material receives exhaustive tests and inspections before it is declared "good enough" for Tip Top Tailors. All fabrics are pre-shrunk by the world's most modern shrinking process. They receive a light test to determine their resistance to fading. Strict tests for tensile strength are made, which tell whether a fabric can "take it." And many additional tests put these British woolens through their paces.

When inspecting the many new patterns now showing at your Tip Top store, you can be sure, whatever your choice is, that it has passed every high Tip Top test with banners flying. Remember—our inspection is your protection.

Eldorado

Eldorado—On Thursday evening, September 14th the friends and neighbors invaded the home of Mr. Earl Wartman at Cooper and tendered him and his bride a real old-fashioned charivari, ending up by all filling the house to capacity. All the community had turned out to tender to the young couple their best wishes. At an early hour the gathering was called to order and the following address was read by Mr. Ross Greenley.

Cooper, Sept. 14

Dear Burnis and Earl:

We, your friends and neighbors have called this evening to extend our heartiest congratulations to Earl for having brought such a lovely bride to our community, and to Burnis, our best wishes. May you be with us and share with us in the community life, as you did in the one you left.

Earl, ever since you came to Cooper, you have entered into every community effort, you have more than done your bit to endear you to us. May you make as good a husband as you have a neighbor and friend.

Burnis, many of us have known you and we are glad to have you with us, although to some you may be a stranger, every one is looking forward to years of pleasant associations with you.

We now ask you to accept these gifts and may they convey to you as a token the good wishes which we all, as friends and neighbors, tender for your future happiness.

Signed on behalf of your friends in Cooper and Remington, Maurice Reynolds, Robert Doughty, Leonard Graham.

They were then presented with a beautiful centre table, occasional chair and fernery.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman thanked the friends for their lovely gift and kind words and all enjoyed a social time together.

Then on Friday evening the friends and neighbors at Eldorado gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Blackburn, a sister of the bride, to tender Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wartman their best wishes and to present them with a miscellaneous shower. A very pleasant evening was spent in social intercourse and dancing by the younger folk.

The following address was read by Miss Grace Robinson.

Eldorado, Ont.,

Dear Burnis and Earl,

It is with great pleasure we have gathered here this evening to express to you our hearty congratulations and best wishes for a happy wedded life.

You are started out on a great sea together and will need a pilot to make your sailing smooth. In the hours of your trials may you turn your thoughts to Him, who makes all thing possible. Let love rule your home and guide you each day. Whatever supreme joy we get from life we get by being sympathetic and thoughtful of others. After all it is these things that make life worthwhile as we cannot bring back yesterday and live it over again.

Burnis, you have lived among us since childhood and have won the esteem and respect of all your friends. We congratulate you on winning a partner who will be your best comfort through life.

We also wish to congratulate you on the way you delivered the ball for us during our few games and hope you will not play as hard against us as you did for us.

To you Earl, we congratulate you on the choice of a life partner, we welcome you to our midst on any occasion or at any time.

In the short time that we have known you, you have made many friends among us and we feel that we have known you always.

We are glad you are not going to live far from us. We feel sure we will see you often.

So in your home as neighbors gather round, may peace, joy, good health we pray abound.

Please accept these gifts as a slight remembrance of your many friends and neighbors.

Signed: Keith Chambers, George Wiley.

The presents were brought into the room on a wagon decorated for the occasion and drawn by Harley and Glenne Blackburn, who were pleased to present the gifts this way.

The many useful array of gifts went far to show the esteem in which the young couple are held in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman very fittingly thanked their many friends for the lovely gifts and all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows," after which lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

"For the past six years I had been a victim of gassy indigestion. This gas bloating would cause my food to come back up into my throat and I would suffer with gas pains for hours after eating. My back was always sore and achy and if I would attempt to bend over the pains would be almost more than I could stand. My bowels were badly constipated, and I felt weak and worn out ALL THE TIME.

"So you can see that I had my share of suffering. But recently I found Mosby's Tonic and started taking it. And I want to say that this medicine is the finest thing of its kind I ever heard of. It relieved my gassy indigestion and now I have a real appetite and I can eat a full meal without suffering afterward like I did. It has a splendid action on the kidneys, for it has relieved those pains in my back, and it also regulated my bowels and relieved the constipation trouble. I have more energy and feel better now than I have in 6 YEARS! Yes, I feel so grateful to Mosby's Tonic that I gladly give you my statement and endorse this medicine to others who suffer as I did."

Tallinn, Estonia, Sept. 21—(AP)—Foreign reports that Russian ships had blockaded Estonia's coast were described here as unfounded.

(Reports reaching Stockholm Tuesday said Russia blockaded Estonia presumably in retaliation for failure to prevent an interned Polish submarine sailing from Tallinn.)

loaded lifeboat.

Fourteen Pulled Into Boats

"Fourteen of the men, some in desperate condition, were pulled into the aircraft. When it had taken off with a heavy load the other aircraft descended and picked up 20 more men. Two aircraft made quick a search for the attacking submarine but it was not located. The steamer crew saw one of their two lifeboats had capsized and the other was in danger of sinking."

The statement related that all 34 were landed in England safely.

The Kensington Court left Rosario, Argentina, Aug. 15. Her destination then was Dakar, French West Africa, but apparently she had bee ndiverted because of the outbreak of war.

(She was built in 1927 in Glasgow and was 396 feet long and had a 53-foot beam).

FINES GRADED FOR SPEEDING

Minimum Cost Under H.T.A. Will be $5 and Added Costs

New highway regulations pertaining to fines levied in courts against convicted speedsters, under the provisions of the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario, were introduced in today's Traffic Court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C. at the Court House.

"The Department has ruled that a minimum fine of $5.00 plus the costs of the proceedings, be levied against delinquent speedsters, upon conviction, and who are found speeding at a rate of 50 to 61 miles per hour on our highways. However, for every additional mile over the 61 m. p. h. mark an additional fine of one dollar per mile will be imposed," County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., revealed in open court for the benefit of motorists today.

Several motorists were convicted of speeding in today's court and under the new regulations. One motorist admitted driving at the rate of 70 miles per hour and paid a fine of $14.00 and $2.50 additional costs. As the accused motorist was travelling at a rate of nine miles per hour over the designated 61 m. p. m., he was fined $9.00 in access to the conventional $5.00 levied for ordinary speeding. Other speedsters paid fines according to the speed at which they were travelling at the time of their apprehension. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine introduced 15 charges preferred under the H.T.A.

A local youth was fined $5.00 and costs, which amounted to $16.75, after pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving. The charge arose out of an accident that occurred July 30th last.

FRENCH THREATEN

There was local activity by advance guards and artillery actions here and there," the communique said.

French and German aviation clashed in a series of battles for mastery of the air over the Westwall and Maginot forts.

While land patrols thrust at the French behind a curtain of artillery fire, German planes took off apparently with the double purpose of strafing French positions and enticing French airmen into combat. A Messerschmidt fighted was reported shot down behind the French line by defending pursuit planes.

Staffs In Contact.

The British and French staffs were in constant contact, apparently studying a threat which many observers saw in the reported massing of German troops at Aachen, Germany, near the Belgian and the Netherlands borders.

It was from the Aachen sector in 1914 that the Germans swept across Belgium and into northern France in a lightning attempt to grab all channel ports and reach Paris.

Colonel-General Walther von Brauhitsch, German chief of staff, was reported to have left Germany's Polish front for the west and the Germans were said to have concentrated from 1,500 to 2,000 heavy bombing planes near Aachen.

Aachen, about 85 miles north of the present fighting zone and 270 airline miles from London, was pictured as a key point of the German line facing neutral Belgium and the Netherlands. The latest advices from the Netherlands said captive balloons—apparently an aerial "barrage"—were strung out at intervals for 100 miles north of Aachen, their positions shifted each night.

Hore-Belisha in France.

A flying visit to France yesterday by the British War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha, and the joint British-French staff talks were seen as results of the Aachen situation.

The Aachen concentration was regarded by military observers as meaning one of three things—that a repetition of the 1914 strategy might be attempted, that Aachen merely had become a transfer point for movement of troops into the Westwall or that the Germans might try a "counter-blockade" against the British and French ports through air attacks in conjunction with submarine operations in the English Channel.

Retaliatory Action Believed.

The French appeared more concerned with the third possibility, on the ground Germany was beginning to feel the pinch of the British naval blockade and might be on the verge of a major retaliatory attempt.

Three major land routes pass through the Aachen district, paralleling each other until they reach the Meuse river where on the north they reach Liege, Belgium. It was there in 1914 that Kaiser Wilhelm's great offensive started.

Aachen also could become a spring board for a drive by way of the Netherlands. The form of warfare henceforth on the western front undoubtedly depended on developments at Aachen.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP) — Unchanged prices were boarded on reporting bacon-hog markets today. No quote was available from the Barrie market.

700 FIRMS MAKE

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—British hope of enlisting anti-Nazis within German territory in the fight against Adolf Hitler was quickened today by reports of a "serious revolt in two Czecho-Slovak provinces which last March became a Reich protectorate.

A Ministry of Information communique said Britain had received authoritative information that a revolutionary movement had started last Sunday in Bohemia and Moravia and was continuing despite "ruthless" repressive measures.

"That this is not just a flash in the pan is shown by the unanimity of purpose, the tenacity and the discipline of the participants," the Ministry said.

The British press, meanwhile, gave unanimous endorsement to Prime Minister Chamberlain's address before the House of Commons yesterday in which he answered Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech and asserted that Britain's efforts would be "the utmost of which she is capable."

Aim Given Support

Labor also gave its support to the aim outlined by the Prime Minister, who said Britain is fighting "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties."

In a speech broadcast to the empire, Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor Opposition in Parliament, declared "the monster of tyranny must be strangled forever."

In another broadcast to the defenders of Warsaw, Count Raczynski, Polish ambassador in London, predicted last night that a new Polish army being organized in France would "return with victorious banners" to the homeland.

The ambassador asserted "the armed hosts of Britain, France, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and Africa are rushing to our assistance."

The Information Ministry, describing the uprising in Bohemia-Moravia, said that "firearms were used on both sides and casualties are said to have been considerable."

15,000 Disarmed

On Sept. 19, the communique went on, Slovak garrisons at several places revolted and "about 15,000 troops have been disarmed." Arrests throughout the protectorate, the statement said, "ran into thousands, those executed into hundreds."

In the course of the revolt, which began with Labor disturbances in Prague, the Information Ministry said, "Bridges on important railways and roads were damaged, fire stations put out of action, rolling stock and material damaged, workshops of important factories bombed and machinery destroyed."

(In Berlin, reports of an organized revolt in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate were denied.)

Another Government communique said nearly 200,000 tons of contraband valued at about $2,000,000 had been seized since the outbreak of hostilities, depriving Germany of vital ores and petroleum products.

The Parliamentary correspondent of the Press Association said members of Parliament regarded Mr. Chamberlain's statement yesterday "as showing an encouraging state of affairs."

The Prime Minister's declaration that Britain would not launch any haphazard military moves without advice from its leaders "was felt to be a gentle rebuke to those amateur strategists in the House who have sometimes advocated courses of action, more conspicuous perhaps for their ingenuity than for their wisdom."

Partnership Not Strong

The Daily Herald today reported "that things are not going too well just at the moment in the Nazi-Soviet partnership."

"Berlin and Moscow had agreed roughly on the partitioning of Poland," the newspaper said. "But Russia, to Germany's annoyance, gets more of East Poland than Hitler designed. On the other hand, Germany, to Russia's annoyance, looks as if she is establishing her control over all of Central Poland, which, according to her bargain, was to be an independent buffer state.

"They are not going to quarrel at once. It will all be patched up. But the seeds of future quarrels and permanent suspicions are there. They may grow quite big before the war's end."

The Labor paper said the Soviet-German agreement recognizes Lithuania as being in Germany's sphere of influence, and Finland, Estonia and Latvia as in that of Russia. "There is anxiety lest Moscow is now seeking to find some pretext for intervention—in Estonia for a beginning."

Criticism Voiced

Criticism of some phases of Britain's war set-up was voiced by the Times, which cited complaints of food wastage and attacked the controlled system of fish distribution, now abandoned by the Government.

The fish control program was based on the theory of putting the main markets out of danger of air raids, but the Times said it "produced a dislocation no less complete than would have followed a highly successful air raid."

"Who is responsible for framing these ill-conceived schemes," the Times asked. "What great brain, for instance, thought out the organization of the Ministry of Information, which started its career rather as a ministry of irritation?

"Who conceived the so-called commercial war risks insurance scheme, which has thrown most of the trading community into ferment?"

Demanding "Are we in Germany—is this Berlin?" Lord Beaverbrooke's Evening Standard declared Hitler was filling British front pages while there was only "a thin, vapid trickle from our Ministry of Information."

Reporters Go To Amsterdam

"The man in the street in New York is no better off. There are many first rate American journalists in London although some of them have already packed their bags for Amsterdam," The Standard said. "Here is one of their difficulties. A story printed on the front page of the Evening Standard may be censored for transmission to America. It may be picked up by the Paris radio, transcribed by the Tass Agency in Moscow, garbled perhaps somewhere in the steppes of Siberia and then forwarded on to New York.

"Even so, the message by these means beats the trans-Atlantic cable plus the British censor. 'Round the word three days late' is our censor's motto. They've scarcely even heard of Jules Verne. So Hitler decorates America's front pages, too."

Increases Every Day.

Of the 700 firms making shells he said that was "a number being added to every day."

The minister said the air menace had made the first priority the defence of the country against air attack and outlined these other tasks:

1. Equipping fighting services;
2. Organizing power to produce whatever the fighting forces would need at any time during the war;
3. Provision for sufficient reserve and equipment for maintenance and expansion of the fighting forces;
4. "Extraction from the sources of production in the country of every ounce of endeavor and ton of output likely to be of service to ourselves or our allies at present and in the future. This task is one for the whole industry and manpower of the nation."

Thirteen Districts.

Mr. Burgin said the country had been divided into thirteen districts, each under a trained engineer to "ensure that the whole capacity of the country is to be utilized."

He also said the nation now owned completely 28 Royal Ordinance Factories, six of which had opened since the start of the war.

He promised the House that "prices, profits and profiteering will be scrutinized ceaselessly."

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the opposition, immediately attacked the setup outlined by the minister as bureaucratic and declared the "dead hand of officialism is going to throttle the national effort."

"If the government thinks it is going to mobilize the industrial power of this nation under thirteen ex-Admirals I tell them they have failed," he declared.

RADIO AT WARSAW

Silence came after the station had broadcast a grim story of Warsaw being shelled and bombed as never before and predicted "there probably soon will be a big offensive against us".

In Centre of City.

The studio is in the centre of Warsaw. Despite German aerial and artillery bombardment of that area for almost two weeks, the station had remained on the air day and night. It had gone on even while shells were falling all around it.

Four times yesterday air raid sirens could be heard above the calm voice of the announcer and four times the drone of diving airplanes came over the air.

The broadcaster said the raids were conducted by squadrons of 30 German planes. Seven were said to have been shot down.

His account of the siege included another appeal to Great Britain to help save the city.

Report Successful Attack.

Before silence again sealed Warsaw's fate, the radio reported a successful attack against a German force. But it also admitted devastating blows from German cannon and warplanes.

Still defiant, Mayor Stefan Starzinski had appealed to the capital's citizens to persevere until a final victory had been won against the Germans.

Colonel Vaclava Lipinski described the battle in which he said Polish forces, particularly cavalry, drove back a German tank attack.

German infantry advanced in Warsaw's Praga district, the officer said, and engaged the Polish defenders in bayonet warfare.

Constantly Fight Fire.

"But the Poles are better in hand-to-hand fighting," he declared, "and proved stronger, capturing three heavy and two light machine guns."

The mayor declared the populace constantly was fighting fires, repairing damage and clearing away debris.

Warsaw butchers were notified to go to military headquarters to receive allotments of horse meat. The announcer said wounded horses were butchered for the "near-starving 1,000,000 inhabitants" of the city.

action at close quarters. His body is protected by a shield mounted on a kind of armor. Its total weight comes to less than that of the ordinary pack carried by soldiers. On his head he wears a visored helmet that protects his eyes.

The thickness of the armor, said the Italian correspondent, is 1.12 millimetres, or about .04 inches and yet it is claimed to be invulnerable to any bullets fired from a portable arm.

Three-Line Ring of Defence Works Built by Belgium Difficult to Crack

(By The Associated Press)

A three-line ring of defence works has been built by Belgium to hold up any German attempt to use the country as a military highway to France a second time.

In addition France has extended the Maginot Line along the Belgian Frontier with a complicated trench system, just in case Germany decides to take the Belgian route and breaks through.

That possibility now has become of grave concern for the French, who hear reports of German troop concentrations near Aachen (Aix-La-Chappelle), facing Belgium on the route German troops took in 1914.

But Belgians have expressed confidence the Germans would not have so easy a time against the new defence works and the standing army of some 100,000 men as they had 25 years ago when Liege was taken four days after the war started.

Military Men's Views

Military men say the Albert canal the Liege fortification system and the defence works extending to the northeast give the country a chance of holding back invasion until help can come.

A canal runs for 75 miles from the Ardennes Mountains to the sea, at Antwerp. It is the last rampart of the three-line defence system.

The first line, along the 55 miles of Belgium's common frontier with Germany, is based on fortresses at Eupen and Malmedy which have been linked and extended by a system of prepared trenches, blockhouses and reinforced concrete machine-gun nests.

Strong Line of Fortifications

Behind this is a stronger line of fortifications about which little is known except that it was started about the same time as the French Maginot Line and follows the same general principles of construction.

Then comes the canal, which runs north from Liege to the Netherlands frontier and then bends back, paralleling the border to Antwerp.

Semi-official publications have described the canal as solving the "very delicate military problem" of "covering the defence of Liege and barring the march toward Antwerp.

Semi-official publications have described the canal as solving the "very delicate military problem" of "covering the defence of Liege and barring the march toward Antwerp".

The canal is said to answer the old infantry sergeant's rule of thumb for a perfect fight:

"Clean out a clear field of fire and then blast hell out of the enemy.'

All along the east bank, from which attack would come, under brush has been cleared away.

The canal itself—250 feet wide and from 15 to 20 feet deep—provides a formidable water hazard.

12 Forts at Liege

Along the west side, just above the water level, bulges of concrete and steel hide machine guns and artillery. In the rear are permanent fortress camps.

Twelve forts girdle the city of Liege, the key point in Northeastern communications and defence. Gaps between them are studded with pillboxes.

Midway between Liege and Aachen are the battice forts. At the extreme northern point of the Liege fortification system are the Ebben-Emael defences commanding the Maas River between Liege and the Netherlands frontier.

Investigation Reveals Nazi Leaders Have Deposited Large Fortunes in Other Countries

Cash and Securities Amounting to Over Thirteen Million Dollars Have Been Deposited

HITLER THE EXCEPTION

London, Sept. 21 (CP)—The Daily Mail said Wednesday that Adolf Hitler's Nazi Party leaders have deposited private fortunes amounting to "millions of pounds" in banks of neutral countries.

The newspaper said that cash and securities amounting to £3,334,000 have been deposited abroad "in the names of Hitler's seven leading henchmen, Von Ribbentrop, Goering, Goebbels, Hess, Himmler, Ley and Streicher. In addition they have taken out life insurance policies for £3,640,000, making a total of £6,974,600."

The Mail added: "Hitler appears to be the only Nazi leader who has no credits to his name in New York banks or elsewhere."

"Secret investigation in financial circles in London, Paris and New York" was said by the Mail to have revealed the financial operations of Nazi party leaders.

"These revelations have followed intensive search among international banks," The Mail said.

The Mail said it learned that "Dossiers of the financial transactions of the Nazi chiefs are being sent to London."

HERBERT HOUSTON CONTEST WINNER

His Guess Nearest to Actual Mileage Travelled by Motor Car

Herbert Houston, Shannonville resident, is the fortunate owner of a bag of sugar today, won, when his guess of 147 miles was the nearest to the actual mileage recorded on the speedometer of the car, used in the mileage-guessing contest held at the Kiwanis Karnival last night.

Several of the guessers were extremely close to the actual figures, Chairman James Cowan, in charge of the contest revealed today. "Between three and four hundred people took part in the contest, and at times enthusiasm ran very high", he said.

Members of the committee refused to divulge the actual mileage that was registered on the speedometer, feeling that it would not be fair to those intending to participate in the contest tonight.

The handsome hope-chest, envied by many fair patrons of the Karnival will be drawn for tonight at the Walker Hardware store.

Names of the winners of the window-shopping contest were not available today due to the large amount of work entailed in checking the several hundred guesses that were handed in to Chairman Morley Wyman in charge of this particular attraction.

STANDARD BLEND OF TEA

London, Sept. 21 (C)—Tea connoisseurs felt a shock from the war's realities today with an announcement by the government it is considering introduction of one standard blend to do away with individual brands and simplify distribution.

Bakers announced the eightpence loaf of bread would cost a halfpenny more, effective today.

8% Tax Added to Electric Bills

Belleville Public Utilities Commission is charging the eight per cent Federal tax on sales of electricity for domestic purposes on all bills being sent out, it was stated today by Mr. M. P. Duff, chairman of the commission. He said, in answer to a question as to whether the local commission would consider the question of absorbing the tax, "Our rates are now so low I do not know whether we could absorb this tax. To do so would mean that the step would have to be approved by the Ontario Commission for it would really mean a reduction in rates."

The Woodstock Sentinel Review stated a few days ago that the public utilities commission of that place would at its next meeting consider how to deal with the wartimes sales tax. The Galt commission it is said has already met and decided to absorb the tax for the first year of its operation. According to the Woodstock newspaper, J. C. Archibald, superintendent of the Woodstock commission remarked, this seemed the sensible thing to do since a tremendous amount of extra work would be entailed by passing the tax on to consumers at present.

The same tax is applied to sales of gas.

TERRIBLE

Driving His Own Car

The Premier was driving in his car on Bucharest's main street, on his way to the Royal Palace, when he was shot.

His car was blocked by three other machines. The three cars converged on that of the Premier while a peasant cart blocked the road ahead.

One car drew alongside. Masked men jumped out and opened fire with sub-machine guns. Calinescu slumped in his seat, bullets had riddled his chest and abdomen from side to side. He was killed instantly.

Eight of the alleged assassins and accomplices have been arrested. Troops were called to surround cells and public buildings and to guard against any attempt at a coup.

While the assassins were carrying out their assignment another band of armed, masked men seized the Bucharest radio station, shooting and wounding the announcer and interrupting the scheduled program.

Killers Arrested

Then one of them announced that Calinescu had been killed in a revolt.

Police rushed to the scene of the shooting, where two of the alleged killers were arrested.

(Havas News Agency dispatches said eleven bullets were fired into the Premier's body and two of the assassins committed suicide rather than be captured by pursuing police.

(Havas said it was undersood that Victor Jamandi, Minister of Justice in Calinescu's cabinet, would be named by King Carol to the Premiership.)

Rumanian authorities quickly imposed rigid censorship until the facts were established.

(In Budapest the Rumanian Legation reported the Bucharest Radio Station shut down at 2.10 p.m., "after some minutes of wild, confused shouting" which could be heard over the microphone.

(The legation said in mid-afternoon it had been unable to reach the Bucharest Foreign Ministry by telephone up to that time.)

No Details Given

The radio announcement, which interrupted a musical program, was broadcast at 1.30 p.m. and gave no details.

Calinescu was Minister of Interior in charge of police on Nov. 30, 1938, when Corneliu Codreanu, Iron Guard leader and so-called "Little Hitler" of Rumania, was shot dead by guards "while attempting to escape" during a transfer from one prison to another, according to the official version.

Besides Codreanu, his fourteen Chief Aides also were shot. At that time there were reports that Iron Guardists had taken an oath to assassinate Calinescu in revenge.

Despite the frequent reported discovery of such plots against him, the Premier steadfastly refused to have a bodyguard. It was said that Calinescu told King Carol when the monarch begged him to employ guards "No man can escape his fate."

Constant Agitation

(In Budapest, Rumanian Legation sources reported there had been constant agitation throughout Rumania by Iron Guard members since the start of Germany's invasion of Poland. They said the news had been suppressed by the Bucharest Government lest it lead to "complications" during the International crisis.)

Earlier today authoritative sources in Bucharest said the Rumanian government had decided to intern Polish President Ignace Moscicki and other high Polish civil officials who came to Rumania from Poland. Nazis had insisted on their internment.

(A transcription of the Rumanian government radio program available at Budapest showed that the announcer said:

("This morning a successful attempt was made on the life of Premier Calinescu.

"Throughout Rumania there is terrible excitement and——"

(At that point he was cut short and the station went silent.)

The radio broke into a musical program to broadcast the brief announcement.

Plots Discovered

Rumanian police on several other occasions had reported discovery of Iron Guard plots against the Premier as well as against King Carol.

Calinescu became head of the government March 7, 1939, succeeding the late Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian church, who had created a National government.

On June 17 police announced Iron Guardist had planned to assassinate Calinescu as well as the King with hand grenades at a race track. That plot was said to have been organized to avenge the death of Corneliu Coureanu, Iron Guard leader, who was killed in a reported attempt to escape prison on November 30.

Carol's Mainstay

He was comparatively young for the premiership—46. He was educated in France. His first job was a minor judgeship. Then he was lawyer for the Peasant Party and later became prominent in parliament. His first government post was Minister of Education.

He became minister of the interior under the anti-Semitic Octavian Goga Dec. 28, 1937, and kept the position under Cristea, later taking the additional post of war minister and vice premier.

He lost the sight of one eye when he was four years old. A nurse mistook acid for eyewash.

Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce and Alan Marshal in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," with Robert Young and Annabella in "The Bridal Suite," next at the Belle Theatre.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

College Casualty

First serious casualty of the season in eastern inter-collegiate grid ranks was Charley Prince, ABOVE, rising backfield star with University of Toronto, who suffered a broken wrist during practice. Prince came along fast last year and gave promise of being an excellent kicker, passer and runner. Coach Warren Stevens hopes his injury does not presage a series of them such as his team fell victim to last season.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Another Type of Head Cold

It has been found that the majority of hay fever sufferers or those suffering with head colds due to pollen, dust, certain foods, belong to the intellectual class—school teachers as a class accounting for the largest number of cases. Hay fever sufferers are usually of the high-strung nervous type, as are also most of those who suffer with frequent "head colds".

However, the above is not always true and there are a great many 'normal' individuals with average intelligence and of the phlegmatic (easy-going) type who suffer with hay fever and head colds.

Dr. Harry L. Huber, Chicago in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, some months ago stated

"There is a non-allergic, noninfectious type of rhinitis (head cold or catarrh of nose and throat) which is different from the ordinary acute cold and from the head cold (such as hay fever) caused by something (dust, pollen) to which the individual is sensitive or allergic. This variety, whch is not generally recognized, is the cause of 20 per cent of the cases of rhinitis or head colds."

The symptoms, consisting of sneezing, running nose, stoppage of the nose, come on in the morning, upon arising, and last until 10 to 10.30 at night.

The features of this particular type of rhinitis are—

1—Occurs in females, chiefly during menstrual life (15 to 50).

2—The blood pressure is low (about 100 systolic and 68 diastolic instead of 120 and 80).

3—The basal metabolism (rate at which body processes work) is low, being about 15 below normal.

4—The pulse is moderately slow (about 66 instead of 76 to 84).

5—There is no family history of allergy (sensitiveness to various substances.)

6—Skin tests, such as are made for hay fever or asthma, are negative.

From the above description it can be seen that this type of individual is very different from the high strung, nervous, sensitive type. These easy going individuals with slow pulse, low blood pressure, and low metabolism, need something to stimulate them, make them and their body processes more active.

Dr. Huber states that gland extracts—pituitary and thyroid—are often helpful in these cases.

"One of the greatest disservices you can do a man is to lend him money that he can't pay back."—Jesse Jones.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, saying My, The Mibbles are funny tonight, did you see The Mibbles tonight, Willyum? They're just too funny, it seems Mr. Mibbles has been complaining loudly that there aren't enough ash trays around the house and that he never has any place to put his ashes, so here tonight Mrs. Mibbles brings 4th a half a dozen new ash trays and spreads them all over the table right next to where Mr. Mibbles is sitting reading his paper, and here in the last picture he's reaching out his cigar and scattering the ashes all over the table hither and yon every where but in the ash trays. Hee hee that's funny, that artist certainly has a keen perception of life, she said.

Life on Mars, maybe, pop said, and ma said, O, I'd hardly expect you to laugh at anything that fits the other foot so neetly, you'd just be admitting your guilt.

Now yestidday The Mibbles was realy something to laugh about, because it was founded on truth, Mr. Mibbles was singing in the bathtub as usual and Mrs. Mibbles was outside the door telling him the naybors would object to that terrible noise, and just then there's a berst of applause and it's a crowd of genuine long haired music lovers below in the street clapping madly because they appriciate good singing even if Mrs. Mibbles doesn't, pop said.

Him always singing in the bathtub himself, and ma said, Well if that's true to life I dont know where I've been living, and besides I saw the Mibbles yestidday and it was no such thing, and pop said, It must of been a different edition.

And he laughed like everything, proving he still thought it was funny even if he did make it up himself.

Potato Blight Reported in City

First 1939 intimation of the blight or rot, that wrecked havoc with potato crops last year was seen today when a Grove Street resident reported that practically one-third of the crop harvested from his garden was affected by the disease.

Some of the hills, he said, were affected in their entirety with those in the immediate vicinity being spotty, and others not affected at all.

The blight, in some cases, had affected the skin of the potato, while others showed signs of the disease to the centre.

Farmers of the district thus far have not reported the presence of the disease.

LEADERS CALLED TO CONFERENCE

Roosevelt Says He Has Made No Plans to Speak Personally to Congress

Washington, Sept. 21—(AP)—As a prelude to a congressional battle over the United States neutrality policies, President Roosevelt called 15 Democratic and Republican leaders to conference on repealing the arms embargo.

The bi-partisan meeting was expected to receive from Mr. Roosevelt a plea for quick and united action in the special session of the Senate and House of Representatives which will begin today.

The White House conference made possible a meeting of Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President John Garner with Alf. M. Landon and Colonel Frank Knox, the Republican standard bearers whom they defeated in 1936.

Invited to the White House executive office along with these men were Speaker William Bankhead, State Secretary Cordell Hull, six Senators, and four representatives.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had made tentative plans to address congress in person today.

AT THE BELLE

"BACHELOR MOTHER"

The mirth-making talents which Ginger Rogers exhibited so effectively in such previous hits as "Stage Door" and "Vivacious Lady", are developed to new hilarious heights in the Belle Theatre's current offering, "Bachelor Mother."

Miss Rogers enacts the role of a department store salesgirl, who suddenly becomes a synthetic mother. She finds an abandoned baby, and despite her frantic denials, the whole world believes she is the tot's mama. When she plans to abandon the baby herself, her boss informs her that he will so ostracize her in the business world that she will never have a chance of earning her livelihood—and all because she refuses to fulfill her duty to society: raising "her" baby!

Hopelessly Ginger accepts the task. When a romance springs from her boss' constant meetings with her under the guise of assisting her in bringing up baby, Ginger's self-appointed jealous boy friend apprises her boss' father that his son is actually the infant's father. The boss' father demands that his son marry Ginger so that he can rightfully assert his role as grandfather to the baby, and the story assumes hilarious, side-splitting proportions!

Matching Ginger's splendid portrayal is that of her co-star David Niven, seen as the boss. With Charles Coburn as the frustrated grandfather, Frank Albertson as Ginger's greeneyed admirer, E. E. Clive, as an acidulous butler, Ferike Boros and Ernest Truex in the featured cast, "Bachelor Mother" boasts a superb acting roster.

"The Zoo", an entertaining and highly amusing animal study, Leon Errol in a very funny comedy "Moving Vanities" and "Tempest in Tunis", completes a splendid varied program of screen entertainment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"I Stole a Million"

"I Stole a Million" now playing at the McCarthy theatre is presented as a quite different "Crime Does Not Pay" drama. It is thrill-packed and powerful story of a man who really stole a million, made by Universal Pictures, with popular George Raft and lovely Claire Trevor portraying respectively the roles of Joe Lourik and Laura Benson (the two characters in real life, of which their careers are the basis of this exciting new screen drama).

"I Stole a Million" is the most amazing film of tense reaction to one's thoughts and imagination of the outcome and of the balancing of the scales of justice that there has ever been photographed in your mind. It is a great and true story excellently reproduced on the screen and acted by the one man in all the world that was born for the part, George Raft.

In the cast besides the team of Raft and Trevor, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta and Victor Jory, have excellent feature parts and deserve mention in making the production one of the very finest to so far come from Hollywood.

Proceding the above program now at the McCarthy also includes a swell comedy entitled "Trouble Finds Andy Clyde" an amusing cartoon "Magic Beans" and episode No. two of "Mandrake The Magician" featuring Warren Hull and entitled "The Trap of the Wasp."

THAT "DOUBLE X" SMILE AGAIN

Forced out of the line-up of Boston Red Sox when he was whaling the ball at a great rate, Jimmy Foxx smiles from his bed in a Philadelphia hospital as he goes over his fan mail following an appendicitis operation. Jimmy won't be back in the game this season, but when forced out he was leading the league in home runs, was second in the averages and third in runs batted in. Six or seven players will likely finish ahead of him in driving in runs, but he may retain his home run lead and second place in the batting race, a department in which he led the league last year.

The Man I Love

By WALDO THAYER

You're gathered around to hear this last will and testament—gathered, I shall presume, as I instructed Mr. Attorney Willetts to have you. Beatrice on his left, Dick across from her, and Fred at the far end of the table. As I write I have a nice picture of you waiting eagerly for the important part of this.

Well, you shan't be kept in suspense long, my dears; though perhaps what's coming won't quite fulfill your expectations. You see, I'm putting this down just as I feel it, without any "I, Nancy Gregg being of sound mind" rogamarole. That's principally so there can't be any misunderstanding of what I have to say to you.

You three have been close to me during these last nine years—at least, so you think. In all that time, not one of you has missed spending some hours with me each day. My wants have been cared for by you jointly—using my money, of course. Each of you has possessed the same motive; desire to be the one or among the ones called to hear the reading of this document. And so it is.

To you I shall speak first, Beatrice, for you were the first to figure in this new life of mine—this bitter, bedridden mock of an existence. You it was who rushed to me in the hospital as soon as the studio notified you of my accident. And how grateful I was then for that apparent sisterly solicitude! It really wasn't until after the first year that I saw in your a duplicate of the wretched man we once called father.

For nine straight years you've been, in ever-mounting degree, a liar and a cheat. On four occasions that I'm certain of you've plotted to poison me and only held back through the most craven sort of fear. Does that make you know how thoroughly I've been aware of all you thought hidden? To you I make one bequest, Beatrice—the bed in which I have lain for this eternity shall be yours—if you keep and sleep in it yourself.

And now, Fred. All I have said already may be repeated to you; yet I feel no hatred, for you have been only weak and silly. Those you always were, too. I remember clearly your absurd, vain little mannerisms as we played that scene together the day I fell.

And ever since, day after weary day, you have come mincing in to see me with great sorrowful cow eyes and second-grade roses. Could you thing me so stupid as not to realize you stayed hours after your brief visits to my room often overnight? That your chief mission in life was consoling Beatrice for her "privations" and "sacrifices," so that you might attain a firm grip upon my estate? You foolish, transparent little charlatan! I will you the lovely plaster cast which has embraced my body so many years.

As for your part, Dick, it is too shoddily shameful to dwell on long. To you I was engaged when it happened. Staunchly you reaffirmed devotion and your desire to marry. Only the strange new sanity of vision I had somehow acquired saved me from being fool enough to accept. Of course you were eager! I had a million and a half, you nothing; and an invalid wife in those circumstances would be ideal. And, since six months after my refusal, I have been aware that you were living on sums from my account, extorted through blackmail threats from Beatrice. To you, my gallant cavalier, I tender as a last gift the love letters you wrote me when we were young. May they bring you pleasure.

And so to the ending. One person there is, there has been, in all this wilderness of melancholy and disillusion who means anything of worth, of joy, to me. He is the man whose tender, yet wholly professional, ministrations have made this sluggish hell of inch-by-inch dying bearable. Kind and wise and wonderful, he has entered into my heart, become the sole object of such full and genuine emotions as I may still know. It is my single happiness now at last to bequeath without reservation, save as heretofore enumerated, all I own to Dr. John Renny.

One final word: Perhaps you who hear this wonder why he is not present. It is because I wish to spare him the unpleasantness of coming again into this house until all of you have left it forever. Therefore he has been notified privately of this will's terms. The rest of you will now please go, that the man I love may come home, for thus I like to think of it.

For a moment after the lawyer's dragging voice ceased, there was no sound. Then savagely a chair scraped back and the large gray-haired man on his right arose.

"Well, of all the wild, monomaniacal messes I ever heard," he stated with vehemence, "that certainly is the limit! Why, it would be child's play to have it set aside—though of course I shan't dream of doing any such thing. I dare say our fine friend, the so clever doctor, has been notified and is waiting in high glee to take possession?"

Attorney Willetts slowly raised his head to meet the other's eyes. His tone's tempo matched that of the moment.

"No" he said, "not exactly. I myself went this morning to tell Doctor Renny. His office door was open. He was in his chair, dead from a dose of cyanide. A framed photograph of Nancy Gregg lay face down on his desk. Under it I found a note which said simply: 'I'm coming, dearest'."

BRITAIN TO WRITE WAR RISK INSURANCE

New York, Sept. 20—(AP)—The British Government has undertaken the writing of war risk insurance of two per cent per $100 cargo evaluation on all cargoes destined for United Kingdom ports, The New York Times said today.

It was reported the British Government also had placed a similar rate in effect on westbound cargo out of United Kingdom ports, regardless of the nationality of the ship.

The two-per cent rate is substantially under those offered in the United States.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

She sat down on the side of the bed and took off her hat, absently smoothing the little feather which curled about its brim.

She looked tired, Elizabeth thought—worried, too. She moved nearer to her.

"Did you see the matron?" she asked.

Miss Thornley nodded. "And the doctor, too—charming people, both of them—but they had nothing good to tell me."

Elizabeth gave a little cry.

"She's not—"

"No, no—not that — though it makes me wonder if perhaps it might not be the happiest solution for poor Penelope. They had to operate on her throat—tracheotomy, do they call it? I can never remember surgical words! The surgeon said it was the only chance for her life, and of course there was no time to consult me."

She sighed heavily.

"But she's all right now?" Elizabeth asked. "She'll get better?"

Miss Thornley repeated the words slowly.

"Oh, yes, she'll get better, but—" She turned her face away. "They say it may affect her voice, that sometimes such a result of the operation is inevitable, and if so—oh, poor Penelope!"

Elizabeth looked at her blankly.

"You mean—she may not be able to sing any more?"

Her aunt nodded silently. In imagination Elizabeth seemed to hear her stepsister's voice and the song which always made her feel as if she were shrinking away from an ungentle touch on something that hurt.

"Beloved, are the tears I shed for thee,
Less than white roses thrown for Majesty?"

And then there was a profound silence until Elizabeth asked faintly:

"But there must be something they can do—something we can do for her. Isn't there?"

She looked at Miss Thornley's white fingers which were still absently smoothing the little feather which adorned her hat, and it seemed a long time until she answered:

"I've been wondering, as I drove back here, whether I could tell Kim, whether, perhaps, if he knew, he would come! I think, from what the matron says, there is no doubt that Penelope still cares for him, and so, if he knew the worst—and ill she is— they might perhaps come together again! What do you think, Elizabeth?"

X X X

It seemed as though they had been in Paris for ever and ever!

Elizabeth looked out of the taxicab in which she was being driven from the hotel to the hospital, where Penelope still lay, wondering why she had ever felt excited by the crowded streets and the throngs of people.

It was six weeks since she had left High Chimneys with Kim Lawless, six weeks since she had seen or heard of him, and now the summer was beginning to fade and already yellow leaves from the plane trees strewed the paths in the Paris streets, and sometimes at night there was a chilliness in the air as if Father Frost were already breathing upon the world on his return journey.

Roy Selby had written to her regularly at first; long letters to say how much he missed her and making tentative suggestions that perhaps he might come over for a week end. But now those letters had become fewer and farther between, and the last one had been so short that she had not troubled to answer it.

Penelope had nearly died. There had been nights when Elizabeth and her aunt waited in the matron's room at the hospital, to be told that she had at last given up fighting for life; but skilful nursing and medical science had prevailed and it was several days now since the smiling doctor, who wore a beard and horn-rimmed glasses, had rubbed his hands together and had expressed himself as completely satisfied.

"She will recover—yes! It is a miracle, but she will recover—yes!"

He always said "Yes" after everything, as if his was the last word on any subject, and today Elizabeth was to see Penelope for the first time. Miss Thornley was to have accompanied her, but she was prostrate with a nervous headache, lying behind darkened blinds with a strong scent of eau-de-Cologne in the room, although she had insisted that Elizabeth must go.

"It will be bad for Penelope to disappoint her. We cannot risk any further set-backs."

INSTALMENT 16

Elizabeth set out alone in a taxicab, which seemed to go a hundred miles an hour, dreading this meeting with her sister more than she had dreaded anything in her life.

"I expect you will find her terribly changed, poor child," Miss Thornley had murmured. "But be careful not to show surprise or dismay, won't you, Elizabeth?"

But it was not the change in her sister which Elizabeth was dreading, as she sat looking out at the Paris street. It was something much more indefinite and yet so very much more terrifying.

They had not sent for Kim, though Elizabeth knew that Miss Thornley had written him. A non-committal note, she had called it, "so that if he wishes to come, the door is open for him."

But Kim had not come, and Roy Selby had only once mentioned him in his letters, just casually to say that they had met.

Somehow Elizabeth had thought that he might have written to her, to ask how she was, or how Penelope was, but beyond a short note to Miss Thornley, expressing his deep regret at her bad news, there had been nothing.

The taxi turned in a wide sweep and drew up at the door of the hospital. Elizabeth counted the fare into the driver's hand, together with the necessary tip.

There was a queer choking feeling in her throat as she followed the sister, in her white floating cap, along the spotless corridor to the room to which Penelope had been moved now there was no longer any fear of infection.

They were outside the door of Penelope's room now, and the sister murmured a warning word before she turned the handle and stood aside to let Elizabeth pass.

Penelope was lying on a couch by the window, her face turned away, and it seemed to Elizabeth that the polished floor stretched for acres and acres as she crossed it.

"Penelope!"

Penelope turned her head, and for a moment the two girls looked at each other in a silence which was broken by Penelope herself speaking in the ghost of her old cynical voice.

"Well, do you know me?"

"Of course I know you!" Elizabeth sat down beside the couch, only conscious of a profound pity which seemed to run like a flood of slow tears through her heart.

They had cut away Penelope's hair so that now it was short like a boy's, and although she looked desperately ill, she also, in some strange way, looked many years younger and smaller and infinitely pathetic.

"If I put my arm around her I suppose she wouldn't like it," Elizabeth was thinking painfully, and yet she longed to give some expression of affection. It seemed so cold and callous just to sit still as if this were an ordinary courtesy visit. But she had always been a little in awe of her stepsister, and the old unfriendliness which had existed between them in their nursery days had never been quite eliminated.

"Isn't Aunt Thornley coming?" Penelope asked listlessly. And Elizabeth explained that she had one of her bad headaches and was lying down.

Penelope turned her eyes again to the window and to the late September sunshine.

"Are you better?" Elizabeth asked.

Penelope laughed faintly.

"They say I am," she said. "So I suppose I must be, if it's 'better' to feel as if you are floating in the air with nothing to prevent you from falling. I tried to walk across the room this morning. I might as well have tried to cross Niagara on a tight-rope."

She looked again at her sister, and a faint envy filled her eyes.

"There's nothing the matter with you, anyway," she said impatiently. 'How long have you been in Paris?"

"Six weeks."

"Why did you stay? You weren't allowed to see me, and there was nothing you could do."

"I wanted to stay."

"The loving sister!" Penelope said cynically, and then she was silent for a moment before she broke out with sudden deep feeling. "I want to leave this place. I shall die if I stay here much longer. I'm so tired of it—so tired of all the people around me. I know I should get well—much more quickly if they would only take me away."

"As soon as you are strong enough to travel," Elizabeth said, in distress. "I know Aunt Thornley wants to take you home as soon as ever you can travel."

"Home!" Penelope echoed. "If you mean London, I don't want to go there. I want to go to Italy. I want to go on with the life I have planned. I want to sing. My voice is all I've got left."

Elizabeth turned her face sharply away, remembering that when Miss Thornley had asked about Penelope's voice the bearded doctor had shrugged his shoulders and had avoided answering.

"What have you been doing all the time?" Penelope asked presently. "Sightseeing I suppose!"

"I've seen a good deal of Paris", Elizabeth answered gently.

"You ought to see Rome," Penelope said dreamily. "Perhaps you'll come out there and stay with me later on, when I'm working again. She put her hand to her throat, gently caressing it with thin fingers. "They say I mustn't try to sing yet—and I can't, of course—but soon—"

She stopped to ask, after a moment, with apparent irrelevance:

"What happened? Were you still at the Selbys' when you heard about me?"

"Yes; I'd only just got there and of course, I left at once. We wanted to catch the night boat, but there was a fog and so—"

She broke off with a keen rememberance of that long drive and of the man who had been her companion.

Penelope was looking at her again now, and Elizabeth braced herself for the question she could feel was coming.

"Was Kim at the Selbys'?"

"Yes."

"I thought he would be," Penelope said, and then she was silent for a little before she went on: "I can never understand why he and Roy are such friends. They never used to be, unless it's because of Barbara," she added slowly.

"Of Barbara?" Elizabeth asked faintly.

"She always liked him," Penelope said indifferently. "He used to get angry when I said so, but I know she always liked him. Not that it mattered. Not that anything matters if only I can go on with my career." Suddenly she moved her thin hand to clutch Elizabeth's as she asked feverishly: "They haven't said anything, have they? About my voice, I mean? I've asked Sister and Doctor Favielle, but they only tell me not to be impatient. They treat me as if I were a child," she added fretfully. "They won't tell me anything."

"When you're stronger," Elizabeth said desperately. "It takes a long time to get over—all you've suffered, but I am sure that when you are stronger—"

"All I've suffered," Penelopè said in a whisper, and then she laughed as if at herself. "Yes, I've suffered—more than you will ever know—but I've put it behind me. I never think about it. I only look forward—forward all the time—to the day when all the world will know my name and—"

She stopped with a little choking cough, and Elizabeth said quickly:

"You mustn't excite yourself. It's bad for you. Oh, Penelope I wish I could do something to help you! I wish I could, but—"

Penelope raised herself weakly from the pillows, leaning feebly on her elbows for support.

"What do you mean?" she asked shrilly. "You wish you could do something to help me? Why should I want anyone to help me? I'm getting better; they all say I'm getting better. They all say—" She peered forward, staring into her stepsister's face for a long moment before two words escaped her trembling lips: "My voice?"

Elizabeth made a gesture of despair.

"They've said nothing about your voice. You mustn't imagine things. They've said nothing at all, nothing, only that you must be patient and not worry. As soon as you're well enough you will come home and Aunt Thornley will take you to a specialist."

Penelope lay back on her pillows and closed her eyes. It seemed an eternity before she spoke, and the words sounded as if someone was dragging them from her throat.

"So that's gone, too." She opened her eyes and looked at Elizabeth with such hatred that the younger girl shrank from her with a cry of protest. "So that's gone too." Penelope said again, with weak intensity. "Everything goes—all I've ever wanted. All I've ever wanted."

INSTALMENT 17

Penelope began to beat her thin hands on the coverlet in a frenzy of despair.

"It's not true. I don't believe you. You're trying to be cruel—to frighten me."

Elizabeth took the shaking hands in her own, holding them fast.

"You mustn't, you mustn't!" she said over and over again. "I've said nothing about your voice. Nobody has said anything. It's just your imagination. Oh, Penelope, please, please!"

But Penelope tore her hands away.

"It's true. I know it's true, only you're afraid to tell me. My voice was all I had, and now that's been taken. If only they'd let me keep it—I wouldn't have minded anything else. Not even about Kim, though I loved him. I did love him." And to Elizabeth's terror she began to sob and to call his name. "Kim! Kim! Kim!"

The thin, hoarse voice cut the silence like a cry of physical agony and in terror Elizabeth had turned to go in search for help, when the door opened and the nurse came in.

"Ma petite, ma petite—"

She looked at Penelope and hurriedly signed to Elizabeth to leave them. Elizabeth almost ran from the room, down the long corridor and out into the street, with that broken cry still ringing in her ears.

"Kim! Kim! Kim!"

"And how do you think she is?" Miss Thornley asked when, much later in the evening, Elizabeth found the courage to go to her aunt's room. Miss Thornley had evidently recovered, for she was propped up in bed with a tray of food before her, and a book which she hastily discarded when she saw her niece.

"I think she's dreadfully ill," Elizabeth said dully.

She walked over to the window and looked out with unseeing eyes.

"But they told me—" Miss Thornley cried in alarm.

"I know." Elizabeth bit her lip to steady its trembling. "But she seems to think that—that her voice is gone. She was terribly upset. It was tragic to hear her."

"You told her?" Miss Thornley asked sharply. "Good heavens, Elizabeth, don't stand there and tell me you were so unwise as to tell her the truth. I really thought you had more sense."

Elizabeth turned slowly around and her face went white.

"Is it—the truth?" she asked slowly. "You mean—that her voice is really gone?"

"I thought you understood well enough that it has," her aunt answered angrily. "I know I didn't tell you so in so many words, but I trusted to your instinct to read between the lines. Dr. Favielle tells me quite definitely that she will never be able to sing again. Her voice may come back in time—her natural speaking voice, that is. She may even be able to sing as you can, or I can, but anything else—"

Elizabeth covered her face with her hands.

"Oh, poor Penelope," she whispered.

Miss Thornley looked at her impatiently.

"That is not the way in which to receive bad news," she said at last, a little uncertainly. "We must help Penelope. She is difficult enough, goodness knows, but it will only make things worse if we pity her and let her see how sorry we are. She is lucky to be alive, and she must try to find consolation in that fact. Really, Elizabeth, there is no need to look like a tradegy queen. It is not your trouble, after all. Time is a great healer, and Penelope must rouse herself and face the future bravely. As I say, she is lucky to be alive."

THOUSANDS EXECUTED, RUMANIA CRUSHES NAZIS

Virtual Dictatorship Rules Rumania as Carol Tries To Prevent Possible Coup

Eight Iron Guardists Executed Publicly After Premier Calinescu Assassinated in Principal Street of Bucharest

"PUBLIC EXAMPLE"

King Carol Names New Government Aigesanu Known as "Tough Disciplinarian" Premier and Friendly to Great Britain and France

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bucharest, Sept. 22 (AP)—Thousands were reported executed today as Rumania's new Government exacted a heavy blood-price from the pro-Nazi Iron Guard for the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu.

Reliable sources said thousands of members of the outlawed Iron Guard had been taken from concentration camps throughout the country and shot to death to avenge yesterday's killing of the Premier, who was an implacable foe of the guard.

These sources also said that some women had been shot.

It was announced officially 44 Iron Guardists were executed at the Merkurea-Ciuk Concentration Camp, while 32 were shot by firing squads at Prahova.

Mass Executions

Mass executions were said to be continuing.

Reliable sources said a minimum of three Iron Guard members were being taken from each of Rumania's 72 administrative districts for the firing squads.

The whirlwind clean-up of alleged pro-Nazi elements was pushed also with widespread arrests by the Government.

At the head of the Ministry stood General George Argesanu, "tough disciplinarian" of 56, and a friend of Calinescu. Observers expected Argesanu to follow Calinescu's advocacy of closer Rumanian economic cooperation with Great Britain and France.

Rumanians watched the situation nervously as Germany, who wants Rumanian oil, and Soviet Russia, who sees former Russian territory a part of Rumania, drove their troops further into Poland, north of Rumania.

Hundreds of Arrests

Hundreds of arrests were being made throughout Rumania and one of the questions raiding officers were seeking to answer was whether it was more than a coincidence that Calinescu was slain while German and Russian troops were moving in the north.

Blood-spattered bodies sprawled awkwardly in one of Bucharest's main street provided grisly evidence of the Government's vengeance for Calinescu's assassination yesterday.

Around the roped-off, oblong area, under a dreary sky, hawkers were selling cakes and beer and cold drinks to a wide-eyed stream of Rumanians come to see an object lesson in swift Balkan punishment.

Calinescu, advocate of closer Rumanian economic co-operation with Great Britain and France, was shot to death in his automobile by a masked band, allegedly members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, on a main Bucharest street yesterday.

Eight Iron Guardists, whose outlawed organization Calinescu fought were executed publicly as a consequence of the assassination and King Carol has taken swift, extreme measures to thwart any possibility of a coup.

All night long, crowds swarmed in the street where the bodies lay sprawled on the bloody pavement.

Shot in the Street

The eight lay just where they had fallen from a firing squad's bullets—at the exact spot where the Premier was slain. As the shots rang out and the men toppled over one by one, a loud cry went up from thousands of witnesses, men, women and children.

A short time after what an official announcement called a "public example" to all "who would follow the Iron Guard", police brought to the scene the bodies of two others who were said to have committed suicide after barricading themselves in a Bucharest mansion.

As dawn came, the crowd turned toward the Rumanian Atheneum where the body of Calinescu will lie in state until an impressive funeral planned for Sunday.

Slaying of Calinescu Avenged as Assassins Executed at the Scene

Bucharest, Sept. 22 (AP)—Eight Iron Guardists executed to avenge the slaying of Premier Armand Calinescu were taken to the scene of the assassination at 11 p.m. last night.

The bodies of two others who police said had killed themselves when troops surrounded the house in which they had taken refuge were carted to the scene and dumped on the asphalt avenue.

The eight prisoners, terror shining from their eyes, were stood in a line nearby.

A small crowd gathered on the sidewalk. Clouds obscured the moon. Only flickering street lamps lighted the strange midnight scene.

Uniformed executioners walked behind each straining figure silhouetted in the fantastic light. Then using the assassins' own revolvers, each executioner thrust his weapon behind a man's ear and pulled the trigger.

Eight muffled explosions sounded; eight bodies dropped to the asphalt and lay in widening pools of red.

Police quickly roped off an oblong area enclosing the eight bodies and a neatly-lettered warning to others with possible anti-government ideas was hung nearby.

All through the night men, women and children came to the scene and today the stream of humanity continued. The authorities announced the bodies would remain in the street until midnight tonight.

'DEFENSIVE' WAR

Paris, Sept. 22 (AP)—A new drive against the German industrial city of Saarbruecken was reported today by the French General Staff.

A military communique which gave few details indicated a recent lull had been shattered by new French manoeuvres and advance guard skirmishes.

Artillery on both sides, the communique said, was active along the entire front from the Moselle River along the Luxembourg-Germany

Admiralty Denies Bremen's Capture

London, Sept. 22.—(CP)—Rumors the giant German liner Bremen had been captured were "absurd", the Admiralty said last night. Earlier official quarters would neither confirm nor deny the report.

The Admiralty dismissed reports that the Royal Navy seized the German liner, holding her in British waters.

The Admiralty appended its Bremen comment on a statement saying there was no foundation to other rumors that the British capital ships Hood and Repulse had been lost.

The statement left the fate of the $20,000,000 liner still in doubt. She sailed from New York August 30, two days before Germany invaded Poland. Since then rumor has placed her in ports as far apart as in Northern Russia, Iceland and South America. A report she was bought by the Italian Government was also denied.

By ELMER PETERSON

Vereczke, Hungary (at the Polish frontier), Sept. 22—(AP)—The final internment of thousands of Polish soldiers and officers, routed by the German and Soviet Russian invasions, was started here today on Hungarian soil.

Meanwhile, German units consolidated their occupation of frontier points. As Poles moved down one side of the Carpathians the conquerors of Poland climbed the other toward the strategic border passes.

Long processions of Polish infantrymen and cavalrymen, with their guns and supply carts, moved through darkened frontier villages before dawn, en route to internment camps.

Refugees coming through the Carpathian passes brought tales of wild rule over a small section of Poland by roving bands of Ukrainians whose signal for action apparently was the start last Sunday of the Russian occupation.

Poles and Jews Killed

There were stories of battles between Ukrainians and Polish police, of Poles and Jews alike killed in a wave of looting and destruction which completed the havoc started by German bombing planes. Entire villages were said to have been burned.

Polish officers arriving on Hungarian soil told of escaping from between the closing jaws of the German-Russian vice only to come upon small villages which "dripped with blood" from the activities of the terrorist bands.

Warsaw Which Still Battles On, Is Apportioned to Germany

(By Melvin Whiteleather)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Sept. 22.—(AP)— A German-Russian agreement under which Germany is withdrawing her armies in Poland to the West of the continuous north-south line formed by the Pissa, Narew, Vistual and San Rivers was announced here today.

Warsaw, on the west bank of the vistula, will remain in German hands.

The announcement described the line of the Rivers as the "Demarcation line", but it was stated that future boundaries would not necessarily follow it.

Russian armies, however, will occupy Eastern Poland up to this line, including the cities of Lublin, Luck, Lwow, Brest-Litovsk, Bialystok and Wilno.

The fate of Warsaw was understood to have been one of the last points agreed upon in the negotiations on immediate apportionment of Polish territory.

Diplomatic negotiations to settle the future of the Polish people so far as Germany and Russia are concerned and to establish future German-Russian boundaries were continuing in Moscow as Staff officers fixed terms of army movements.

The "perfect unison" of the two armies was commented upon in a German high command communique which told of the relief by Soviet troops of German units fighting near the southwestern Polish city of Lwow.

"Movements of the German and Russian troops toward an agreed demarcation line is proceeding on schedule and in perfect unison", the statement said.

SUBS SIGHTED NEAR N. SCOTIA SAYS ROOSEVELT

President Also States He Was Informed One Seen Near Alaska

NOT AMERICAN

Roosevelt Declines to Disclose Source of Information but Says It Is Reliable

Washington, Sept. 22—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that submarines, which he said were not identified, had been sighted in waters off Southern Alaska and off Boston.

The United States Maritime Commission, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters, had been informed of the presence of the two undersea craft.

The submarines were not American, Mr. Roosevelt said. They were sighted by ships at sea. He declined to disclose the source of the Government's information, but said the sources were perfectly reliable.

The submarine in the Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt said, was off the southern boundary of Alaska, where it joins Canadian territory.

That in the Atlantic, he said, was 50 to 70 miles from the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

Recruiting Services Not Allowed to Strip Canadian Industry

Ottawa, Sept. 22—(CP)— Recruiting of the Canadian Active Service Force will not be permitted to strip Canadian industry, agriculture and economic life of skilled or key men, according to a statement issued by Defence Minister Rogers.

He said yesterday recruiting officers have been instructed that skilled tradesmen are not to be enlisted except in the classes to which they belong and then only in the numbers required. University graduates in medicine, engineering or other scientific or technical professions are not to be enlisted. This applies also to former cadets of the Royal Military College and the Canadian Officers Training Corps, bankers and accountants.

If heads of factories or other industries find key members of their staffs are being taken unnecessarily they are asked to communicate with the local military, naval or air force authorities concerned.

FACTIONS BATTLE OVER REPEAL OF ARMS BAN

Supporters of Roosevelt's 'Cash and Carry' Plan Look for Victory

OPPONENTS CONFER

President Roosevelt's Address to Congress Calls Present Law Dangerous

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—Two determined factions in the Senate began digging in today for a battle over President Roosevelt's renewed appeal to scrap the United States' arms embargo and substitute a cash-and-carry system under international law.

Led by Senator Hiram Johnson, California Republican, twenty-four senators organized a bloc to oppose the sale of arms to belligerents, on the ground that it would be likely to force the United States into war.

Senator Robert Lafollette, Wisconsin Progressive, speaking for the group, said it would fight repeal of the arms embargo "from hell to breakfast".

On the other hand, confidence of ultimate victory was expressed by supporters of President Roosevelt, who included some Republicans and "old line" Democrats as well as New Dealers.

Hailing Mr. Roosevelt's speech to Congress yesterday as charting the safest course for the country in the present emergency, they arranged strategy conferences. Their aim, leaders said, is to limit the session to neutrality revision, obtain action in two or three weeks, and adjourn.

Heated Senate Debate Forecast.

Senate and House of Representatives leaders of both parties would stay here, at the President's request, to consult with him on policy until the regular session begins in January.

The variance of comments on the President's message led politicians to forecast a heated Senate debate. Only on one point—his expressed belief that the United States could keep out of war—did Mr. Roosevelt win applause from all sides.

Senator Carter Glass (Dem., Virginia), who sometimes has opposed administration policies, gave his support to the President on this issue, calling his speech "very conclusive".

Repeal of the embargo also was advocated by Senators Robert Taft (Rep., Ohio) and Warren Austin (Rep., Vermont), assistant minority leader.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Two indications came today that undercover forces had not yet had their final say in the second Great War. One was the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu of Rumania, and the other the rebellion in Bohemia and Moravia.

They show that beneath them martial exterior assumed alike by belligerent and neutral European states lie springs of hatred, discontent and passion which may at any time burst through the restraints thrown over them by dictatorial governments.

Premier Calinescu was the vigorous suppressor of Rumania's pro-Nazis Iron Guard movement, and was reportedly in favor of close relations with Great Britain and France. Possibly his death was plotted in another land. His end, like that of the martyred Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria, may be a step toward the domination of his country by another nation. On the other hand, it may have been a simple act of vengeance by disgruntled elements in Rumania.

The circumstances indicate it was not an act of personal vengeance nor the mad prank of some lunatic or individual Anarchist.

Armies May March In

Should it lead to disorder in Rumania it might soon bring Russian or German armies or both rushing across the frontier. These two nations in recent years have shown unusual interest in the internal troubles of their neighbors. Both made the Spanish Civil War almost their own affair although they took opposite sides. Germany seized Austria on somewhat the same excuse, and the avowed reason for both German and Russian invasion of Poland is the restoration of order and justice.

While reports of trouble in the provinces of Bohemia and Moravia, sections of Czecho-Slovakia not legally incorporated in the German Reich but held as semi-independent protectorates, are denied by official German circles, the detailed descriptions of rioting filtering out have an appearance of truth.

Their importance as factors in the war must be discounted, however, as history seems to show that rebellion in a militarized country rarely gets anywhere unless the army becomes involved.

It was the mutiny of German sailors and soldiers which made the revolution of 1918 possible and hastened the Armistice. Dissaffection in the army is unlikely on the heels of the successful campaign in Poland.

Troop Concentration in Area North of Siegfried Line but No Indication of Real Reason

FEATURES NOTED

Trenches Dug Near Netherlands Border of Permanent Type According to Well Informed Authorities

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 22 (CP Cable)—The British and French High Commands are keeping an extremely close watch on German entrenchments and troop concentrations on the Netherlands frontier.

The Germans are hastily digging trenches along the Netherlands border north of their Siegfried line but at the moment the British and French military authorities do not know the reason.

German troops are being concentrated behind these fortifications. It may be a purely defensive movement by the German High Command, which so far has made no move to indicate a real reason.

Features Noted

Looking back on the campaigns on the east and west fronts during the past week, military authorities here have noted these features:

1. While Poland has been overrun by the German and Russian armies, the Germans will be kept busy a comparatively long time yet before the country is conquered;

2. There is no indication that Germany feels safe in transferring large bodies of troops from the east to west fronts to start a big movement against the French;

3. The Poles have destroyed some of their oil wells, which fell into German hands, and it is believed Russia has gobbled up the biggest producing field southeast of Lwow.

Before Joseph Stalin gave orders to his Red army to advance into Eastern Poland, the Poles were attempting to hold the line of the Vistula and Bug Rivers eventually to make a last-ditch stand in the southeast along the Dneiper River.

This general retreat in a south and southeasterly direction was designed to hold open communications with Rumania and so to get supplies.

Movements Impossibility

Three factors made this general movement almost an impossibility. First there was the dry summer, which permitted the German mechanized armies to push on incredible distances. Second was Germany's vast superiority in the air and her constant bombardment of Polish troop concentrations. Third was the lack of communications over an extremely long and haphazard front which was compli-

CANADA'S OFFER HAILED IN BRITAIN

Manchester Guardian Stirred by Decision to Organize 2 Overseas Divisions

By FRED BACKHOUSE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 22 (CP)—Canada's decision to contribute men, munitions and food supplies to the Empire's cause was hailed warmly by the United Kingdom press today.

Dispatches telling of the Dominion's moves and pictures of recruits lining up to enlist at the depots of Canadian regiments were prominently featured in national and provincial newspapers.

The Manchester Guardian says Canada's plan to train recruits for the Royal Air Force and other helpful decisions in the matter of food supplies and munitions "for the moment are overshadowed by a generous decision to organize two divisions for service in Europe."

Voluntary Enlistment

Commenting on the rush at recruiting depots, the Guardian says Canada "should have no difficulty in forming a voluntarily enlisted overseas army; and none who remembers the strength and spirit of her contribution in the last European war will underestimate the significance and value of her magnificent decision.

"There will be a heartfelt welcome for Canada's men when they join their comrades in arms in Europe."

A New Zealand units is being formed in England for New Zealanders between 21 and 35 who are residents or visiting the country. After training they will be drafted to the main body of New Zealand forces. A similar arrangement was adopted in the last war. France.

German Prisoners Reach Prison Camp

London, Sept. 22 (CP)—The military correspondent of The Daily Mail reported today that feverish German activity behind the west wall in the Saar region proves that the French attack in that sector upset German calculations.

"The French General Staff have been in no hurry to exploit local successes," the military correspondent wrote. "It is certain that camouflage will play a large part in land warfare. The Germans are endeavoring to disguise all new defence works. They have even gone to the trouble of blacking the faces and dyeing the clothing of laborers engaged in their construction."

WAR GLEANINGS

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 22—(CP Cable)—Colored gas-masks are being issued for tots between the gaes of 2 1-2 and four years. The theory is that gay colors will make the masks less forbidding to children.

The time-worn legend of the bullying sergeant has taken it on the chin. Seventeen of Great Britain's youngest conscripts wrote a joint letter telling their "Sarge"; "we shall, one and all, remember in future the many happy hours which we've spent with you." Even if the boys were being jovially sarcastic, that should be enough to give a jolt to old soldiers.

Officers of the Air Raids Precautions Corps in Yorkshire will be able to act as midwives if necessary. They are receiving training to fit them to assist at births when no doctor, nurse or midwife of the female species is available.

The first war-time tag day will be held Oct. 10. The funds are to help succor wounded civilians as well as soldiers.

DUKE OF WINDSOR IS PHOTOGRAPHED IN UNIFORM TODAY

London, Sept. 22 (CP)—Major General the Duke of Windsor was photographed in uniform today for the first time since his return to England.

As Major General he receives army pay roughly equivalent to $20 daily.

Considerable Activity At Trenton Airbase

Despite constant outpouring of men to other stations, the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force at the Trenton base shows little change to that of the period before war was declared an official report from the station revealed today.

The fact that recruits have been added daily to the roster in numbers commensurate to those being transferred to other bases, is responsible for the non-change in station strength.

Tenders for another hangar will soon be called, it was learned. While official details regarding other structures have not been made public, considerable expansion in building operations and in personnel is expected in the near future. In the meantime the station's four aircraft hangars and barrack blocks are being utilized to capacity.

Workmen are now busy erecting a new main entrance to the station which will lead directly to the gaurdhouse in front of the barrack block. Other plans call for a tunnel leading from the present main entrance under the highway to the landing field construction of which will begin in the near future.

Double Frame House on Bay Street Burns With Loss of $1,000

Trenton, September 22 (Special)—A double frame house on Bay Street owned by E. T. Cherry of Belleville was destroyed by fire of an unknown cause early today with loss estimated at $1,000. Harry Wannamaker and his wife and four children were awakened by smoke and escaped from the burning building without injury, saving the most of their furniture. Corporal McDonald, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, an occupant in the other side of the house moved from the building last night and fortunately saved his belongings as it is stated the fire from an unknown cause broke out on that side of the house. The fire brigade was quickly on the scene, but was unable to bring the fire under control as it had secured considerable headway. It is believed the loss is partially covered by insurance.

MISS BUCK WINNER

Belleville Girl Proud Possessor of Beautiful Hope Chest

Marshalling their full forces last night for the final drive in their first battle for national service, "shock troops" of the Kiwanis Club here went over the "top" to not only annex a glorious victory, but to win for their patriotic funds a substantial amount of money.

In the face of the many splendid attractions offered by the clubmen, the friendly enemy "John Public" who last night was bolstered with heavy reinforcements brought up from urban and rural reserves, capitulated in the face of the lively verbal barrages offered by the defendants of the many booths.

Front Street from Campbell to the Bridge Street intersection was again blocked off for the purpose, and proved the meeting ground of a much larger attendance than that which saw the inauguration of the Karnival the preceding night.

Contests Patronized

Again the many booths and concessions were the centre of enthusiastic crowds which despite the Autuhn tang that was in the air, milled about the centre of the street in an orgy of enjoyment.

Bingo concessions always popular, did a land-office business until a late hour, while wheels of fortune, roulette wheels, and refreshment booths likewise were well patronized. Ladies of the committee in charge of the handsome hope chest, that was given away last night and which incidentally was won by Miss June Buck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Buck, 43 Chatham Street, catered to a large crowd previous to the draw.

Later in the evening with Dan Fairman and his augmented orchestra dispensing merry melodies from atop the business end of a large truck, the populace gave vent to their feelings in old and modern dances on that part of Front Street north of the Campbell Street intersection. Until a late hour, dancing was indulged in and proved a fitting climax to an evening of highly enjoyable entertainment.

Officials of the club in charge of the window shopping contest announced today that owing to the large number of entries submitted in this particular contest, the names of the winners will not be published until tomorrow. The amount of clerical work, sorting answers and other details, have kept the committee busy from the time the first reply was handed in.

In the mileage-guessing contest, Harold Burgoyne, 5 Stratton Street, hit the "nail on the head" when his guess of 75.5 miles, was exactly that registered by the speedometer of the car used in the contest. Chairman Jim Cowan, in charge of this particular contest, stated today that the novelty proved extremely popular with the public. A large crowd last night, again proved their interest by patronizing this part of the Karnival.

Glow of Pride

However, today a tired but happy band of Kiwanians are sitting back with a glow of pride. Pride in the fact that this, their first patriotic venture met with such success, despite the fact that it was a novel departure from their usual form of public entertainment, and pride in the generous response of the public who patronized the Karnival on both nights.

While no definite figures are available it was estimated this morning, that approximately five hundred dollars will be ready for the patriotic purposes for which the Karnival was held.

TESTAMENTS WILL BE PRESENTED TO ALL SOLDIERS IN CANADA

The Upper Canada Bible Society is presenting testaments to all who enlist as soldiers in Canada, according to a letter which Rev. L. S. Wight of this city received from Rev. F. B. Allnutt, district secretary of the society, in which he made reference to the date which had been chosen by the Ministerial Society for the local observance of Bible Society Sunday, October 1st. Mr. Allnutt stated that this meant that the Society would have to have a special increase in funds.

Collegiate News

Since the opening of school, our minds have been concerned over the war, and we find it hard to concentrate on the world of books when the world of "things as they are" presents such fascinating and awful possibilities.

Various clubs have already been organized, reports of which will be given next week.

We note with satisfaction that once again we have a boys' fighting team in C.O.S.S.A. With proper support we should have some fine rugby games at the Fair Grounds this Fall, with a grand team of rooters to cheer the B.C.I.V.S. squad on to victory.

The Library Club

The Library Club this year has an exceptionally high membership which consists of students from nearly every form in the school.

On our first meeting we decided to elect our new officers which are namely: President, Lois Bankier; Vice President, Ruth Whitfield; Secretary, Ruth Wise; Treasurer, Lenore Vermilyea.

The libary is open for circulation at certain times. Morning: 8.30 a.m. to 8.50 a.m. Noon: 12.45 p.m. to 1.15 p.m. After school: 4.00 p.m. to 4.30 p.m.

A delightful corn and wiener roast was held on Tuesday evening Sept. 19, by the Library Club along the Bay Shore.

Transportation was supplied by bicycles owned by the girls and a car. Our appetites were greatly satisfied by roasted corn oozing with butter, "red hot" hot dogs and many other goodies.

Our guests were Miss Wallen and Miss MacLaren; our joyful evening ended with hearty thanks given to Miss Bunting for a lovely "roast" and a vote of thanks was given to Miss Wallen for the use of her car. We are looking forward to another "roast" next spring.

B. C.

On Friday, September 15, at four o'clock, the Boys' Athletic Society held a hard times tea dance in the girls' gymnasium. About thirty boys of the two hundred boys' and girls' who attended, came "dressed down" in traditional ragged clothes and for once they were allowed to exhibit their animal qualities. In a corner of the gym there was a perfect replica of an old time bar for the sake of those boys who loved to drink even if it were only sweet cider. The tea dance ended at six o'clock.

Unfortunately, an accident occurred during the dance which spoiled the fun slightly. During the non-tag dance, Don Goodwin attempted to cut in on Stewart McBride who "caustically" slapped him down. Don then drew a revolver and shot the Yankee through the heart. All efforts were made to save McBride but he succumbed to his wound. This was all very well, but his ghost insisted on bothering the students.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech to Congress

Washington, Sept. 22 (AP)—The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress follows:

I have asked the Congress to reassemble in extraordinary session in order that it may consider and act on the amendment of certain legislation, which, in my best judgment, so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations.

At the outset I proceed on the assumption that every member of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, and every member of the executive branch of the government, including the President and his associates, personally and officially are equally and without reservation in favor of such measures as will protect the neutrality, the safety and the integrity of our country and at the same time keep us out of war.

Because I am wholly willing to ascribe an honorable desire for peace to those who hold different views from my own as to what those measures should be, I trust that these gentlemen will be sufficiently generous to ascribe equally lofty purposes to those with whom they disagree.

All Belong to Bloc.

Let no man or group in any walk of life assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America—because I conceive that regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all.

Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc". We all belong to it.

I have at all times kept the Congress and the American people informed of events and trends in foreign affairs. I now review them in a spirit of understatement.

Since 1931 the use of force instead of the council table has constantly increased in the settlement of disputes between nations except in the Western Hemisphere where there has been only one war, now happily terminated.

During these years also the building up of vast armies, navies and store houses of war has proceeded abroad with growing speed and intensity. But, during these years, and extending back even to the days of the Kellogg-Briand pact, the United States has constantly, consistently and conscientiously done all in its power to encourage peaceful settlements, to bring about reduction of armaments and to avert threatened wars. We have done this not only because any war anywhere necessarily hurts American security and American prosperity, but because of the more important fact that any war anywhere retards the progress of morality, and religion and impairs the security of civilization itself.

Tried to Avoid War.

For many years the primary purpose of our foreign policy has been that this nation and this government should strive to the utmost to aid in avoiding war among other nations. But if and when war unhappily comes, the government and the nation must exert every possible effort to avoid being drawn into the war.

The executive branch of the government did its utmost, within our traditional policy of non-involvement, to aid in averting the present appalling war. Having thus striven and failed, this government must lose no time or effort to keep our nation from being drawn into the war.

In my candid judgment we shall succeed in those efforts.

We are proud of the historical record of the United States and of all the Americans during all these years because we have thrown every ounce of our influence for peace into the scale of peace.

Too Long Debates.

I note in passing what you will all remember—the long debates on the subject of what constitutes aggression, on the methods of determining who the aggressor might be, and, on who the aggressor in past wars had been. Academically this may have been instructive as it may have been of interest to historians to discuss the pros and cons and the rights and wrongs of the world war during the decade that followed it.

But in the light of problems of today and tomorrow responsibility for acts of aggression is not concealed, and the writing of the record can safely be left to future historians.

There has been sufficient realism in the United States to see how close to our own shores came dangerous paths which were being followed on other continents.

Peace Not Assured

Last January I told the congress that "a war which threatened to envelop the world in flames has been averted, but it has become increasingly clear that peace is not assured." By April new tensions had developed; a new crisis was in the making. Several nations with whom we had friendly, diplomatic and commercial relations had lost, or were in the process of losing, their independent identity and sovereignty.

During the spring and summer the trend was definitely toward further acts of military conquest and away from peace. As late as the end of July I spoke to members of the Congress about the definite possibility of war. I should have called it the probability of war.

Last January, also, I spoke to this Congress of the need for further warning of new threats of conquest, military and economic; of challenge to religion, to democracy and to international good faith. I said: "An ordering of society which relegates religion, democracy and good faith among nations to the background can find no place within it for the ideals of the prince of peace. The United States rejects such an ordering and retains its ancient faith.

Known Consequences

"We know what might happen to us of the United States if the new philosophies of force were to encompass the other continents and invade our own. We, no more than other nations, can afford to be surrounded by the enmies of our faith and our humanity. Fortunate it is, therefore, that in this western hemisphere we have, under a common ideal of Democratic government, a rich diversity of resources and of peoples functioning together in mutual respect and peace."

Last Jaunary, in the same message, I also said: "We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an tion accepted facts of geography The inference is we ought not to let that happen any more."

It was because of what I foresaw last January from watching the trend of foreign affairs and their probable effect upon us that I recommended to the Congress in July of this year that changes be enacted in our neutrality law.

Essentials Not Changed

The essentials for American peace in the world have not changed since January. That is why I ask you aggressor and deny it to the victim. again to re-examine our own legislation.

Beginning with the foundation of our constitutional government in the year 1879, the American policy in respect to belligerent nations, with one notable exception, has been based on international law. Be it remembered that what we call international law has had as its primary objectives the avoidance of causes of war and the prevention of the extension of war.

The single exception was the policy adopted by this nation during the Napoleonic wars, when, seeking to avoid involvement, we acted for some years under the so-called embargo and non-intercourse acts. That policy turned out to be a disastrous failure—first, because it brought our own nation close to ruin, and, second, because it was the major cause of bringing us into active participation in European wars in our own war of 1812. It is merely reciting history to recall to you that one of the results of the policy of embargo and non-intercourse was the burning in 1814 of part of this capitol in which we are assembled.

Deviation in 130 Years

Our next deviation by statute from the sound principles of neutrality and peace through international law did not come for 130 years. It was the so-called neutrality act of 1935—only four years ago—an act continued in force by the joint resolution of May 1, 1937, despite grave doubts expressed as to its wisdom by many Senators and Representatives and by officials charged with the conduct of our foreign relations, including myself. I regret that the Congress passed that act. I regret equally that I signed that act.

Again Asks Request

On July 14 of this year, I asked the Congress in the cause of peace and in the interest of real American neutrality and security to take action to change that act.

I now ask again that such action be taken in respect to that part of the act which is wholly inconsistent with ancient precepts of the law of nations—the embargo provisions. I ask it because they are, in my opinion, most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace.

These embargo provisions, as they exist today, prevent the sale to a belligerent by an American factory of any completed implements of war but they allow the sale of many types of uncompleted implements of war, as well as all kinds of general material and supplies. They, furthermore, allow such products of industry and agriculture to be taken in American flag ships to belligerent nations. There in itself—under the present law—lies definite danger to our neutrality and our peace.

From a purely material point of view what is the advantage to us in sending all manner of articles across the ocean for final processing there when we could give employment to thousands by doing it here? Incidentally and again from the material point of view by such employment we automatically aid our own national defence. And if abnormal profits appear in our midst even in time of peace, as a result of his increase of industry, I feel certain that the subject will be adequately dealt with as the coming regular session of the Congress.

Sets For Paradox

Let me set forth the present paradox of the existing legislation in its simplest terms: If, prior to 1935, a general war had broken out in Europe, the United States would have sold to and brought from belligerent nations such goods and products of all kinds as the belligerent nations, with their existing facilities and geographical situations, were able to buy from us or sell to us. This would have been the normal practice under the age-old doctrines of international law. Our prior position accepted facts of geography and of conditions of land power and sea power alike as they existed in all parts of the world.

If a war in Europe had broken out prior to 1935, there would have been no difference, for example, between our exports of sheets of aluminum and airplane wings; today there is an artificial legal difference. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of cotton and the export of gun cotton. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the shipment of brass tubing in pipe form and brass tubing in shell form. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of a motor truck and an armored motor truck. Today there is.

Must Face Facts

Let us be factual and recognize that a belligerent nation often needs wheat and lard and cotton for the survival of its population just as much as it needs anti-aircraft guns and anti-submarine depth-charges. Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation to cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war.

I seek a greater consistency through the repeal of the embarvo provisions, and a return to international law. I seek reenactment of the historic and traditional American policy which, except for the disastrous interlude of the embargo and non-intercourse acts, has served us well for nearly a century and a half.

One Thing to Keep Us Out

It has been erroneously said that return to that policy might bring us nearer to war. I give to you my deep and unalterable conviction, based on years of experience as a worker in the field of international peace, that by the repeal of the embargo the United States will more probably remain at peace than if the law remains as it stands today. I say this because with the repeal of the embargo this government clearly and definitely will insist that American citizens and American ships keep away from the immediate perils of the actual zones of conflict.

Repeal of the embargo and a return to international law are the crux of this issue.

The enactment of the embargo provisions did more than merely reverse our traditional policy. It has the effect of putting land powers on the same footing as naval powers, so far as seaborne commerce was concerned. A land power which threatened war could thus feel assured in advance that any prospective seapower antagonist would be weakened through denial of its ancient right to buy anything anywhere. This, four years ago, gave a definite advantage to one belligerent as against another, not through his own strength or geographic position, but through an affirmative act of ours.

Sound International Practice

Removal of the embargo is merely reverting to the sounder international practice, and pursuing in time of war as in time of peace our ordinary trade policies. This will be liked by some and disliked by others, depending on the view they take of the present war, but that is not the issue. The step I recommend is to put this country back on the solid footing of real and traditional neutrality.

When and if repeal of the embargo is accomplished, certain other phases of policy reinforcing American safety should be considered. While nearly all of us are in agreement on their objectives, the only question relates to method.

I believe that American merchant vessels should so far as possible be restricted from entering danger zones. War zones may change so swiftly and so frequently in the days to come, that it is impossible to fix them permanently by act of Congress; specific legislation may prevent adjustment to constant and quick change. It seems, therefore, more practical to delimit them through action of the State Department and administrative agencies. The objective of restricting American ships from entering such zones may be attained by prohibiting such entry by the Congress; or the result can be substantially achieved by executive proclamation that all such voyages are solely at the risk of the American owners themselves.

Second Objective

The second objective is to prevent American citizens from travelling on belligerent vessels, or in danger areas. This can also be accomplished either by legislation, through continuance in force of certain provisions of existing law, or by proclamation making it clear to all Americans that any such travel is at their own risk.

Third Objective

The third objective, requiring the foreign buyer to take transfer of title in this country to commodities purchased by belligerents, is also a result which can be attained by legislation or substantially achieved through due notice by proclamation.

The fourth objective is the preventing of war credits to belligerents. This can be accomplished by maintaining in force existing provisions of law, or by proclamation making it clear that if credits are granted by American citizens to belligerents our government will take no steps in the future to relieve them of risk or loss. The result of these last two will be to require all purchases to be made in cash and cargoes to be carried in the purchasers' own ships, at the purchasers' own risk.

Two other objectives have been amply attained by existing law, regulating collection of funds in this country for belligerents, and the maintenance of a licence system covering import and export of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Under present enactments, such arms can not be carried to belligerent countries on American vessels, and this provision should not be disturbed.

The Congress, of course, should make its own choice of the method by which these safeguards are to be attained, so long as the method chosen will meet the needs of new and changing day to day situations and dangers.

MONTREAL YOUTHS HURT IN CRASH

Faust Baxter and Ronald LaTraverse Most Seriously Injured

Five Montreal youths sustained injuries when the automobile they were riding in turned completely over east of Shannonville on Highway No. 2 early this morning. The car, which was driven by Faust Baxter, Montreal, was badly wrecked as it rolled over into the ditch.

Baxter, 23 years of age, sustained internal injuries while Roland La Traverse, 18, sustained a broken leg, while three others escaped with minor injuries. Those injured were attended at the Belleville General Hospital by Dr. A. Walters. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated the accident, shortly after 4.00 a.m. today, and later stated the motor car in which the men were riding, had failed to negotiate the curve immediately east of Shannonville. Charges are pending in the case the officer added. All occupants were residents of Montreal and returning home.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, Still on Job, Denies Reports

Berlin, Sept. 21—(AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels today gave foreign correspondents a denial of allegations that Germany intended to violate the neutrality of Belgium, the Netherlands or Luxembourg.

"I am in a position to give a categoric, unequivocal and unconditional denial," said the Propaganda Minister in his first appearance before foreign newspapermen since Germany invaded Poland Sept. 1.

"The German Government never had, does not have now nor intends in the future to violate the neutrality of either of Belgium or Holland."

The conference squelched widely published reports that Goebbels had disappeared since the outbreak of war.

To a question whether this also applied to Luxembourg, the tiny Duchy at the northern end of present German-French battle lines, Goebbels replied:—

"Yes, you may also include Luxembourg."

Goebbels alluded with a smile to his presence [illegible] evidence he was neither dead nor captive nor out of sympathy with Adolf Hitler's war aims, as some reports had alleged.

"I guess you don't need a denial about my person," said the propaganda chief. "My answer to British lying propaganda is my propaganda, of which you have seen evidence in these past weeks. I think."

The Propaganda Minister, who looked rather tired, denied "completely and unreservedly" all reports of uprisings in the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia which the Reich established last March in breaking up Czecho-Slovakia.

CANADA'S PART

Dominion Government has taken steps to organize two divisions for an expeditionary force for use, if and when required, in the Empire's interest in her war to crush Hitlerism. This body of men will be especially trained for overseas service. Already fifty thousand Canadians are under arms and the number of volunteers is growing steadily. Intensification of air training for this important portion of the service is on the program. The personnel of the navy will be increased to double its strength.

Meanwhile plans are at work to carry out the very important duty which rests upon Canada to aid the Motherland in the production of supplies and equipment. Herein this country must gird itself to the utmost to become one hundred per cent efficient.

Then, too, Canada has a problem of defence which is no small one for a land of the size and strategic importance of the Dominion with her comparatively small population as far as populations of nations goes.

The needs of the British Empire are more clear now than they were on the day that war broke out, and so the Governhas a clearer knowledge of the situation, for Canada's aim is how best to make her assistance fit into the Empire and Allied scheme of things. This clarification has been the result of constant intercommunication with London.

This war is immensely serious, more serious than that of 1914 for more depends upon it. Besides militarism which was at the back of the former attempt of the German world to dominate manking, there is today a barbaric attitude towards life and institutions which cannot be allowed to spread. German Naziism is the most evil, and is the negotiation of everything which the liberty-loving peoples hold dear. Hitler is its head and is a typical representative of this policy and ideology.

Both the 1914 and the 1939 wars were launched of course to seize power and dominate, but in the interim there have developed ideas which are nothing but dynamite to civilization. Those ideas of Naziism and Communism were not dedeveloped before the Great War started.

Therefore Canada's contribution must be most effective. Britain and France are called upon for more effective work than in 1914 and the other war years up to 1918. On Canada rests likewise a greater burden.

It is encouraging to see that the unity of effort is being manifested across Canada to meet this situation which calls for the fullest co-operation in the most effective manner. No effort must be wasted, no possibilities unused to build up Canadian contribution to the fullest expression of which the people are capable.

ASSASSINATION AT BUCHAREST

What will be the significance of the assassination of Rumania's anti-Nazi Premier Armand Calinescu yesterday in the streets of Bucharest, time only can tell. He was a bitter and strong opponent of German domination throughout southeastern Europe and was the choice of King Carol to prevent the rise of the "Iron Guard," pro-Nazists, which the government often said had German support, declares John Evans, Associated Press foreign news editor. The "Iron Guard" is believed still active in Rumania and outside marches the old enemy Russia. Rumania is under the direct pressure of Germany, Russia and Hungary with a none too friendly Bulgaria at her back. Germany looks towards the great Rumanian oil fields and her rich wheat harvests. Russia lost Bessarabia to Rumania, one seventh the size of that kingdom in the Great War. Hungary looks enviously at Transylvania, one fifth of Rumania, taken from the once rich Magyar country. Bulgaria lost 9,000 square miles to Rumania after 1918.

Mr. John Evans says "Rumania may steer a neutral course but she is vulnerable inside and out. King Carol's aim is to stay out of the war. He has won the support of the army and certainly he has gained favor with his people in recent years. He has about 1,000,000 men under arms."

Strong measures were taken by the Government of Rumania to put down any possible Nazi uprising.

DEMOCRATIC SOLDIER

Recruits are steadily coming in to the Canadian forces. From all parts of the Dominion they come to find new associations in the new community of the army unit.

These men and youths are intense lovers of liberty such as Canada breeds in her free democracy. They place themselves under the discipline of the army to preserve that freedom which they and theirs have enjoyed and to serve that cause wherever they may be sent.

The fellowship of freedom and heroism which shows in these younger men and youths is one of the greatest fellowships. It is a fellowship of service in danger, it may be, but it is a fellowship which gets at the reality and the practical things of the life in this age. Probably the community spirit of the democratic armies is today unique in history for it is not the spirit of totalitarian youth, whose individuality does not count except as one or two more in the strength of an army. But the Canadian soldier preserves his individuality in war and he also helps to build up the strength of the military force.

TWO V.C.'s AND ONE M.C.

When 26-year-old Alexander McKenzie enlisted in the Essex Scottish last week, he had the Victoria Cross, which was awarded posthumously to his father, Lieutenant Hugh McKenzie, V.C., D.C.M., who was killed at Passchendaele on October 30, 1917. Windsor Daily Star tells the story as follows:

When Hugh McKenzie won his Victoria Cross, Sergeant Hugh Mullin, V.C., M.M., now Major Mullin of Saskatchewan, also won his V.C. And, Lieutenant "Uncle John" Christie, M.C., D.C.M., won his M.C. "Uncle John," sometimes known as "Christie, the Bear Hunter," from old bear hunting days in British Columbia when he was mauled by a bear, died in Vancouver this summer. All three were leading in the attack of the Princess Pats against a pill-box on Meetcheele Ridge.

Here is the story, as told in an official history of the Princess Pats:

"With such leadership as this and gallant individual enterprise on every hand the companies struggled on, desperately thinned and in no semblance of order, till before them stood only the pill-box on the crest beside the road—untouched by the artillery and raining death from every loophole. Hearts had not failed, but strength was all but spent.

"At a moment when it seemed as though the line must waver or break utterly, appeared Lieutenant Hugh McKenzie, D.C.M., of the Brigade machine gunners (himself an old No. 3 Company, P.P.C.L.I., man), and Lieutenant J. M. Christie, D.C.M.; and Sergeant G. H. Mullin, M.M., of the Regimental (P.P.C.L.I.) snipers. While Christie made a rush forward on the left, found a good position, and covered the advance with his deadly marksmanship, McKenzie dashed from shell-hole to shell-hole rallying the survivors for a last effort and leading them on towards the pill-box. McKenzie was killed at the head of the men he had inspired with his own magnificent courage; but while he and his party drew the fire, Mullin was crawling forward up the slope and he actually performed the incredible feat of taking the pill-box single-handed."

That's the story of three brave men. The son of one of them is with the Essex Scottish now.

HERR JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP, who has been considerably in the news recently as Hitler's Foreign Minister and negotiator of the Russian agreement, was a resident of Canada at one time and a clerk in the Molson Bank. H. I. G. Fraser, Manager of the Tilsonberg branch of the Bank of Montreal, recalls Von Ribbentrop, with whom he worked in a branch of the Molson Bank in Montreal. Both were junior clerks, the German entering the bank service in 1910. Manager Fraser remembers Von Ribbentrop as always boasting of Der Tag the British fleet would be smashed by the German fleet. Von Ribbentrop returned to Germany for a time, then reappeared in Ottawa where he moved in the highest society circles and became quite popular, being musically inclined, a violinist of considerable ability, and he went all out to make himself agreeable. When war broke out in 1914 Von Ribbentrop disappeared and made his way back to Germany where he received a commission and took part in the war. After he disappeared at the outbreak of war rumor in Ottawa linked him up as the head of the German spy organization in this country. In any event he always had plenty of money and cultivated the official set in the capital. Incidentally his Der Tag ended at Scapa Flow.

Yesterday afternoon at the Agricultural Park one of the best games of baseball seen here for years took place before a record attendance. Fans were present from Toronto, Peterboro, Port Hope and other points. It was the first game of the semi-finals, O. A. B. A. series between the local G. T. R. team, champions of the Eastern Division and the Oslers team of Toronto, champions of that city. The result was victory for the visiting team, the score being 3 to 2. During the game Goyer of the local team had ten strike outs to his credit, and Spring, pitcher for the Oslers, had 12 strike outs. Goyer walked two and Spring three. One of the Belleville players when batting was hit by the ball pitched by Spring, and two of the Oslers team were hit by Goyer. Hughes of the Oslers made a double play, and Weir and Meagher of the local team also had double plays to their credit. The following composed the teams: Belleville G. T. R.—Weir, Meagher, Ross, Mills, Symons, Gerow, Kelleher, Morden and Goyer. Oslers of Toronto — Potts, Donkin, Hughes, Willey, Buchannan, Gallagher, Newton, Nugent, Spring. # History of U-Boats

Anyone who takes the pains to look up the history of the undersea fighting and navigation will find remarkable facts to corroborate the proverb that there is nothing new under the sun.

Careful research shows that attempts at submarine building date farther back than the Christian era.

Very ancient records make mention of an under-water galley invented by the Phoenicians. No less an authority than Aristotle vouches for the story that when Alexander the Great besieged Tyre he used diving bells to ge some of his troops into the city.

The Arabian historian, Bohaddin, says a military diver operated in the harbor of Ptolemais, while that city was under siege. This was in 1150 A.D.

But the ancestor of the submarine in the sense in which we at present know it was the product of a Dutch physician, Cornelius Van Drobel, who, in 1620, constructed the first undersea boat of which there exists an authentic description.

Van Drobel's submarine was built of wood and was made water tight by greased leather, stretched over the hull.

She carried twelve rowers, besides passengers and made a journey of several hours at a depth of from 12 to 15 feet.

This craft could not dive and rise like a modern submarine. It crawled along the bottom of the water and as the depth increased finally became submerged.

F. Mersenne, a monk of the Order of Minimes, suggested the use of metal for hulls. He also declared that the only correct shape for a submarine was that of a fish and that the vessel could go in either direction. There were to be at least two large guns called 'Colombiades' at each side of the boat. The muzzles of these were to be pushed hard against hinged lids when ready to fire.

With the discharge of the cannon the lid was to be raised and with the recoil of the gun fall into place again before water could enter the boat.

In the cannon intended to be carried by Mersenne's submarine, we may have light on the origin of the nomenclature of "Columbiad," a type of artillery in use in the American Civil War.—Chatham News.

QUEER NEUTRALITY

But the fundamentally shortsighted and highly unsatisfactory embargo law does have a loophole of another sort. It bars only the shipments of certain manufactured war devices and death-dealing chemical products.

There is nothing in the statute to preclude the sale to Canada, or to any other belligerent or neutral, of the iron and steel and copper and other raw materials from which men fashion their implements of war.

Nor is there any prohibition against the use of American capital to build plants in Canada or elsewhere for the manufacture of war materials for fighting nations. Thus Canada might well become a supply base for Britain and France.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Physical Conditions Can Cause Mental Symptoms

One of the difficulties met by the busy general practitioner is when a nervous, upset patient consults him during his regular office hours, 2 to 4 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. The waiting room has perhaps 6 to 12 patients waiting. Each patient is naturally very anxious about his or her condition yet the physician can give but a few minutes to the consideration of each case. It can thus be seen that if the nervous patient is making the first call there will not be much time to get a full history of the case and a full examination is practically impossible. For this reason, the physician may find it necessary to have the patient call a number of times at the office, which may upset the patient as it might appear that the physician is undecided about the cause or the treatment of the symptoms.

Because physicians were busy with organic body ailments and had little or no time for nervous or mental cases, the new group of specialists—psychiatrists— developed. The psychiatrist treats symptoms where the "behaviour" of the individual is not normal. Yet the psychiatrist is the first to admit that some physical condition can cause the mental or behaviour symptoms just as little mental "twists" or "tangles" can upset the body symptoms—stomach, heart, intestine.

Fortunately the busy practitioner is not now referring his "mental" patients so readily to psychiatrists until he makes a complete physical examination, often calling to his aid the family dentist. He takes the time to take a complete investigation and examination.

Some years ago Drs. Bernard Fantus and S. H. Kraines, Chicago, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, in discussing the treatment of psychoneuroses — abnormal behaviour—said

"A thorough understanding of the patient's physical condition is of paramount importance and every one of these patients should have an exceedingly careful physical examination at the beginning. For, if one can assure the patient after this complete examination that nothing abnormal has been found, it will go a long way toward relieving his fears with their evil consequences".

Here and 'There'

Most of us study the war maps. To be sure, we are living in a phantasmagoria in which frontiers are fluid. Nevertheless, we must have maps on which to follow the news. Cities, even cities uprooted by explosives, cannot flee ;the rivers redden but keep their courses; the mountains brood in troubled rest. We can still find the fighting zones. Terse communiques guide us. "Our armies are moving forward on the east bank of the Vistula from Warsaw to Lwow." "A German counterattack was repulsed and we have advanced approximately three kilometers between Perl and Saarlauten." So we draw a line through these dots on the map or arrange pins with colored heads in the newly revealed positions.

But if these battle lines could suddenly spring to action our hands would be palsied with horror. An overwhelming confusion of sound would thunder in our ears. The paper would roll away in a pall of acid smoke disclosing intermittent black stumps of shattered houses. Tanks would wallow forward to spray themselves into iron fragments under a bursting shell. Muddy men would dig frenzied fingers into shallow shell holes. Stooping figures would rise and swarm ahead with machine guns. Some would fall in grotesque attitudes. But some would actually get within three kilometers of Saarlauten.

It is a blessing indeed that battle lines on the map remain so quiet. — New York Times.

Clerical Repartee

London— As a slight relief from the moment I really must narrate a rural episode which has been told to me as authentic.

A country parson, recently wrote to his local rural council pointing out that some gypsies had been encamped on a field belonging to the rectory, and that when they departed elsewhere they left behind a dead donkey. He suggested that the local authorities should take suitable action for disposal of the corpse. In due course a letter came back from the council offices, coldly pointing out to him that, under such and such a bylaw, the duty of burying the deceased donkey was legally imposed on him as the owner for the time-being of the field in which the body lay.

To this the parson, whom one suspects without knowing of being a Balliol man, replied quite succinctly but effectively. He wrote stating that he fully realized the legal position, but that before taking any action himself he had thought it only right "to inform the next-of-kin"! Friendly rural relations between the rectory and the local authority are now temporarily suspended.—(Exchange).

Liberty Versus Despotism

It is altogether probable that the Russian invasion of Poland, just at the moment when that country has been laid waste and rendered all but helpless, reveals at least part of the secret understanding that lay behind the German-Russian non-aggression pact. This, no doubt, is the deal that Hitler and Stalin arranged. This was the price for which Stalin was ready to betray the French and British with whom he had ostensibly been negotiating for an anti-Nazi alliance. Germany having killed the prey, Soviet Russia will seize that part of the carcass that Germany cannot use. It will play the noble role of hyena to the German lion.

This gross betrayal of the professions that Soviet Russia has been making for years is being defended in the manner with which the world has now become sickeningly familiar. Because Poland has "virtually ceased to exist," Russia is free to break every treaty with it. The Soviet Government deems it its "sacred duty" to "extend the hand of assistance" to its dear brother Ukrainians and brother white Russians. The Polish Government is denounced as having been "rotten" anyway, and of having "persecuted" its minorities—in contrast, one supposes, to the well-known kindliness with which Soviet Russia treats minority opinion. The technique is established; just before you pillage your neighbor and kill his wife and children, you must denounce him as a scoundrel.

What further agreements and developments lie behind the ominous non-aggression pact—whether, for example, a re-partition of Poland is to be followed by a partition of Rumania or a more extended drive on the Balkan states, either to annex them or to reduce them to vassalage—we shall doubtless learn soon enough. It is possible that Russia does not intend to participate in warfare if she can help it, but merely to sit on her re-acsuired territories or new possessions and hold them. In any case the outlook is hopeless for Poland and dark for England and France. The latter are more threatened in Asia by Japan, and Germany is in a position to get valuable supplies—in particular, some of the oil that he motorized warfare so desperately needs.

But this virtual alliance of Germany and Russia, at least for temporary ends, will certainly not work altogether against the democracies. As Germany and Russia draw closer together, as buffer states shrink and disappear, the mutual distrust between the two Governments must grow. It is not likely that Hitler has changed the opinion he expressed in "Mein Kampf," that "The present rulers of Russia do not at all think of entering an alliance sincerely or of keeping one." He must still believe that the Russian leaders combine "a rare mixture of bestial horror with an inconceivable gift of lying", and the Russian leaders doubtless reciprocate the compliment. In such conditions no real or durable alliance is probable. The two Governments can act together only in dividing helpless intervening nations between them, while quarrels over the division are always possible.

The most immediate effect is the complete moral and "ideological" change which this working alliance must bring. It clears the air. It will sweep illusions from millions of minds. For at least the last fifteen years communism and fascism have lived on each other. Each has declared itself to be the other's exact antithesis and only formidable enemy. Millions of Germans stomached Hitler in the belief that he was the only hope, as he himself repeatedly boasted, to save them from communism. He framed his anti-Comintern pacts and posed before the world as communism's arch-foe. Although Stalin has always held western democracy in contempt, he created and kept alive for years the pretence of an alliance with it against fascism; his satellites, tools and dupes in other countries formed their "popular fronts" and their leagues against war and fascism. All these pretences and lies have collapsed together. The most squirming apologists now will not be able to convince any one but idiots of their sincerity. At last the issue stands clear. Hitlersm is brown communism, Stalinism is red fascism. The world will now understand that the only real "ideological" issue is one between democracy, liberty and peace on the one hand and despotism, terror and war on the other — New York Times.

Romance Once Touched Life of Lord Kitchener

In an old grey farmhouse in County Kildare, miles from the nearest town, lives the woman Lord Kitchener of Khartoum wanted to marry, writes E. Travers-Hutchin in the London Sunday Dispatch.

All through his later life he was reputed to be a woman-hater. He never married. He was brief to the point of rudeness with women he had to meet. But his love for Miss Katie Kelly, farmer's daughter, whom he met when stationed at the Curragh in the late seventies, was never forgotten.

Now their story can be revealed —for the first time.

Now a little old lady of nearly 80, she lives alone, her only companion a single maidservant, in the ivy-covered farmhouse where the great soldier came to visit her.

The garden is overgrown with weeds. The paddock where they jumped the splendid hunters for which Miss Kelly and her brother were famous, needs mowing. Hens and ducks are the only inhabitants of the stables. No laughing visitors come up the lane to Hill of Rathbride now.

Miss Kelly had just come home from her Paris education when Kitchener arrived to join the 24th Regiment at the Curragh, then one of the principal camps of the British Army.

Her father, a gentleman farmer who had himself been a student of the Irish College in Paris, had just died. Her mother and her brothers John and Joseph were running the farm.

To Katie the brothers gave the mare Charter, daughter of the famous sire, King John.

The foals of Charter were worth 100 guineas ($500 at that time to her). She sold them to the young officers at the nearby camp — among them the man who was to become Lord Kitchener.

That was how they met.

Day after day Kitchener rode over to Hill of Rathbride from the camp. He formed a strong friendship for the brothers Kelly. For their sister his feelings soon exceeded mere friendship.

He was at that time an indifferent horseman. In the paddock of the farm Miss Kelly put him through his paces.

Life was gay for these two young people.

But there was a shadow in their lives. Miss Kelly's mother disapproved of young Kitchener paying court to her daughter. Indeed, she did not approve at all of their friendship.

For the Kellys were Catholics— and devout ones.

Kitchener was a Protestant.

It was on that rock that the romance was to founder.

Dr. Kavanaugh, friend of both Kitchener and the Kelly family, attempted to persuade Mrs. Kelly that this was a case for tolerant and kindly attitude. He thought that Kitchener and Miss Kelly should marry in spite of the difference in their religions.

Needed in Egypt.

At the same time Dr. Kavanagh was telling Kitchener of the work that was to be done in Egypt. The young officer's mind was filled with dreams of great deeds to be done there, of how the death of the heroic General Gordon should one day be avenged and a new land added to the Empire of the Queen.

Mrs. Kelly's opposition became an increasing barrier between the lovers.

The soldier's love for the pretty Irish country girl became more and more hopeless.

Finally he accepted an opportunity for transfer to Egypt. There, at least, was a chance of forgetting his unhappy romance in work that excited his interest.

He wrote to Katie Kelly to tell her of his decision. In some way or other the letter was withheld from her until after he had departed from the Curragh.

She first heard the news when she rode over one day and met the wife of the Provost-Marshal, Captain Burrows. She was brokenhearted, could not understand how it could have happened that he had gone with, apparently, no word of explanation.

It was not until much later that she discovered that he had indeed written to her. She never discovered why the letter was delayed.

Later, too, she heard that as he flung himself on to the cushions of the cab that drove him to the station, the future general said bitterly that his heart was broken. For he, in his turn, could not understand why she had not replied to his letter.

Kitchener went to Egypt, achieved honor, fame, title.

Katie Kelly stayed in the County Kildare. Her horses brought her local fame. She was able to smile bravely.

They never met again, although after the mystery of Kitchener's farewell letter had been cleared up they wrote to each other.

GROWN IN SUNNY SOUTHERN ONTARIO

Plight of Polish Refugees Fleeing into Hungary is One Of Misery and Confusion

By ELMER PETERSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Munkacs, Hungary, Sept. 21 — (AP)—Soviet Russian troops were reported only 15 miles from the Hungarian border today in their invasion of eastern Poland, moving forward on the heels of thousands of Polish soldiers and civilians.

Poles seeking escape from German-Soviet-invaded land continued to pour into Hungary, seeking sanctuary in the Carpathian Mountains. It was estimated that more than 30,000 Poles already have reached Hungarian soil.

Travelling over 50 miles of muddy highways and roads branching through to three mountain passes, I witnessed the immigration. Hungary was the only southern refuge left, now that Russian troops have blockaded the Rumanian border.

I saw small children, some half-naked and all of them hungry. Some of them, separated from their parents, had been taken in hand by Hungarian peasant women. Grown men wept at the sight of these youngsters trooping along in the mud.

Bullet-torn Automobiles

I saw blood-spattered trains, bullet-torn automobiles, and damaged military trucks—Polish military mementoes.

I saw women whose faces were wanly at the thought that crossing wanly at the htought that crossing a frontier could give so much personal safety.

In one 10-mile stretch of road there were more than 200 trucks, automobiles and motorcycles —all packed to overflowing with weary homeless humanity. It was a parade of tragic faces.

Three weeks ago in Warsaw I saw the Polish Army gathering in confident readiness to fight. Yesterday, after a 1,500-mile roundabout journey from the Polish capital, I saw a part of that same army in retreat into a neutral country.

Rain Adds to Discomfort

There is irony in this retreat. The rain for which the Poles prayed has started, but too late. Now, instead of bolstering Polish strength, it adds to the general misery and confusion.

Many of the Polish troops I saw had not experienced actual conflict. Others had and their faces tightened when they spoke of it.

A shrug and: "What could we do against so many airplanes, tanks and armored cars with only machine-guns?"

A note of sheer despair: "But what difference does all that make? What has become of my family?"

And seared in one officer's memory: "I saw hundreds of Polish soldiers killed ....hundreds I tell you....trying to fight tanks and armored cars....trying to fight them with nothing but our bare hands."

There have been few increases in prices at local groceries, as all are selling the old stock at regular prices, before the new taxes are added.

Mr. and Mrs. John Head attended the Word's Fair at New York last week and were impressed by the wonderful array of exhibits.

Though the temperature has fallen low several nights there has been no frost as yet. Tomato-growers are hoping that it will hold off until the crop is harvested. Due to dull and cool days the crop has been slow in ripening in many sections. Few factories have had sufficient tomatoes to keep them operating steadily.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

No Slouching, Please

LARAINE DAY

Has developed her chest with good exercises

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

DON'T BE A Miss Slouchy, throw your shoulders forward and thrust out your tummy. If you do that, you'll never have a manly chest; your bodice will lack chic and lines. The stooping attitude may be the beginning of a spinal curvature which brings along a trail of miseries. Tall girls are victims of the habit, trying to make themselves look shorter, the precious sillies.

The chest or thorax is a cone-shaped cage of which the spinal column forms a fixed part. If this air compartment is to be sound and healthy, if the lungs are to function freely, the supporting back bone must be held upright.

Without good posture the muscles weaken. A girl tires out after a little exercise, which should not be the case. Eyes get dull, cheeks are colorless, the world isn't wagging right at all. There's more yet to the matter; the erect carriage is the pose of courage and energy. Let the body droop and you have a hang-dog look. Why girls do that, teacher doesn't know. But you see these Droopy Doras all the time. They think they look arty.

To develop the chest try clavicular breathing, slow intakes of air with a lifting of the collar bones and shoulders. Five minutes night and morning. Keep your hands on your hips and your head on the level.

The skin on the arms is often pebbly, dotted with red points. Arms are in a bad way this season of the year after exposure to strong sunlight.

Scrub them with a luffa, which is a kind of vegetable sponge. The coarse fabric will remove discolored skin scales, stimulate and circulation. Use plenty of soap and warm water. Rinse with warm water, dry, massage with cocoanut oil or lanoline, which ever you prefer.

An occasional friction with eau de cologne is refreshing, helps the epidermis to take on a smooth surface.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by

RUBY M. AYRES

Lucky!" Elizabeth said bitterly, but Miss Thornley went on, enjoying the sane sound of her own philosophy.

"As soon as she can travel, I will take her back to England. The world is not ended because she can no longer hope to be a famous singer. As a matter of fact, I have always had my doubts about Penelope. She certainly had a nice voice, but so have a hundred other people who never get any further than local concert halls. Where are you going?" she broke off to ask, in exasperation. But Elizabeth escaped without answering.

"Kim! Kim! Kim!" Her sister's desolate sobbing went with her to the silence of her own room, went echoing through her heart and brain, a sorrowful echo of her own despair, for she knew now that, whatever became of Penelope, there could no longer be "peace in the camp" which in all innocence she had thought to share with the man they both loved.

"I will ring you up when I come back from Paris." Her own words returned to her, and Kim's reply: "If you do I shall be there."

But that had been in another lifetime.

They took Penelope back home as soon as she was strong enough to travel, a Penelope who seemed to have nothing to say.

"I can't understand her," Miss Thornley complained. "You would at least think she would show some sign of gratitude for such a marvellous recovery. I have done everything in my power for her, and not one word of thanks have I received."

She was really feeling hurt about her favorite niece's indifference. She was such an energetic woman herself that she could not understand Penelope's lethargy.

She said the same thing a dozen times during the days which followed.

"Penelope makes no effort," she complained. 'She has not once opened the piano since we brought her home and she absolutely refuses to see a throat specialist. When I mentioned it to her she only said, 'What can he tell me that I do not know already? It's only waste of time and money.' Really, she is most discouraging."

But Elizabeth's heart bled for Penelope and, although she made little timid overtures of friendship and companionship, they were so curtly rebuffed that, in the end, she too gave up trying and left her alone.

And then one evening she heard the sound of the piano—at last.

It was a glorious evening in the first week of October, and the windows were wide open. Elizabeth was in her room when she heard the first chords being struck. She stood very still, hardly daring to breathe, every nerve in her body listening with strained attention for the voice which should have followed, but there was nothing, and presently she crept down the stairs and across the hall to the closed music-room door.

Only silence now—the silence which surrounds a breaking heart.

Elizabeth waited until she could bear it no longer, and then she softly turned the door handle and entered.

Penelope was still sitting at the piano, but her arms were outflung on its ivory keys and her face buried in them.

Elizabeth fled across the room and knelt down beside her.

"Penelope — dear, dear Penelope."

For a moment it seemed as if her sister would have turned to her, and then suddenly she pushed her away and started up.

"Leave me alone — leave me alone," she said harshly. "I don't want your pity. You've got everything and I've got nothing. You ought to be satisfied."

And she had gone.

Elizabeth rose stiffly to her feet and closed the lid of the piano. The copy of Penelope's favorite song lay on the polished lid:

"What though my feet be bleeding and most sore;
So shall thou bind them for me in the end...."

Was that what Penelope still hoped? she wondered. That, when he knew, Kim would come back to her?

As soon as Roy Selby knew Elizabeth was back in London, he was most urgent in his entreaties that she should return to High Chimneys for the visit which had ended so suddenly.

"It's good down there in the autumn," he said coaxingly. "We get some shooting. You'll enjoy that."

"Enjoying seeing things killed?" Elizabeth asked.

He looked a little abashed, but he said that if someone didn't shoot the birds and rabbits the place would soon be overrun with them.

"Why don't you come?" he appealed.

"I can't leave Penelope," Elizabeth told him. "Not that she seems to want me, but—"

"I want you," he said eagerly, "and the mater will love to have you, and so will Barbara. Besides, you want a change after all you've been through."

But Elizabeth could not make up her mind to go.

"Will there be a big house-party?" she asked.

"Nobody but you, if you'd rather not, he assured her. "Lawless might turn up for a week end, but—"

INSTALMENT 18

"Perhaps I'll come later on," Elizabeth interrupted; and then, against her will, she found herself asking: "How is Mr. Lawless?" as if he was just a casual acquaintance of whom for some time she had had no news.

"He's all right," Roy told her, rather impatiently. "Been a bit quiet lately. Not such a sport as usual. But, if you don't like him, I can easily give him the tip to stay away," he promised boyishly.

Elizabeth smiled then, because it seemed funny that he should understand so little when she felt that there had been betrayal in every word she uttered.

"I'll think it over and let you know", she said.

Roy frowned.

"I can't see why you need shut yourself up and refuse to go anywhere just because your sister has been ill," he grumbled. "I don't suppose she would make a hermit of herself if you were lying at death's door. Will you come to a show with me? I haven't seen anything of you for so long."

Elizabeth shook her head.

"Well, let me take you out to dinner. We needn't dress, and we can go somewhere quiet, if you'd rather." He took her by the shoulders, shaking her with tender solicitation. "What's the matter with you?" he demanded.

She looked up at him then and laughed.

"There's nothing the matter with me," she insisted. "And if you won't take 'No' for an answer — very well, I'll come to dinner with you, and to a show. And I'll wear my smartest frock—if I've still got one."

"I adore you when you look like that," Roy said, but, as she turned away, he added hastily: "All right, all right. I'll take all that back. I don't adore you a bit. And I'll behave like a cousin or a brother if you like, if only you'll let me take you out. Can we go tonight?"

"If you can get the tickets."

He laughed happily. "I can get the moon if you want it," he promised rashly.

It was a surprise to Elizabeth to find that once Roy had got his own way, she really looked forward to the evening. She chose her prettiest frock and dressed her soft hair in the newest fashion with little flat curls on top of her head, but, at the last moment when she knew that Roy was downstairs waiting for her, and she turned for a final critical glance in the long mirror, she fancied that she could see the shadowy outline of another man's tall figure behind her shoulder. She swung sharply round, catching her breath, only to relax again with a little shamed laugh.

She must not think of him. They had said their good-bye long ago.

"Dinner before the show, supper afterwards," Roy said gaily, as they drove away. Then he glanced down at her. "Is it against the rules to tell you that you look like an angel?"

"Quite against the rules," she answered firmly.

"Right!" He was in too good spirits to be easily depressed, and they had a merry dinner, laughing and talking together like a couple of children.

"This is like it used to be," he said affectionately, when they reached the theatre, and he took advantage of the crowd in the foyer to squeeze her hand.

They were a little late. "The best people always are," he whispered, as they were shown to their seats.

"We've got the best seats, anyway," she whispered back, for they were in the middle of the second row of stalls.

"I hope there'll be someone here we know," Roy said.

"Why?" she asked.

And he answered audaciously: "Because I want to be seen with you."

The play was a light farce which Roy had chosen deliberately, because he considered that Elizabeth needed "cheering up."

He would have been disappointed to know that she did not care a great deal for it and would have much preferred something more serious. But she laughed and applauded generously, which was all he needed to assure him that she was enjoying it as much as he was.

"And now for more food," he said gaily, as they made their way out.

"I don't think I can eat anything more," Elizabeth objected doubtfully, but he assured her that after a few dances she would find she was quite hungry. Elizabeth's first little setback occurred when, in the cloak-room, she caught sight of a girl so like what Penelope used to be that for a moment she stood staring at her. The same tall, rather arrogant figure, and neat head—the same wonderful flair for clothes. Even when she turned around and Elizabeth could see that she did not really in the least resemble Penelope, the likeness seemed to remain.

She wondered what Penelope was doing at this moment? Perhaps she had gone to bed. It was nearly midnight and perhaps she was lying awake, staring into the darkness, tormenting herself with thoughts of what might have been.

"Are you leaving your cloak, Miss?" the attendant asked.

Elizabeth gave herself a little determined shake and Penelope vanished.

"I've got a table," Roy told her when she rejoined him, "although the place is packed."

He waited boyishly for the appreciation which was not forthcoming, and then, with a little shrug of resignation, he followed Elizabeth into the crowded room.

Dancing was practically impossible, but they managed to progress at snail's pace around the floor.

"It will clear later on," Roy said optimistically. "Let's have supper first and then try again."

A bunch of lilies-of-the-valley lay on the table beside Elizabeth's plate.

"How lovely—do they give us all lilies?" she said unthinkingly. And then Roy's face fell as he answered, in rather an injured voice, that he had ordered them especially for her.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, September 23

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DESPITE certain restricting and delaying influences seen among the astral forces, this should be a day of great enterprise and high-pressure activities, with much excitement, initiative and telling crisis. In all departments of life matters are accelerated, and involve extremely powerful issues and interests. These promise exceedingly productive and progressive results, whether in business or in purely personal and romantic associations. It might be wise to temper high tension with a degree of prudence, precaution and vigilance.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of extremely enterprising, exciting, productive and progressive events, with things moving to swift, dynamic and hectic culminations, although there may be several tenacious obstacles or delays to be skillfully met. This high tension obtains in business and employment, as well as in romantic, social or domestic adventures, where discretion and vigilance may circumvent intrigues or subtle menaces.

A child born on this day may be richly endowed with intellectual, cultural and social abilities and graces to insure it fulfillment of social and artistic ambitions, which call for courage, sagacity and prudence, as well as subtlety.

MUNICIPALITIES GIVEN POWER TO LICENSE PARADES

Eleven Wartime Measures Read and Two Others Are Amended

PROROGATION NEAR

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—The Ontario Legislature has finished its business of putting the Province on a wartime footing and prorogation of the emergency war session today is at hand. Still remaining, however, are final Opposition shots at the contentious Succession Duty Act.

Facilitating early prorogation, Conservative Leader George Drew announced at adjournment late yesterday his followers would not debate the taxing measure on third reading. He defended their right, however, to continue their clause-by-clause attack as the bill proceeds this afternoon through committee stage.

Maintaining the speed set at Tuesday's opening, the House gave final reading to nine of the 11 wartime measures and amended two others. The latter will be pushed through today, One of those changed in a minor way was a measure to regulate the holding of public meetings and public parades.

Municipalities Given Power

It probably touches Ontario life more intimately than any other bill passed at the emergency session, giving municipalities the power to licence any meeting or parade and thus aid in stamping out subversive speech.

Under an act to gear Ontario's resources to war needs, a committee of Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew is named to help conserve, utilize and organize industry and agriculture.

Another measure authorizes use of all necesary guards to protect Hydro-Electric plants and other public utilities from possible sabotage. More than 1,000 will be on duty when winter comes, some 800 already employed with powers of police officers.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission is given power to regulate and control the use of all power in the Province so munition factories, for instance, may not go short. About 60 privately-owned plants will go under H.E.P.C. control.

With war measures disposed of, the Conservatives opened their attack on the 50 sections of the Succession Duty measure, which is a redraft of the old law with numerous changes. Col. Drew called it "one of the most vicious and badly-drawn Acts ever introduced in any British Parliament.

Few Changes Made

A few changes were made under Opposition criticism, but the Government refused to alter the principles of the Bill. It is designed to establish "once and for all" the right of the Provincial Treasurer to investigate estates in which fraud is suspected.

Col. Drew stressed he had no quarrel with the general purpose of the legislation, but charged it violated important principles of democracy and civil liberty, substituting bureaucracy for the regular functioning of the courts.

Premier Hepburn warned against any filibuster by the Opposition, declaring it cost $2,000 a day to keep the legislature in session and "people are in no mood for this long debate at a time of war when every dollar should be conserved."

Withdraws Remark

He and Col. Drew clashed over the Premier's undertaking to furnish names of estates in which collections aggregating $23,000,000 had been collected. Col. Drew suggested "You can't rely on the Premier's statements of this kind."

Amid Liberal cries of protest and "Order", Col. Drew withdrew the remark, but added: "But, I will say that the Premier gave an undertaking which he did not carry out."

Premier Hepburn explained it was impossible for the Treasury officials to get all the information on the estates with so little notice, but said some of it was now available and would be furnished Col. Drew.

VALUE OF WHEAT UP $83,600,000

Increase Shown in Last Five Weeks When Price Rises Sharply

Ottawa, Sept. 22 (CP)—Western Canada's wheat crop this fall has increased in value by $83,600,000 in the last five weeks, apparently due to war expectations, it was calculated here today. Since August 19, October wheat has shot up from about 53 to 78 cents a bushel, and that increase will apply to approximately 380,000,000 of the 422,000,000 bushels produced this year. The other 42,000,000 or so stay on the farms for feed and seed.

Whether the price will continue to rise as the war proceeds is considered problematical, but since Sept. 2 the price has been above 70 cents, seeming to steady at around 75.

Factors tending to keep it in that vicinity include the immediate lack of large British buying and the better-than-average crop. Requirement of a 30-per cent margin, now reduced to 20 per cent, is also said to be a factor, slowing down operations of speculators.

Government to Benefit

The Government itself is major beneficiary of the $83,600,000 estimated war increase, in view of its guarantee of an initial price of 70 cents, basis No. 1 northern at Fort William. On the basis of the Aug. 19 level of 53 cents, which was 17 cents short of the guaranteed minimum, the Government would have had to pay out $64,600,000 in wheat subsidies.

As it is, the wheat growers will received about five cents a bushel more than they would otherwise have done, amounting to $19,000,000 —assuming the 75-cent price continues.

Farmers Get More

The value of the present crop at the farm is calculated at $216,600,000. This figure is obtained by deducting 18 cents for transportation and possible loss of grade from the top market price of 75 cents, then multiplying 380,000,000 bushels by the resulting 57.

This $216,600,000 compared with $190,610,000 in 1938 and $161,014,000 in 1937. It compares also with the record year for total value, 1925, when the farm value of 367,000,000 bushels was $451,956,000 and with $445,547,000 in 1927. The record production of 1928 had a farm value of only $424,000,000 for 566,000,000 bushels.

Hitler Pays High Price For Soviet Aid in Poland

By LUCIEN ROMIER

Paris, Sept. 22 (CP-Havas)—Nazi withdrawal in the path of the Soviet Army's northerly advance into Poland apparently confirms the belief that Adolf Hitler had granted Russia a privileged position in relation to the Baltic States, contrary to the policy of the German General Staff in the 1918 negotiations with the Bolsheviks.

According to Red Army communiques, Soviet troops have reached the "Curzon Line," set up by the Allies in 1919 as the Polish-Russian frontier. Chief points of this demarcation, running from north to south are Grodno, Bialystok, Brest-Litovsk and Lwow.

In addition it is reported that German troops have retired from several points in the north, leaving the Soviets undisturbed in a zone close to the Baltic countries. This would be the "high price" said to have been paid to Moscow by the diplomacy of the Reich Foreign Minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

Cannot Form Idea

In the south, along the Polish frontiers with Hungary and Rumania, the confusion in hastily-written dispatches leaves the positions of the Russians and Germans obscure. Most of these reports came from Cernauti, in Rumania, where it is difficult to get an exact idea of what is taking place.

For instance it was reported the Germans had reached Kuty, on the Polish-Rumanian border. Then dispatches said the Russians had occupied all of that frontier, and still later this was denied.

It is highly improbable that the Germans would allow themselves to be blocked completely from a zone of such vital strategic importance. It would be still more imprudent for them to abandon the Galician oil area, which already has been occupied by a Nazi column and of which they have great need.

Have To Be Threshed Out

Supposing a German-Russian accord already exists on the future of the various Polish territories, the question of direct or indirect Reich access to the Black Sea would certainly have to be threshed out sooner or later.

One of the Soviets' greatest fears is of the day when Germany might reach the shores of that sea. Their agreement with the Turks rests on the maintenance of the Status Quo around the Black Sea.

The Turks, moreover, have signed an agreement with Britain and France to keep the Status Quo in the Eastern Mediterranean and the Balkans.

Masters of the Dardanelles, the Turks can easily harmonize their attitude towards the Black Sea with their attitude toward the Mediterranean. But they can do this only if the Russians themselves, following their ancient tradition, keep the Germans away from the Black Sea.

Reds' Championship Calibre To Get Test From Pirates In Tough 4-Game Series

Cincinnati Must Play Four Games in the Next Two Days

CARDS ARE 'HOT'

Marius Russo Scores Seventh Straight Win as Yanks Down Browns

(By Judson Bailey)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cincinnati's championship calibre is going to get a two-day test from Pittsburgh Pirates today and tomorrow, a pre-heating process that will have a lot to do with the temperature of the Reds' series next week against St. Louis Cardinals.

The Reds must play four games in two days without the services of their twin pitching stalwarts, Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer. With only a 2 1-2 game insulation between them and the challenging cards, the whole complexion of the National Baseball League race could be changed before anybody could shout William Henry Walters, Jr., whose turn on the mound won't come again until Sunday.

Reds Have to Win

The Reds are in a position where they have got to win or move aside, because it looks as though nothing but a miracle can stop St. Louis.

The Cardinals collided with Brooklyn this week when the Dodgers were on a five-game winning streak and stopped them cold. They finished sweeping the series yesterday by rallying with three singles and a double for two runs after two were out in the ninth inning. They won 6-5.

Derringer produced his 23rd triumph of the campaign as the Reds routed the Phillies 8-4. He gave 11 hits, but wasn't under pressure.

The standings now

| Club | Won | Lost | G.B. | G.P. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati .. | 88 | 54 | .. | 12 |
| St. Louis ... | 86 | 57 | 2½ | 10x |

x—One game with New York cancelled.

Cubs Battle For Third

Out of the race and battling to hold third, Chicago Cubs clawed a 9-3 decision from New York Giants yesterday with Claude Passeau spreading six hits and Hank Leiber driving in five runs on two singles and a homer, his 22nd of the season and seventh in 12 games.

The Pirates set two Rookies on Boston Bees and Long Johnny Gee struck out 11 to win one game, 6-4, and Oadis Swigart pitched shutout ball to nab the other 7-0.

The World Champion Yankees completed their conquest of Chicago White Sox with a 5-2 triumph, all seven runs being scored in the third inning. It was Rookie Marius Russo's seventh straight pitching victory.

Boston Red Sox took the deciding game of their series with St. Louis Browns 6-2 on seven-hot pitching by Dennis Galehouse. A similar performance by Al Milnar, coupled with a six-run uprising in the eighth inning, brought Cleveland Indians a 6-3 victory over Washington Senators.

Rudy York hit a homer in the eighth and a single with the bases loaded in the ninth to give Detroit Tigers a 7-6 advantage over Philadelphia Athletics.

Louis Greatest Fighter Who Ever Entered Ring Says Former Champion

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

Detroit, Sept. 22 (AP)—Even the expert observers of fighting men—and plenty of others—are saying that Joe Louis is slipping, that soft living has dulled his aim and that he no longer is the Brown Bomber of a year ago.

They say they saw the symptoms in the course of the negro's fight with Bob Pastor night before last. They don't think the "old" Louis would have let any man survive five knockdowns in the first four minutes of fighting and then stick around until the 11th stanza before going down for good.

So I asked Jim Braddock. Big, popular Jim is the man from whom Louis won the title a little more than two years ago. He should have a pretty good idea.

"Get this," said the former champion. "Joe is the greatest fighter who ever entered the ring. He is the greatest fighter you will ever see in your life. He's as good now as he was the night he fought me. Why should be be slipping at 25?

Saw Mind Working

"No, I saw his mind working. When Pastor survived those first two rounds Louis decided to wait and nail him. After all, that Bob can take a good punch. And he's tough to hit, because he can move both ways. So Joe didn't waste many punches. He just waited, and the next time he hit Pastor that was the end of it."

I asked Louis yesterday if he had planned beforehand to use only his right on Pastor this time.

"No," he said, "I hadn't planned anything. But after we started it seemed like the best hand to use."

Joe was sitting around a hotel ballroom and watching amiably yesterday while the fight crowd gave Joe Jacobs, Manager of Tony Galento, the works. They were telling Joe, a master celebrant, that in the uncertain small hours after the fight he had agreed to let Tony fight Pastor this winter, with the winner meeting Louis next summer. Joe was screaming denials. Tony wouldn't fight anybody, he said, until he meets Louis next June.

Not Taking Chances

Joe Gould, who manages Tommy Farr, came over and told Louis:

"Don't pay any attention to these guys, Joe. Your next big fight's going to be with Farr. He's in the British Air Force now. Just wait until he shoots down a couple of German planes and makes himself a hero. Will you fight him then, Joe?"

"Sure," said Joe, "I'll fight him. But not in airplanes, Mr. Gould."

That isn't made up. The champ said it, all by himself.

NEWARK BEARS NOW FAVORED TO WHIP WINGS

Come From Behind in Ninth to Score Winning Run With Two Out

SERIES NOW TIED

Norman Branch "Money" Hurler Credited With Victory in Relief Role

Newark, N.J., Sept. 22 (AP)—Newark Bears, far from anxious to hibernate early this year, were slight favorites today to whip the jittery Rochester Red Wings and represent the International League in the Little World Series.

Coming from behind three times last night the Bears scored a run with two out in the ninth to beat the Wings, 6-5, and tie the final round of the Governors' Cup series at two games apiece.

Herschel Lyons, a righthander, started for Rochester last night but was lifted after retiring the first man to face him and Roy Henshaw, a left-hander, went in.

Collect 14 Hits

The Bears collected 14 hits off four pitchers. Max Macon and Paul Andrews allowed only five hits in eight innings, but two of them were for the circuit. Sturdy, Wings second baseman, lifted a "nothing" ball into the right-field bleachers in the fifth to give Rochester a 4-1 lead. Beal walloped one into the right field stands in the eighth to put Rochester ahead, 5-4.

Newark had tied the score 4-4 in the fifth after a couple of force outs manufactured a run and Kelleher walloped a home run with one on.

The Bears tied it up again in their half of the eighth when Kelleher singled, Judnich sacrificed and Witek doubled.

Norman Branch, sensational in relief roles as a "money" pitcher was credited with the victory when he mowed down the Wings in order in the ninth and Newark fashioned its winning run on a single by Mike Chartak with the bases loaded and two out.

YANKEES SITTING AROUND WAITING WORLD'S SERIES

National Leaguers Strain Pitchers in Struggle for Top Position

ARE NO MATCH

Experts Say Reds or Cards No Match Man for Man or Collectively for Yanks

By IRVING VAUGHAN

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

These New York Yankees are just sitting around these days and having good laughs for themselves. The public might get panicky about the world series and even the National league clubs get the same way, probably an explanation for the repeated last minute foldups in the parent major during the past few seasons. Well you can't blame a team for not wanting to take the kind of bruisings the three time world champions can deal out.

Joe McCarthy

But did you ever hear of the Yanks showing any undue excitement over a world series engagement? They take it in stride. In fact they take it for granted they can whip any outfit in a short series when the money is on the table. So their present mirth is the result of thoughts of what they are going to do to whichever team is unfortunate enough to question their world series dominance.

They're Not Particular

It doesn't make much difference which National league team finally emerges with the 1939 pennant in its possession. Neither the Cardinals nor the Reds match up man for man or collectively with the American leaguers. Even if the Cubs by some seemingly impossible twist should win out at the finish the Yanks would find the competition no keener. In fact, the present Cub team is far weaker than the 1938 outfit the Yanks lambasted in four games.

To beat the Yanks you've got to come up with the finest of pitching and frequently when that is produced they will counter with even better pitching and win. But where is the National league going to find the pitching?

The Reds have two stalwarts in Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer. If Cincinnati lands in the series it will be because of the consistency of this pair over the season's stretch. But will either be at his best? By carrying the pitching load for six months they have undoubtedly worn themselves down. If the Yanks prove this to be a fact there will be excuses for the National league. Its partisans will amuse themselves with declarations that it was what they expected because of the torrid finish of the race.

But if a team must depend on two pitchers throughout a season it indicates a weakness in the machine. The Yanks don't depend on two pitchers.

Cards in Same Boat

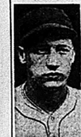
The pitching situation with the Cardinals is similar. The Cards have relied mainly on Lon Warneke and Curt Davis. This pair is showing the effects of a laborious summer. So if they get into the world series and are trimmed it will be due to overwork and not to the few weeks' strain occasioned by a close finish.



Lon Warneke

Whether the Reds would furnish better world series competition than the Cards or vice versa is questionable. Both have a sprinkling of distance hitters. The Cards outfield is strong but infield weak in spots. The Reds' outfield is unbalanced and the infield unsteady at times. The Cards have a definite aggressiveness which helps them overcome their weaknesses in their own circuit but aggressiveness doesn't whip the Yanks. They simply slap 'em down, with a blow over the fence, with about six men in their lineup possibilities for producing such decisive thrusts.

BULK AND BOOT GIVES OTTAWA POTENT WEAPONS

Brawny Ottawa Line Will Give Plenty of Protection to Kickers

FAST BACKFIELD

Orville Burke is Key Man in Passing Attack That Has Possibilities

By WALLACE WARD

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 22 (CP)—Bulk and boot give Ottawa Rough Riders two potent weapons to carry into the 1939 campaign for the Interprovincial rugby football title, and they are pretty confident they will come out on top.

The brawny Ottawa wingline must look like the Siegfried forts to the opposition with such huskies as Tiny Herman, Bunny Wadsworth, Curly Moynahan, Dave and George Sprague and others digging in for a charge.

A front line like that is a great comfort to the kickers behind it who need protection until they can get their booming spirals aloft. Riders have plenty of boot in the backfield this year with three good punters—the answer to a coach's prayer.

Eddie Rocano, last year's punting mainstay, can still boom them out, and he now has two understudies. Sammy Sward, a recruit from Toronto Balmy Beach of the O.R.F.U., can kick and plunge with some distinction, and the other newcomer is Arnie McWatters, a smart quarterback just down from Sarnia Imperials. Arnie can boot the ball 50 yards or more without trouble, and generally strengthens the backfield.

Steamrollered to Win

The Riders steamrollered Balmy Beach 32-12 in an exhibition here last Saturday—largely through their power in the air and along the firing line. The front rank shrugged off the best plunging attacks Balmies could muster, and stood like a breakwater while Ottawa backs were firing passes or getting punts away.

When those Ottawa tanks got the green light for an offensive they ripped the Toronto line to shreds, gumming up plays before they could get started and blocking a half-dozen kicks.

They showed plenty of "git" too, when Ottawa had the ball. Tony Golab, new plunger from Sarnia, lugged the ball on smashing plunges through the beach line for useful gains. Sammy Sward proved another find as a plunging back, and of course there are still such standbys as Dave Sprague, George Sprague, Ed Rocano, Bunny Wadsworth, Tiny Herman, Leo Seguin and Tommy Daley.

Fine Passing Attack

Orville Burke is the key man of Ottawa's passing attack, and he dropped a 45-yard toss right into Wilf Tremblay's hands behind the Toronto goal line to cap a brilliant display last Saturday. Riders' aerial attack has snap and variety, and should be a much stronger threat by the time Oct. 7 rolls around for the opening game here against Hamilton Tigers.

Injured in the off season, Curly Moynahan may be back in harness soon as snapback, but regular duties at the pivot post will most likely be shared by Jack Taylor and Carl Norton. Veterans George Fraser and Tiny Herman will be first string insides, with Wadsworth and Seguin at middle and Rick Perley and Tony McCarthy at outside wing. The Spragues will be alternate middles and Elwood McFaul and Pete O'Connor filling in on the ends.

Plenty of Reserves

Riders have enough first-string material in reserve to keep a blazing pace against tough opposition. They even have two good backfields. Stan O'Neil, former Pittsburgh star, is first string flying wing, with Rocano, Wilf Tremblay and Murray Griffin as halfbacks and Orville Burke at quarter. Then there is Arnie McWatters calling signals for the second shift, flanked by Sam Sward, Andy Tommy and Tommy Daley with Tony Golab at flying wing.

There is speed and shiftiness in both backfields to complement the spirit of confidence driving both. powerful front line, and a great

BABY TERRIERS LICK ST. KITTS

Orillia, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—St. Catharines Shamrocks suffered their first defeat of the season last night when Orillia Baby Terriers whipped them 18-9 in the second game of a best-of-three Ontario Lacrosse Association junior playoff series. Shamrocks won the first game at home Tuesday 14-9.

The third match will be staged on a neutral floor Monday. The winners will meet the Quebec champions in Eastern Canada playdowns.

St. Kitts suffered a loss when their regular goalkeeper, McKee, retired with a fractured nose in the first period. He was struck by the ball after a shot on goal. Orillia led 8-6 at half time.

During the match two penalty time keepers became engaged in an argument over times. They resorted to fisticuffs and were separated by police. Four match penalties were issued in the last five minutes during two fights, one a free-for-all. During the melee one player had his pants torn off and made his exit with a towel draped about his limbs.

Keen competition marked the tournament, that saw intensity registered as the final scores were brought in. Following the tournament the Country Club played hosts to their rival city golf opponents at a banquet and social evening.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Down in Kingston during the past summer a junior baseball league was very successfully sponsored and concluded. Four teams were organized and fully equipped and every player was under 20 years of age. Veteran Kingston Pony players assumed the coaching and following a lengthy schedule Corky's Ponies met Bob Elliott's Giants in the Kingston City Baseball finals which concluded this week with Corky's Ponies winning the City League honors. Large crowds took a marked interest in the league and the players and encouraged the teams in their early stages. The league operated two evenings a week from late in May until Tuesday night, when the finals were concluded. So successful was the league's operation in its initial year that the league heads are about to give the players a banquet and tender the winners with adequate prizes. Similarly a Juvenile League was operated in Kingston with equal success. Apparently the sports heads in Kingston are much more far-seeing than they are in Belleville.

Actually there isn't attention paid to minor league sport in Belleville and therein lies the answer to the lack of adequate young material being available to replenish the ranks of the matured players when they pass into oblivion or past their state of usefulness. Kingston withdrew from O.B.A. baseball activities this year, but in so doing commenced a solid constructive foundation towards the stability of baseball in the future. This practice should be followed in all lines of sport, if the future of the pastime is to be assured. Take for instance the Shell "Oilers", Eastern Ontario O.A.S.A. champions. With three exceptions the personnel of the Oilers was composed of last year's junior players, brought along by Red Townsend. However, we doubt if there are over two or three of this year's junior softball ready to step up next season. There are no junior baseball players available nor will junior hockey send players up to the matured age ranks in Belleville this year. Until minor league sports are fully and adequately sponsored in Belleville, sports will continue to remain in the mediocre class of the province.

Unless the seed is planted there will be no harvest in the land, and the same thing holds good in sporting activities. Unless the youth of the community is given an opportunity to cultivate their athletic talents and improve them, how can we expect to obtain mature aged players in the future and thereby compete successfully on a common level with the provincial opposition? It naturally stands to reason that, if four junior teams are sponsored in Belleville in a common league, whether it be hockey, softball, baseball or tiddley-winks, there will be more material developed than would be the case if only one team was sponsored. More teen-aged boys would be given a chance to play the games and develop their talents and naturally better material would be the productive result. There has been repeated talk of organizing a city junior or juvenile hockey league in Belleville for some years, but like similar conditions in Belleville, the buestion has only received the stage of verbal discussion. With hockey only ten or 11 weeks in the offing it might be a good idea to show some action towards the sponsoring of a city hockey league for Belleville's teen-aged boys in 1939-40.

Harold Brown, husky Meaford athlete who won the broad jump for Canada at the last British Empire games, yesterday returned unsigned a contract offered him by the Cleveland Indians, of the American League. Brown, southpaw pitcher for the Meaford Knights, champions of the Bruce County League, feels he would enjoy a better future by remaining out of professional ball and turning his efforts towards track and field events. "Frankly I don't feel I'm good enough to step into such fast baseball company," bashfully stated Brown. (Perhaps he never heard of Bob Feller or Mel Ott.)

Lieutenant-Surgeon C. Stewart Ward, former football captain at the University of Western Ontario, has been called for service at Halifax by the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, it was announced in London today.

Ward was captain of the Mustangs when they won the senior intercollegiate football championship in 1931.

Three members of the Green Bay Packers 1929 championship football team have turned to umpiring in organized baseball. Cal Hubbard, once a Packer lineman, is one of the best arbiters in the major leagues. Bo Molenda recently was promoted to the American Association, while Jim Bowdoin, another Packer alumnus, was working in the Southeastern circuit and hopes to move into a higher loop in 1940.

As was the case in 1914, Kingston athletes are rapidly answering the call to the colors. Three of Wally Elmer's junior "B" hockey champions are now in the Air Force, while yesterday Hub Smith, Kingston's scrappy little lightweight, also joined the "flying men." Smith has been rapidly forging to the leather-slinging fore in recent months. Another Kingston lad to get in the news is "Ken (Artos) Partis, star of the 1937 Kingston juniors, when he played centre. Partis played with Atlantic City last season, but will be with the newly organized Washington team of the American Amateur Hockey League this winter.

The Cardinals had to rally and score two runs in the ninth to beat the Dodgers 6 and 5 yesterday, thereby keeping pace with the Reds who trounced the Phillies 9-3. Paul Derringer pitched his 23rd victory of the season for the Redlegs yesterday. The National Leauge race is becoming more intense each day as a slip by either the Reds or the Cards would prove most drastic at this stage of the setting. The Reds enjoy a 2 1-2 game lead. Hank Leiber, gained revenge on his former teammates as he hit a three-run homer in the first for the Cubs, who won 9-3 from the Giants yesterday. Leiber was traded by the Giants to the Cubs this season. The Yankees swept their series with the Chisox with a 5-2 win yesterday.

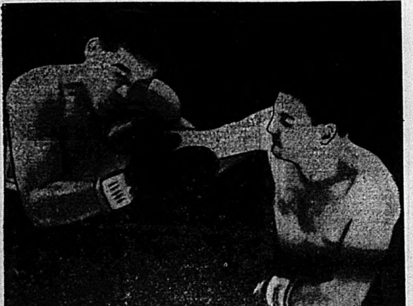
Sport Spice: Herbie Lewis, veteran Detroit left-winger, was named playing-manager of the new Indianapolis hockey team of the International Hockey League...... The annual city senior rugby football series opens in Toronto on Saturday with Argos at Balmy Beach.... The Collegiate gridders are training each afternoon under the watchful eye of Eddie Schrieder, we hear.

PASTOR GETS IN A GOOD SHOT AGAINST THE CHAMP



Bob Pastor, eighth unsuccessful challenger for the world's heavyweight crown that still rests with Joe Louis, was landing a hard right to the champion's face when this picture was taken at Detroit's Briggs Stadium, where more than 30,000 people watched the battle. Pastor put up a game fight and came back to attack strongly after being on the canvas five times in the first two rounds. It was not until the 11th round that Louis was able to land a lethal right when an opening presented itself and finished off the challenger.

AT THE BELLE

"ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES"

Generations of men, women and children throughout the world have grown to identify the name of Sherlock Holmes with the very apotheosis of detective adventure. Holmes' scientific methods, amazing powers of deduction, his courage, eccentricities and fine humor have inspired the creation of countless other fictional sleuths, but he has remained the one immortal—so real to millions that only the fan mail of Hollywood has rivalled the mass of communications sent throughout the years to the master-sleuth's famous address, 221B Baker Street, London.

So it is only natural for the screen to turn to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's works for sure-fire material. Most recent picturization of the great detective was in 20th Century-Fox's "The Hound of the Baskervilles," in which Basil Rathbone appeared as the perfect personification of Holmes, with Nigel Bruce as his ever-present foil, Dr. Watson.

So well was this film received that Darryl F. Zanuck now has another Holmes story on the way —"The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", with Rathbone and Bruce again in the leading roles and Ida Lupino and Alan Marshal also featured. Based on the play, "Sherlock Holmes," by William Gillette (with the permission of the executive of the late Conan Doyle's estate), the picture pits the foremost detective against a criminal genius worthy of his talents—the notorious Moriarty. Moriarty, Holmes' constant enemy, is also Doyle's creation, and as a lawless master-mind ranks almost with Holmes in cleverness and ingenuity. The role in the film is portrayed by George Zucco, included in the cast with Terry Kilburn, Henry Stephenson and E. E. Clive.

The screen play by Edwin Blum and William Drake unfolds the solution of a series of murders plotted with diabolical cunning and incredible super-crime of the century—the theft of the $15,000,000 British Crown jewels from the Tower of London. In addition a powerful love story runs through "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", plus many laughs by Holmes, Watson and other rare characters.

Manager Forhan reports that "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" will be at the Belle Theatre next.

"The Bridal Suite"

Affording a happy variation from the more serious problems of today, "Bridal Suite", is announced as the second feature attraction and offers the spectator seventy minutes of hilarious laughter, and romance.

The heart-beats in the picture are Annabella and Robert Young, teamed for the first time. Chief supporting funmakers are Walter Connolly, Reginald Owen, Gene Lockhart, Arthur Treacher and Billie Burke.

In the story Robert Young is rushed off to Switzerland by his fluttery mother, Billie Burke, to be cured of forgetfulness so that he may in future remember such trifles as his wedding date. But while being treated for his head by Connolly, he loses his heart to Annabella, manageress o fthe Swiss inn. The result is a series of daffy complications whirling from breath-taking adventures in the Alpine heights to free - for-all fights aboard a trans-Atlantic liner, with true love winning in the end.

With Annabella and Robert Young in their best romantic-comedy form, the picture romps to its side-splitting climax with such additional players as Virginia Field and Felix Bressart.

AT THE McCARTHY

"I Stole a Million"

Strange as it may sound, George Raft is gun-shy—when cameras are in action.

Behind the scenes, he is an expert on fire-arms and ammunition, but when it comes to filming incidents calling for gun-play he believes the screen does a better job by amplifying the fact that they are "concealed" weapons.

This point was brought to light more than ever during the conferences preceding and the actual filming of Universal's "I Stole A Million" in which he co-stars with Claire Trevor at the McCarthy theatre.

Raft considers it extremely "corny" to fan a gun in the thriller formula. There is far more thrill, more suspense and much more intensity he says, when the power of suggestion is used and the power of imagination is relied upon.

Frank Tuttle, director of "I Stole A Million," concurred with Raft and but a few scenes of the original script had to be changed to comply with the Raft-Tuttle idea of gangster dilineation.

The result brings out a sincere effort on the part of the star and director to eliminate the theatrics which indirectly, and innocently enough, have a tendency to make a hero of the criminal.

Instead the reaction builds for a subtle trend toward sympathy, akin to pity—based upon a deeper understanding of the cowardly motif underlying the character.

And only by such an approach, opines Raft, can anxiety be so built up for the climax that spells success in the final analysis—and leaves with the audience the feeling that it has just witnessed a great story, excellently produced and acted.

Three Short Subjects

"Trouble finds Andy Clyde" one of the best 20 minute comedies of the season, in addition to "Magic Beans" an all-new cartoon novelty treat and chapter two of the new and exciting "Mandrake the Magician" serial presentation entitled "The Trap of the Wasp" is also now playing at the McCarthy theatre preceding the major attraction "I Stole A Million."

Police Make Fourth Arrest in Bonarlaw Store Robbery Case

Wanted as the fourth member of a gang who are alleged to have attempted to break into Barlow's general store at Bonarlaw, J. Mitchell was arrested in Lakefield early today, Inspector Frank Gardner of the Provincial Police revealed at noon. Mitchell is alleged by the Provincial Police to have been the ringleader of the gang, of which three were apprehended on Wednesday morning following an unsuccessful attempt to rob the Bonarlaw store.

The three arrested by Provincial and Peterborough Police on Wednesday were Frank La Blanc, Paul Gauthier and Cecil Hutt, all of whom are imprisoned in the Belleville Jail charged with attempted robbery.

Mitchell escaped when Hutt was captured in Peterborough, following a hectic police chase from Marmora to Peterborough, but was captured in Lakefield by Lakefield police this morning. Mitchell will be arraigned with the trio now being held in custody at Marmora next week.

Address Read

Dear Father Farrell,

We are gathered here today to celebrate that second great event of a priest's life, namely his silver jubilee, the milestone marking twenty-five years of work for God and His people. We the parishioners of Sacred Heart Church your own immediate fold, wish to congratulate you, to rejoice with you and to ask God's continued blessing on your work amongst us.

You have only been with us a short time but you have long since endeared yourself to us spiritually and personally. Your energy and enthusiasm have amazed us; your keen interest in the Holy Name Society, Catholic Women's League and the Sodality have encouraged us; and your kindly way with our children has indeed touched our hearts.

We welcome you back from your visit to Ireland and hope you had a pleasant sojourn in that isle of Saints.

And now Father, we offer you this small material token of our appreciation of your care of us; a tangible mark of affection for you; and a symbol of our continued loyalty towards you. We offer up our prayers for you today and will continue to pray that God may bless you and keep you with us for many years to come. Signed:

Parishioners of Sacred Heart Church.

A spiritual bouquet was also presented by, Eugene Reynolds on behalf of the Bible class. Father Farrell in a short address thanked the parishiones and all who had helped to make his jubilee a success.

THOMAS PHELAN CONVICTED UNDER NEW WAR ACT

Fined $250 for Uttering Defamatory Statements Against His Majesty, King George

Thomas Phelan of Marysville, who stated he has resided in Canada for the past seventeen years, was fined $250 or in default of the payment of the fine, to be imprisoned for a period of three months, after being convicted under the War Measures Act of 1939 in today's Belleville police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C.

Phelan had pleaded guilty to a charge "that he unlawfully did make statements intended or likely to cause disaffection to his Majesty, contrary to the Defence of Canada Regulations, Section 39, enacted under the War Measures Act of 1939, Chapter 49," on Monday and appeared for sentence today.

"Such utterances as you admitted to have made in Shannonville last Saturday cannot be tolerated in this country and such actions must be put down. You spoke demanatorily of England and Canada and there is no excuse for such actions in this time of anxiety and when the Empire is in a state of war," stated Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., as he sternly reprimanded the accused and added such actions would be more severely dealt with in the future, if repeated. The fine of $250 was then imposed, with the jail term in default thereof.

Character Witnesses Heard.

Robert Pringle, appearing for the accused Phelan, introduced several character witnesses, all of whom had employed the accused and stated he was a good workman and an honest man. None would condone his offence, however.

"There is no doubt Mr. Phelan now realizes the seriousness of his statements and is repentant. He assures me he did not mean these utterances in the manner in which they sounded. This case has received much publicity and no doubt will react as a lesson to others," pleaded Mr. Pringle as he urged a minor sentence.

"With the troubled condition of the present times when men are offering their lives for their country, this type of offence cannot be classed in a petty category, but should be treated as a major crime. If a severe penalty is imposed in this case, it is not likely that others will be prone to make similar statements at this time of war," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., who cross examined three character witnesses called and in each case asked the witness "if Phelan was a member of the Irish Republican Army". All replied in the negative.

Magistrate Butler has a similar case of utterances to be heard in Monday's court, when one E. G. Restell, transient, will appear on the same charge. Phelan was arrested in Shannonville last Saturday by Provincial Police after it was said he had made certain defamatory statements regarding the Union Jack, Britain and Canada.

New 'Snack Bar' Opened Wednesday

Gleaming in spotless white, its electrical appliances for cooking, serving of beverages, and refrigeration marking it as one of the most up-to-date restaurants of its kind in the city, the Snack Bar, Belleville's newest contribution for the hungry public, opened its doors Wednesday.

The interior of the new Bar is one designed to catch the eye of the patron. White predominates from the stuccoed ceiling to the tables that are part of the private dining spots located at the rear of the restaurant.

The U-shaped bar runs two thirds of the length of the restaurant and here in an acme of comfort, patrons may enjoy meals at any hour. The counter in a rich dark color is trimmed with a red border, and this with a colored trimming near the ceiling is sufficient relief to the pure white of the general scheme.

John V. Vasil, proprietor of the Snack Bar, brings a wealth of experience in catering to the public with him. For sixteen years he operated a similar bar in Toronto where his efforts met with success.

For the past two years he has owned and operated the Capitol Lunch near the Capitol Theatre, and his success here is exemplified in the opening today in his new quarters.

All night service will be given, Mr. Vasil stated today, and meals or lunches can be secured at any hour. His motto is "a square deal and a square meal", one which he says has always brought him success.

Mute Justice

By GRANT M. SASSAMAN

We put Doland's body in the caboose, and Phillips and I started forward along the string of freight cars toward the engine. It was pitch dark with a cold rain beating down upon us. The brakesman, walking ahead of me with the lantern, hardly seemed to notice anything. Doland's death was eating into him.

"Don't take it too hard, kid," I advised, catching up to him. "Those things happen on the road. It might have been me—or you. It might —"

"It was meant for me." Above the thrum of the rain on the freight cars I caught the note of bitterness and grief in the brakie's voice. "Rann Toughlin meant to squeeze me between the couplings when we picked up those lumber cars. He got Doland instead."

"Those are pretty hard words, son," I told him. But just the same, I was beginning to think the same thing myself. Rann Toughlin was the meanest engineer on the road.

Phillips was a good-looking chap of about twenty-five, with sleek dark hair and black eyes. Toughlin was always razzin' him about being a gigolo. Just before Phillips had gone back to help the rear brakie Doland pick up the lumber cars he and Toughlin had had a hot argument over one of the engineer's sneering remarks.

"Watch for the highball from the rear," Toughlin now ordered Phillips, as we climbed on the engine. Then grabbing hold of the brakie's arm, he snarled: "And don't shoot your face off too much about that accident when we get in!"

Phillips threw the engineer's hand off. "I'll tell just how it happened!" he grated. "You backed without my signal—while Doland was between the couplings pulling a knuckle over. You thought it was me between the cars, d—n you!"

Shortly after we left the lumber spur, the rain stopped, but a heavy fog settled down upon the right-of-way.

A mile or so from PX tower the road makes a sharp turn to the right and swings down a grade before crossing the river over a narrow, single-track trestle.

I was busy with the shovel when I heard Toughlin yell to Phillips, telling him to go out and fix the bell rope, that it was snarled or torn. Phillips stepped out to the runway along the boiler and groped for the rope up near the siren.

While he was poised there, the train swerved around the bend with a force that sent me against the tender's side. I saw Phillips, out on the runway, grab frantically for the guard rail, catching it just in the nick of time. Then I saw something else—something that showed me Rann Toughlin's black heart as clearly as though it were under a microscope.

I saw him reach for the whistle cord and pull it down hard. Phillips whose head was only inches from the siren, stiffened as though he'd been shot, and then he began to wilt against the boiler.

Before I could get out to him he stumbled back into the cab and sank down on the seatbox, holding his hands at his ears. His face was gray between the dirt smudges and his lips were white. "Nothing wrong with the rope," he was muttering.

It was then the whole train shuddered, and with a loud screeching of brakes came to a full stop. Before the wheels had ceased turning, Toughlin jerked his head in from the window, looked around at me, glared across the pit at Phillips, and then glanced back towards the hind end.

I knew he couldn't see anything through that fog, so I climbed up over the coal pile and started across the box cars behind the engine. I hoped the train hadn't pulled apart somewhere, leaving us stranded with a broken coupling. When I reached the fourth car I noticed a low rumbling sound coming up from the mist covering the tracks. Going to the car edge, I peered down and saw the faint gleam of the river far below. The engine and a few cars had stopped right on the trestle.

Phillips was coming toward me from the engine, crossing the first car. I waved him back frantically. "Tell Toughlin to stay on the engine—that we're on the trestle!" I called. "I guess the conductor threw on the air from the hind end because we were going too fast. I'll wait for their highball. But stay on the engine!"

Phillips turned slowly, dazedly, I thought, and retraced his steps to the engine. A few moments later, just as I was beginning to pick out the dim light of the caboose through the fog, I heard a curdling scream behind me.

I spun about just in time to see Toughlin, with a torch in one hand, and an oil can in the other, falling headlong to his death from the trestle into the river. Phillips sat on the other side of the cab, holding his head between his hands.

"Great God!" I cried. Sprinting back over the cars, I leaped to the tender and slid down the coal pile to the pit. "For God's sake, Phillips!" I yelled. "Why didn't you tell Toughlin to stay on here? You know there's no barriers on the trestle."

Phillips raised his head and looked at me in the same way he had done before. I grabbed his shoulder and shook it. "Snap out of it, kid! Did you tell him."

The lad seemed surprised at my action. "Bill," he said, shaking his head in a hopeless manner. "I can't hear a word you say."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, O deer that was a sad picture I saw with Gladdis this afternoon.

Then for Peet sake think of a glad one, pop said. It's a crime against ethics to sit around with a long face in the presence of liver and onions. This is an occasion that calls for gay music and the waving of flags, he said, and ma said, Gladdis was just as affected as I was, our combined hankerchiffs were sopping ruins.

But yee gods it was only a picture, the very people that played in it and had all the woe and grief are proberly as chipper as crickits at this very moment, and are even eating liver and onions if they're exter lucky, pop said, and ma said, The whole audience was just one big human sniffle, so you dont have to take my word for it.

But I do take your word for it, and you can take my word for it that life is too short and full of real head akes without taking time out to get serious about a few drops of glycerine fighting their way through layers of grease paint, pop said, Well cheer up, I've got some good news for you and this seems an ideal time to spring it, he said, and ma said, Why Willyum Potts there couldn't possibly be a worse time, dont you dare tell me now whatever it is.

Do you mean to tell me you really dont want to enjoy your dinner for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, That's a secondary matter, I'm still enjoying the picture and that's sufficient for me, O deer it would of melted a hart of stone, I had a lump in my throat you wouldn't believe.

Another minute and I'd believe I was eating sackcloth and ashes, pass the peas and dont get them too close to your face, they're too salty already, pop said.

Meaning ma might cry in them and being sourcastic.

CHARGES NAZI CHIEFS LIVED ON 'WINTER HELP'

Daily Mail Writer Says Some Live in Luxury on Pennies for Poor

GERMAN WHISPERINGS

Effect of Hitler Speech on Stock Market is Mentioned

London, Sept. 22. — (CP) — G. Ward Price, Foreign Affairs writer for the Daily Mail, today charged Nazi Chiefs have lived luxuriously on the proceeds of Winterhilfe (winter help) contributions, ostensibly gathered to aid the poor.

"Collections go on almost permanently throughout Germany, for 'Winterhilfe'," he wrote. "Burly young Storm Troopers rattle their money boxes in public places and make the rounds of cafes and restaurants.

"Few Germans venture to decline to contribute a few small coins. There is also a system of selling lottery envelopes from a tray. They cost sixpence, and some of them are supposed to contain a bonus for the cheerful giver, although I have never seen anyone draw a winner at this game.

No Accounts Published

"No accounts of allocations of 'Winterhilfe' are published, and the Germans often whisper among themselves that this is one of the main sources of the luxury in which Nazi Chiefs and their families live.

"Obviously the money that Nazi officials spend must come from somewhere. None of them, with the exception of Herr (Foreign Minister Joachim) Von Ribbentrop and Dr. (Otto) Dietrich, head of the Press Service, is a man of private fortune—yet all have town houses and country villas.

"One day an inscription was found on (Labor Front Leader Robert) Ley's door 'Tell us, Ley, where did you get the 100,000 marks this house has cost?' "

Alleged Deposits Abroad

(Published reports have alleged equivalent have been deposited by Nazi leaders to their own accounts in financial institutions outside Germany. Big personal and family insurance policies also were described.

One published report gave the following list—

Von Ribbentrop—$3,165,000 in cash or equivalent outside Germany. Family insurance of $6,575,000.

(Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels — $4,635,000 in cash or equivalent outside Germany. Life insurance of $2,490,000 on his wife's life and $1,885,000 on his own.

(Field Marshal Hermann Goering —$3,575,000 in cash and securities abroad. Insurance of $3,025,000.

(Deputy Party Leader Rudolf Hess — $2,045,000 in cash and securities abroad. Insurance of $1,962,000.

(Chief of Secret Police Heinrich Himmler—$2,000,000 in cash and securities in foreign countries. Life insurance abroad of $637,000.

(Labor Front Leader Robert Ley— $1,060,000 cash and securities. Foreign insurance policies—$841,000.)

Ribbentrop Wealthy

"Ribbentrop, who leads the list of alleged depositors abroad, is himself a wealthy man by reason of his marriage with the daughter of Herr Kenkell, proprietor of the most widely sold brand of German champagne. Field Marshal (Hermann Goering has always lived sumptuously since Hitler came to power.

"It comes as a surprise to me to find the name of (Rudolf) Hess (Deputy Nazi Party Leader) and (Heinrich Himmler) Chief of German police) in the list of Reich Ministers credited with having accumulated fortunes outside Germany.

"Both of them, to the best of my knowledge, live on a comparatively small scale. There is some reason to believe that they may have used their inside information of Germany's intentions to carry out stocks exchange operations in foreign capitals.

"The tone of a Hitler speech has often had a marked effect upon Wall Street operations, and anyone in a position to know in advance the line he was about to take could certainly have speculated to advantage."

Reputed Fortunes

The diplomatic correspondent of The Daily Telegraph and Morning Post (Conservative) gave some details of reputed private fortunes of Nazi Chiefs.

"Field Marshal Goering's insurances", he writes "totalling £786,000 ($3,474,120) out of a fortune held abroad of £1,501,400, were transacted through foreign representatives by one of the directors of Jaugh, Hubener and Co., whose address is 28 Budapeststrasse, Berlin.

"Dr. Ley, leader of the Labor Front, and High Priest of the 'Strength Through Joy' movement, employed as one of his agents Franz Hersemann of Berlin, a member of his personal staff with good contacts in German circles in San Francisco in exporting the equivalent of £143,000 derived from the movement.

VIRTUAL

King Carol Overcome

In a trembling voice, King Carol read to the Crown Council last night the testament in which the assassinated Premier begged his son to think of the "honorable name I inherited from my father" and asked that his body be carried "in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen" to a tomb beside his father at Arges".

Meanwhile, hundreds of arrests were made throughout Rumania in a whirlwind series of raids timed to crush the Iron Guard, at whose door officials laid full responsibility for the slaying.

King Carol named a new government within eight hours, mindful of the massed armies of Soviet Russia, Bulgaria and Hungary at his frontiers and of the army of Germany not so far away in Southern Poland.

Bulgaria, Hungary and Russia turned over territory to Rumania after the last war and the return of some of it has been demanded.

Germany seeks more Rumanian oil, thus far unsuccessfully. A mission here has been told the oil already is pledged to British, French and United States companies.

New Premier Named

General George Argesanu, 57, one of Rumania's outstanding soldiers and known as a "tough disciplinarian", became the new Premier. He has been War Minister in a previous cabinet and commanded the Second Army Corps when he was called to succeed the slain Calinescu.

The Ministry of Interior was given to General Ion Ilcus, a personal friend of the King. General Gabrial Marinescu, known as a bitter opponent of the Iron Guard and as a friend of France and Great Britain, took over the vital post of War Minister.

All other Cabinet Ministers remained as they were under Calinescu.

Officials issued a list of those killed in the plot. It was headed by the name of Domitro Dumitrescu, a lawyer who was said to have succeeded Corneliu Zelea Codreanu as Iron Guard leader after Codreanu was killed last December first, in what officials said was an attempted break from Rumnik-Sarat prison.

Took Part in Plot

The announcement said Dumitrescu took part in a terrorist plot last January to overthrow the Rumanian Government and kill Calinescu, then Minister of Interior, who was blamed by the Iron Guard for the death of Codreanu and 13 of his followers.

Among 12 members of the organization who were said to have committed suicide after being arrested in the January outbreak was Dumitrescu's brother.

Dumitrescu, however, escaped and fled to Czecho-Slovakia, the announcement said, after hiding guns and ammunition in the homes of associates.

It said he returned secretly from the Ukraine six weeks ago to organize nine friends in a secret Iron Guard assassination band which reclaimed the hidden arsenal.

Dumitrescu, the announcement said, planned the killing of the Premier and led the shooting himself.

The list also included four young law students, a technical school student, a mechanic, a chauffeur, a designer and a photographer.

Move to Prevent Uprising

With the Government in the hands of three career soldiers who constitute an inner cabinet to give Rumania a virtual military dictatorship prepared for any eventuality, authorities moved to prevent any uprising.

Although a communique said "no foreign complications" had been found in the plot, Rumanians nervously watched the frontiers. Heavily reinforced guards were placed around all ministries, general post offices and other public buildings.

Throughout the nation police efforts were concentrated on preventing any response to the cry, "the time has come for revenge!" shouted over the radio by one Iron Guardist during brief occupation of a broadcasting station.

After the slaying, the Iron Guardists were said to have sped in automobiles to the radio studio. There they shot the doorman in the leg, rushed past him into the building, and seized the microphone.

Doorman Gives Alarm

During the tumult the wounded doorman gave the alarm which brought police and troops. They surrounded the building and captured a group of youths waiting on the first floor. Two more were arrested at the scene of the shooting.

A double rank of Rumanian soldiers today surrounded the assassins' bodies. Over the bodies was a sign reading: "Thus perish traitors and enemies of the nation."

Following the new Government's first cabinet meeting the proclamation was issued warning that "ruthless measures" would be taken to maintain order and that Rumania was determined to continue its policy of "strict neutrality" in the present conflict.

PAIR SENTENCED TO SERVE YEAR

Ohio Residents Plead Guilty to Theft of Motor Car in City

Two United States citizens who came to Canada this week in hopes of joining the Canadian Militia, but had their applications rejected owing to their citizenship, today were sentenced to serve one year in the Ontario Reformatory after pleading guilty to the theft of a motor car when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., in today's city police court.

The man's names were given as Arnett Harraman, 24, of Richmond Ohio, and Willis Francis, 23 of Pleasant Valley, Ohio. The men stated they were unemployed and had come to Canada seeking to join the Army.

"These two men went to Riggs' Garage Wednesday afternoon and asked to take a car out to demonstate to one of the men's wives, but they didn't tell the garage employees that the wife was in Ohio" remarked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., in summing up the cases.

Both men pleaded guilty. They were arrested in Kingston after driving the car from Belleville. "This is an unfortunate affair. These men came to Canada to join our militia units, but as they were Americans they were rejected," pleaded Mr. Donnan before Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard informed the court that Harraman and Francis were now on parole from the United States authorities, but only for a minor offence. Immediately Mr. Donnan asked for a jail term, adding that deportaton would follow. His Worship instructed the court to notify the United States parole authorities of the whereabouts of the men.

Recruit Agrees to Make Restitution Of Stolen Money

Morley Jamieson, 26-year-old former Belleville resident who recently joined the Royal Canadian Artillery at Kingston appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court charged with the theft of $30.00 from his employers. The offence was alleged to have taken place before Jamieson joined the militia. The accused man peaded guilty and His Worship suspended sentence for one year, providing that Jamieson make restitution and pay the costs of the court. Jacob Goodman, appearing for Jamieson, assured the court that suitable arrangements for time payments would be made. On a second charge of fraud similar arrangements were agreed upon but not until after Crown Attorney Donnan and Mr. Goodman had established that the complainant in the later case, Ivan Blackburn, Belleville, had ascertained that civic debts could not be collected from soldiers under distress.

Two Drunks Charged

Two inebriates appeared charged with intoxication. One stated he had joined the army yesterday and asked a week in which to raise the asssessed fine. The request was granted.

"I understand this man used very abusive language towards the police when apprehended last night," informed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., when the second man appeared and pleaded guilty.

"You had better learn to curb your tongue and your language before you get into more serious trouble," warned His Worship.

Two domestic cases, heard in camera, concluded the day's court.

Majority of U. S. Press Favors Roosevelt On Neutrality Issue

New York, Sept. 22 (CP)—From editorial reaction in a cross section of the United States press it appeared today the majority of newspapers are in agreement with President Roosevelt's plea the arms embargo be repealed.

Representative comment follows:

New York Times (Independent): The President offers a program which would reduce the risks of our being drawn into war accidentally and at the same time acts to restore to the democracies of Europe their right to purchase in our markets the instruments of self-defence . . . it is a reasonable program.

New York Herald Tribune (Republican): What is at issue is the question of whether we shall free our hands to be ready for anything that the future may bring; or whether we shall bind ourselves now in fetters that have proved unsatisfactory in the past . . .

New York Daily News (Ind.): We cannot afford to retain the entangling, danger-loaded encumbrance which the neutrality act has turned out to be.

Washington Post (Ind.): It — The President's— is a program to which no exception can be taken by any sincere advocate of peace.

Kansas City Star (Ind.): Existing legislation is a mess. The Star agrees heartily with the President that the suggested changes in the neutrality laws would contribute toward peace at home and a better world order in Europe.

Knoxville Journal (Republican): In the initial step toward a return of our official position to that of neutrality, it will be felt by most citizens that the President acquitted himself well.

Miami (Fla.) Herald (Ind.): One great fact, encouraging and heartening, stands pre-eminent to the President's masterful address—the administration has set its face with determination to keep the United States out of war.

Atlanta Constitution (Democratic): This cash and carry plan is, from every angle, the safest, the fairest and the wisest course for the United States to follow under conditions of the world today.

St. Petersburg Times (Democrat): It (repeal of the embargo) looks like a mere matter of good, common sense.

Hartford Courant (Republican): The President slurs over the fact that no generally accepted doctrine of international law now exists to which all nations, belligerents and neutrals, give observance.

Boston Herald (Republican): The President's proposals are simple, straight-forward and so sound that they should be legislated promptly.

Minneapolis Morning Tribune (Republican): The message was a fitting prelude to patriotic, statesmanlike consideration of neutrality and all that it involves. It was calculated to reassure those who have distrusted the judgment and the poise of the chief executive.

Car Crashes Into Steam Roller

Malcolm McLean Mistook Lanes of Travel on No. 2 Highway East of City

When he mistook the lanes of travel along the newly constructed highway immediately east of Belleville late last evening, an automobile driven by Malcolm McLean, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, crashed into a stationary steam-roller and was badly damaged. The roller had been parked on a portion of the road that was closed to traffic, Mr. McLean in some manner getting on the closed section of the highway now under construction.

The occupants of the car escaped with only minor injuries and shock, while both the motor car and steam roller were damaged. Charges are pending in the matter, stated Sergeant H. Thompson and H.T.O. Sam Ervine, both of whom were present to investigate.

Rear-end Collision

A second minor accident five miles east of Belleville took place earlier in the evening, when a motor car driven by Mose Brabant, Detroit, was in collision with a motor car driven in the same direction by Oric Latchford, Foxboro. Here the damage was settled between the parties concerned. The crash was a rear-end collision, H.T.O. Ervine reported.

MASS OFFENSIVES

frontier to the Rhine River, which becomes the boundary between France and Germany 100 miles to the southeast.

French advance patrols were described as feeling their way cautiously deeper into German territory south of Saarbruecken.

Small patrols were sent out to learn the strength and future plans of the German defence units.

Heavy Gun Duel

A heavy gun duel was reported in progress, although firing on both sides was characterized as sporadic.

The French Empire's black Senegalese troops were reported en route to the Western Front.

Sharpshooters mobilized from France's Colonial reservoir of manpower were said to be moving up the west coast of Africa in guarded transports.

Observers saw indications in Premier Daladier's world broadcast speech last night that France and Great Britain may wage a "defensive" war!—at least on the land.

The Premier's speech accepting Adolf Hitler's statements at Danzig as a challenge for a fight to the finish pictured Allied commanders as profiting from experience with mass attacks in the last war.

He said the commanders "have known how to avoid unconsidered and murderous offensives."

Sap Strength Gradually

This was taken by some to indicate that large-scale offensives of the last war "big push" type would not be launched and that emphasis would be laid on airplanes and a naval blockade to sap Germany's strength gradually.

Some military experts have said this form of warfare fitted modern conditions and that "steam roller" tactics are out of date.

French dispatches described the army as digging in solidly on positions captured along the 100-mile front.

The dispatches said French pilots brought down several German bombing planes.

No major German offensive in the west is expected before next month. It would take that long to complete the mopping up process in Poland, observers said.

Daladier said in his broadcast message "the generous efforts of the highest moral and political authorities"—Pope Pius, King Leopold, President Roosevelt and others—had failed to prevent the German invasion of Poland.

The partition of Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia was planned secretly long in advance, the Premier said.

ARMY MEN FEEL LITTLE CONCERN OVER 'ARMOR'

Believe Reported Armor-Plate of German 'Supermen' Could Not Withstand Vickers Gun Bullets

Like a page torn out of a medieval history book, with visions of armored knights fighting to the death with long swords, or a fantastic gleam in the future as pictured by comic-strip artists, comes the story from the western front that German "supermen", chosen especially for their perfect physique and fighting abilities, clothed in bullet-proof suits of armor, and armed to the teeth with knives and deadly machine-guns, are in action against the Allied forces.

Sees German 'Supermen'

Reported by an Italian newspaper correspondent attached to German headquarters on the Western Front, to have been in action in a particular sector, these so-called "supermen" wear armor of the thickness of one-twenty-fifth of an inch. They carry short knives for hand-to-hand combat and are equipped with modern quick-firing rifles. They will be used for the laying of barbed wire entanglements, and due to their so-called invulnerability to modern portable arms, will be able to advance and take positions in the face of the deadliest fire.

Like the knights of old, these Nazi soldiers wear steel helmets with a visor in front. On their chest they carry shields. Their armor suiting encases them from head to foot.

All of which is very awe-inspiring, and no doubt part of German propaganda, to instil fear in the hearts of the Allied troops and enthusiasm in those of the folks east of the Rhine.

Little Fear of Nazi Knights

However, a consensus of opinion of military men of the city today revealed little of the fear that the Knights are supposed to exude.

Several of the opinions were to the effect that Britain would have an appropriate and effective answer to these steel-covered phantoms, who creep in the dead of night or broad daylight to erect barbed wire entanglements or attack advanced positions.

Armor-plate of this thickness would not stand up against modern bombs and high velocity machine-gun fire, Inspector Frank Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police, and a returned soldier said.

Machine Gun Bullet Shock

"The shock of machine-gun bullets at the terrific rate of speed at which they are fired in modern warfare would throw these "supermen off balance", he said. "The armor plate, although said to be only the weight of an ordinary soldier's pack would prove cumbersome no doubt, and would restrict to a great extent the freedom of the wearer's movements."

"The same thing, or something similar was used in the Sino-Japanese conflict, but met with little success," he added.

Double Armor Bullet-Proof

"These suits might stop a .303 bullet, say, at a range of nine hundred or one thousand yards, Captain Ralph Bird of the 34th Battery stated, "but at close range, well—I'd hate to stand in front of a Vickers gun and let its holder pop at me just for experiment's sake. The high velocity of the modern rifle and machine-gun, will, I believe, go a long way toward stopping these fellows, not to mention the bombs."

"England, it is said, has perfected an electric ray that has killed a rat thirty yards away", another high-ranking military officer who prefers to remain anonymous, stated. "If that is the case, then these German Knights had better wear shock-absorbers or they will die like the rats they are, in a trap, that will remind them, during their last minutes, of the American electric chair."

A returned soldier snorted his disgust, "H—", he roared, "let 'em come. Give me a Lee-Enfield, and some ammunition, and I'll make those guys look like a flour-sifter."

POLISH SOLDIERS

arms and ammunition was a mystery.

A young cavalry officer told of flight from the Lwow district only two hours before arrival of the Russians.

Hitler and Ukraine

"Between Lwow and Stryj, to the south," he said, "we found the entrance to the village of Mikolajow barred by an enormous sign reading: 'Heil Hitler! Hail Ukrainian Republic!"

"In this village we found savage butchery of racial Poles and Jews —men, women and children alike.

"We found the proprietor of the hotel with his throat cut.

"We restored order as best we could, shooting all terrorists we could find before continuing on. It was a terrible scene of death and destruction.

"During that night as we rode south we passed several flaming villages, obviously fired by the terrorists."

Ukrainians were reported to have taken possession of Lwow, Stryj and Stanislawow and for a time had their own government.

ALLIES WATCH

cated further by constant German air offensives against the Polish headquarters.

When the Russian armies advanced, Polish resistance in an orderly manner collapsed like a house of cards. The Poles could not fight on two fronts, especially when struck in the back when facing as imposing a military machine as the German army. The Red army has had practically a walk-over.

What really defeated Poland was the speed of the German advance. The Germans demonstrated among other things, how an air force can shatter and demoralize troops concentrations and how necessary anti-aircraft guns are in the general military picture.

FACTIONS BATTLE

Effect of "Cash and Carry".

Although theoretically removal of the embargo would make United States munitions available to all belligerents, it is generally admitted that it would open the American ports only to the Anglo-French allies whose navies control the Atlantic sea lanes.

Among critics of the residential recommendations, Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor-Minnesota) called the proposed program "the road to war", and Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Michigan) said he disagreed that repeal was "the safer non-involvement formula".

Danger Seen in Present Law.

President Roosevelt Thursday asked Congress for repeal of the arms embargo provisions of the neutrality law because they are "most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace."

In a message delivered in person to an extraordinary session of the legislators, Mr. Roosevelt said he could-offer no hope that "the shadow over the world might swiftly pass".

Mr. Roosevelt told Senators and Representatives he had assembled them to amend legislation which in his best judgment, "so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations."

Hopes U.S. to Stay Out of War.

The "crux" of the issue, he said, was repeal of the embargo, which forbids "shipments of munitions to combatant nations, and a "return to international law".

The President took occasion, too, to renew his plea for non-partisanship and to reassure the nation of his belief that America could keep from being embroiled in the war.

"Let no man or group in any walk of life," the President said, "assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America—because I conceive that regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all.

"Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc". We all belong to it."

Mr. Roosevelt added that "in my candid judgment" the United States would "succeed in these efforts" to keep out of war.

JIM JUNK SAVES LIVES OF FOUR

Children Are Caught in Car as Doors Jam in Accident of Automobile and Truck

Cochrane, Ont., Sept. 22—(CP)— Jim Junk is in a hospital here today, just beginning to get credit for saving the lives of four children last Saturday night.

Chief Coroner E. R. Tucker said that if it hadn't been for the desperate rescue efforts of the Russian-born settler four children would have lost their lives in addition to the two adults in a crash of an automobile and a truck.

Elmer Mahaffey, with his four children in the back, driving his automobile toward Timmins, crashed against the rear of a truck driven by A. Woodrow.

The automobile burst aflame. Mahaffey was killed. Another man in the front seat with him, David Lebarron, was enveloped in flame. First rescuers pulled him from the car and rolled him in a ditch to extinguish the flames. But he did not live.

Car Doors Jammed

The impact of the crash had jammed the automobile doors and the four children, Hilda, Alvin, Elvin, and Pearl Mahaffey, were caught inside with the flames spreading.

It was at this point that Jim Junk went into action. He kicked at a door until it came open, although he had injured the bones of his foot in doing so. He lifted the four children out and was burned on the face and arms.

Once the children were saved, Jim Junk didn't tarry. He limped away unobtrusively and said nothing.

But a couple of days ago his foot began to pain him severely and his burns were also bothering him. He made his way to the relief office at Cochrane asking medical attention for the injuries. He was taken to Lady Minto hospital and the story became known.

Captured Poles Put to Work, Germans Ban Milk After Monday

By ROBERT SCHILDBACH
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Sept. 22 (AP)—Germany, faced with the problem of feeding Polish war prisoners, today prepared further food rationing and decided to put captured Poles to work in industry.

Until now Germany has used Polish prisoners, estimated by Nazis to number more than 240,000 as farmhands. An official announcement that they would be used in industry as well did not disclose whether they would be employed in munitions factories.

With more stringent rationing, adults will be allowed no milk after Monday, it was reported. This limitation, commercial circles said, might be temporary. They expressed belief a milk restriction would be the result of a diversion of milk trucks to other purposes in the service of the Reich.

Fighting Around Warsaw

The High Command's daily communique acknowledged that fighting continued around Warsaw and said a battle with Poles who had held out at Tomaszow, about 65 miles southwest of Warsaw, "had been victoriously concluded."

President Roosevelt's request to the United States Congress to lift the embargo in arms shipments to belligerents drew no official German response. Newspapers did not mention it.

Revision of the United States' Neutrality Law would be unwelcome news to Germany although it generally was believed that, as far as possible, military planners had anticipated such a development.

Drive On Warsaw Not Yet

The real drive of Germany's army in Poland for possession of Warsaw has not yet started, military authorities claimed. So far, they said, only preparations will be announced by the Army High Command.

The High Command's communique said "only isolated skirmishes" had taken place in the last 24 hours on the western front facing France.

This morning's communique said German and Soviet Russian troops in Poland were in "full agreement" as they occupied "respective lines of demarcation."

German Delegates at Moscow

Well-informed sources said that political experts as well as General Staff officers were in a German delegation which went to Moscow.

As a result, they expected that not only military measures of the German and Soviet Russian armies in Poland would be discussed but also that a start would be made on political conversations to work out the future of Poland.

On which side of the German-Russian line in Poland Warsaw was to be was still not known publicly. The probability, according to reports in well-informed quarters, was that Russian military forces woud take over the Polish capital if it is captured.

Ration Cards For Restaurants

New ration cards, it also was said will be issued for Germans next week to limit food for those who eat in restaurants.

It was reported that food cards would be necessary in order to dine out and that waiters would clip out coupons for food consumed to prevent purchase of equal amounts of similar foods in stores. Such a regulation would be similar to one that prevailed toward the end of the last war.

SMALL GERMAN FREIGHTER BELIEVED SUNK

Stockholm, Sept. 22—(CP Havas)—Wreckage washed ashore today led to the belief the 125-ton German freighter Lianne had been sunk in mine fields between Denmark and Sweden early this month. Bodies of four members of the Lianne's crew also were washed ashore.

Increasing Evidence Major Engagement May Develop With Extreme Suddenness but Starter is Only Conjecture

"MORE SURPRISES"

French Sources Expect Russian 'Surprises' and Calls Delivery of Large Part of Poland to Soviet a Betrayal of Europe

By JOHN MARTIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Sept. 23 (AP)—French infantry forces strongly installed on German soil near Saarbruecken were reported today to have repulsed three separate German attacks aimed at regaining French-held territory.

Before German assault troops stormed from their dugouts, German artillery blasted the French lines with artillery fire.

The French High Command described the bombardment as "more intensive" than any before on the Western Front.

Lethal fire from French positions was said to have cut down the advancing Germans each time, finally compelling them to retire without winning an inch.

Artillery Fire All Night.

Artillery fire on both sides was said to have continued throughout the night in the Saarbruecken sector. Aviation and artillery were reported active in other zones.

Why The Weather?

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Equinox! Today the sun rises exactly in the east and sets exactly in the west. If there are no clouds, it will be visible exactly 12 hours, or a little longer due to refraction or bending of the rays in the atmosphere. Expecting equinoctial gales or storms on this date shows how great is the power of tradition. Storms are occurring, no doubt, at many places, but they are not due to the circumstance of the equinox, which is simply the time that the sun in its journey south is on or crossing the equator. If available, examine the weather map on this day and see where the storms are in the United States and Canada.

BRITISH TOMMIES OFF TO WAR

Reminiscent of the days of 1914, these British Tommies are shown marching to embark for France. ## Turn Back Clocks Tonight Midnight As D. S. T. Ends

After a glorious summer of sunshine, warm weather and daylight saving, Belleville returns to Eastern Standard Time at 12.01 a.m. tomorrow (Sunday) morning.

Don't forget to turn the family timepiece backwards one full hour before retiring tonight, or else you are quite likely to arrive at church a full sixty minutes before service opens on Sunday morning.

Since late in April Belleville has enjoyed an extra hour of daylight and sunshine in the evenings, but tonight that period of daylight saving is concluded after nearly five months of fast time.

Although the Mayor's proclamation declares the period of daylight savings terminates at 12.01 a.m. Sept. 24th., it does not necessarily follow that one has to refrain from slumber until that time to return one's timepieces to standard time. The more practical method is to turn your watches and clocks backwards one full hour before retiring. Tomorrow, Sunday Sept. 24th., Belleville, like many other centres in Canada, will be back on Standard Time.

POLICE CONTINUE TO PROBE DEATH OF EARL BAKER

At Time Was Under Police Investigation in Connection With Disappearance of Two Missing Poultry Dealers

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—Police continued a probe today into the past of Earl Baker, 37 year old suburban Toronto recluse, killed early Friday during a struggle in a field with a couple he attempted to rob. Baker, at the time of his death, was under police investigation with the disappearance of two Toronto poultry buyers, missing since last June.

Meanwhile, Glenna Stout, 17, Erindale, and Bruce Kivell, 21, of Port Credit, remained under the care of physicians following their death struggle with Baker in a field near Erindale. Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario, said the couple might receive a reward for their "courageous act."

Most Detroit Citizens Hope France and Britain Will Win

Majority of Michigan Congressional Members Follow Roosevelt

PRESS OPPOSED

By NORMAN CAMPBELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Industrial Detroit, across the river from Windsor, is a city divided on repeal of the United States export embargo on war goods.

Windsor watches the fighting-out of the issue in the press and on the platform as it crosses political lines, sets one national group against another and brings self-interest to clash with self-interest and sentiment.

Even now Detroit feels the war. Merchants have noted the decline in week-end shopping expeditions by Western Ontario residents. The discount on Canadian money, especially irritating on small purchases, keeps Canadian money in Canada.

Self-interest tells Detroit that should the Neutrality Act stand unchanged, there is likely to be a considerable movement of capital to Canada to be invested in the production of goods that Detroit factories might otherwise produce.

Naturally Windsor feels that she should be one of the chief beneficiaries of such an influx of capital and Windsor business cannot help but speculate on the local prosperity that may result from production of munitions and other war goods.

Fear Being Drawn Into War

Most vocal opinion in Detroit—not necessarily the most widely-held—fears that should the United States sell war goods to the Allies, she will be dragged into the war and the depression nightmare, still vivid to Detroit, might follow. A majority of the Michigan Congressional Delegation stands ready to follow any Roosevelt lead.

The Detroit daily press is unanimous in opposing revision of the Neutrality Act. Led by the Hearst Times with its news-page editorials, the papers urge the flooding of

Premier Tables Report Showing 10 Million Collected from 30 Estates

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—The special wartime session of the Ontario Legislature—with its mixture of unanimity and acrimonious debate—is history. After co-operating with the Government to give swift passage to 11 war measures, the Conservative opposition provided fireworks in its fighting attack on the redrafted Succession Duty Act.

Premier Hepburn himself provided a sensation late yesterday in the closing moments before prorogation when he tabled a detailed report, showing how the Treasury Department collected additional inheritance tax of more than $10,000,000 from 30 estates.

"THE GREAT MAN"

New York, Sept. 23 (CP)—"The great man." With those three words the New York Herald Tribune (Republican) today sarcastically concentrated its editorial fire on Adolf Hitler in its discussion of Great Britain's blue book on the origins of the second Great War.

"Such vivid bits as the Great Man's remark he would rather have the war now, when he is 50, than when he would be 55 or 60, speak more volumes than 10 telegraph dispatches of the world war period," said the Herald Tribune.

"The Nazis may argue over their 'right' to start a great war, but have hardly troubled to pretend that they were not doing so."

The New York Times (Ind). Editorially analized details given in the blue book and concluded:

"One thing is clear. This time the British left no doubt of their attitude. Publicly and privately they insisted again and again that if the Poles were attacked they would fight. And Hitler, at the very end, even though he plunged ahead, seems at last to have believed them."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

From London and Paris Friday came official declarations that the German submarine campaign has failed. British authorities said new methods, developed since the first Great War were proving effective against the undersea craft.

This recalled one of the most ingenious methods of sea fighting adopted in the last war. The British Q-boats were the answer to the German policy of sinking merchant ships on sight without giving the crew opportunity of rescue. They were old, slow, harmless appearing freighters, fitted with hidden guns. Their appearance lured submarines to approach them at close range only to encounter a devastating burst of fire. The British are not disclosing their new methods, but it is doubtful if they would employ the Q-boats as German submarines are now affording passengers and crew on the vessels they sink an opportunity to escape.

Meanwhile reports of the presence of submarines off the coast of America may be an indication the undersea vessels are seeking safer and more distant waters because of the effectiveness of British and French measures on the other side of the Atlantic.

Several Long Voyages

Several long voyages by German submarines were made the last war. A number of subs travelled from the North Sea to the Dardanelles where they sank British warships. One submarine sank six ships off the coast of the United States, and the first merchant underwater vessel, the Deutschland, crossed the Atlantic twice in 1916 carrying cargo.

So far only one warship has been sunk by submarines in the present conflict, the aircraft carrier Courageous. Shortly after the outbreak of the last Great War three British cruisers, the Aboukir, the Cressy and the Hogue were sent to the bottom by a single submarine in one attack. This was due to the unfamiliarity at that time of British sailors with submarine methods. After the first cruiser was struck the second stood by to attempt the rescue of the crew. So did the third, and all three went to the bottom.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

(By The Canadian Press)

SEPT. 23, 1914—Russians sank German cruiser and two torpedo boats in Baltic. German raider Emden bombarded port of Madras, India. Russia opened new campaign to drive Germans out of Poland.

SEPT. 24, 1914—Germans began attack on French forts along Meuse River. British Indian troops landed at Marseilles to join allied forces.

Enemy Subs Alone Can Never Maintain Adequate Blockade Home Front Assured by Gov't

"Energetic Measures" by Navy and Air Force Proves Subs to be "Very Vulnerable" Report Given by Government

WAR COUNCIL MEETS

"Complete Agreement" on Course to be Followed in War by Great Britain and French Representatives

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—The government assured the Home front that "enemy submarines alone can never maintain an adequate blockade" of the British Isles.

The Ministry of Information declared "energetic measures" taken by the Royal Navy and Air Force had proved the submarine to be "very vulnerable". However, despite establishment of the most powerful submarine-hunting fleet the world has ever seen, Britain is prepared for new losses.

Another communique, issued last night from 10 Downing street followed a meeting of the Supreme War Council of Great Britain and France, announced "complete agreement" on the course to be followed in the war.

Place Not Specified.

The communique, which did not specify where in England the meeting was held, said the council had "considered the question of munitions and supplies, and agreement was reached on procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting the arrangements to be made by the two governments."

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—Life on the home front has settled down into what passes for normality —a strange, hushed normality that became familiar within a few weeks of war's declaration.

After the first few harrying days when everyone was busy and too tired to remember what happened the day before yesterday, Londoners found they had developed new habits to help them through a situation that felt pretty unreal.

Estonian Foreign Minister Enroute to Moscow for Parley States Unofficial Report

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 23—(AP)— Foreign circles attached significance today to an unofficial report that the Estonian Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, was en route to Moscow for conferences with the Russian Government.

The position of the Baltic States in the light of the Russian and German invasion of Poland has been the subject of much speculation in Moscow diplomatic circles, with emphasis on the question of possible border revisions. Estonia was a part of Russia before the last war.

Selter's reported trip was said to be ostensibly for completion of negotiations for a commercial treaty with Russia. The little nation is strategically situated on the Gulf of Finland, from which Soviet ships go out into the Baltic.

Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu also is en route to Moscow for talks with Government officials. Tass (Russian news agency), in accounts of an interview with Saracoglu before he left Istanbul, quoted him as saying the trip would result in strengthening the friendship of the two countries.

(Saracoglu reached Odessa yesterday en route to Moscow, where he was expected to spend about 10 days).

Moscow newspapers, announcing the capture of the Polish fortress of Brest-Litovsk, claimed the Red Army took 120,000 prisoners in four

FOOD RATIONING STILL MORE RIGID WITHIN GERMANY

Germans Take Order as Signs That They Face Long Conflict

Only Children Will be Allowed to Drink Unskimmed Milk After Monday in Germany

By ROBT. SCHILDBACH
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Berlin, Sept. 23 (AP)—Orders for more rigid food rationing, similar to those in force during the last war, were regarded by many Germans today as a sign that they faced a long conflict.

The new decrees, coming at the moment of victory in Poland, caused widespread disappointment among those who had hoped for a quick end to the war and set up new food problems for Hausfraus. The nation heard claims, however, that foreign sources of good and other materials remained open.

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—The British patrol boat Kittiwake struck a mine in the English Channel Sept. 20 and was damaged, it was disclosed today. Five of the crew were believed dead and two inpured.

Censorship Regulations Now in Effect Made Public

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—Censorship regulations in effect under the War Measures Act were made public here Friday. On Canada's declaration that a state of war existed with Germany, general directions were issued to the press and radio stations by censorship authorities. These general directions have now been followed by detailed instructions which have full authority of law.

Walter S. Thompson, Director of censorship, said the regulations were drawn up as a result of conferences between departments of the public service.

"They will be amended from time to time as experience in their operation suggests, as it is realized that no set of regulations can deal fully with all the problems which will arise," said Mr. Thompson.

"We know that we will have the co-operation of all concerned, and in turn the censors will give decisions promptly and render a broad advisory service for the guidance of the public.

"The co-operation of the municipal and other authorities who own halls where public meetings are held will be particularly appreciated in order the regulations may be carried out."

Regulations Voluminous

The regulations, which are voluminous, generally prohibit the making or publication of:

Any adverse or unfavorable statement, report or opinion likely to prejudice the defence of Canada or the efficient prosecution of the war.

Any report or statement likely to cause disaffection to his Majesty or to prejudice his Majesty's relations with foreign powers.

Any report or statement likely to prejudice the recruiting, training, discipline or administration of the forces.

Any information with respect to the movements, numbers, etc., of any of the armed forces of the Allies, or relating to the storage of war material, fortifications, etc.

Any leaflet or pamphlet relating to the war or to the making of peace which does not carry the name and address of author and printer.

All copies of any newspaper, tract, periodical, book, circular or other printed publication contravening the regulations may be seized and radio station licences may be suspended or cancelled.

Other penalties by way of fine and imprisonment are provided for infraction of the regulations, which apply not only to newspapers and radio stations, but to those who speak at public meetings.

2-CENT FLUCTUATION PERMITTED IN EGGS, BUTTER AND CHEESE

Montreal, Sept. 23—(CP)— A war regulation limiting to a one-cent range the daily fluctuation in prices for butter, cheese and eggs on Canadian commodity exchange was widened today to permit fluctuations of as much as two cents.

An announcement said the "emergency situation" necessitating the original ruling, which became effective shortly after the outbreak of hostilities, had ceased to exist.

HUNDREDS KILLED IN 'QUAKE

Istanbul, Sept. 23 (AP) — More than 200 persons were reported killed today in an earthquake in the Smyrna region. Some 1,000 buildings were said to have caved in.

RESUME RELATIONS

Budapest, Sept. 23 (CP)—Resumption of diplomatic relations between Hungary and the Soviet Union, broken off 20 years ago, was officially announced today. The announcement came after Red army troops reached the Hungarian border at Woronienka.

City and District News

FIFTY-EIGHT GUARDS NOW IN DISTRICT

Provincial Police today revealed that a total of 58 armed guards had been placed through that Department guarding government canals, hydro buildings and other strategic public buildings through this area. These figures do not include guards on railway property and bridges or those employed by the municipalities of the district. "The guards placed under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Police have no connection with private guards that have been employed by oil companies, railways or private concerns, such as the Canada Cement Company and other industrial plants, who have employed their own personal guards," revealed Inspector Frank Gardner of the O.P.P. today.

MAN APPREHENDED ON CHARGE OF FRAUD

Arrested by Kingston police aboard a train he had taken out of Belleville only a few minutes previously a man who gave his name as A. W. McKenzie was apprehended on a charge of obtaining wearing apparel and money by false pretenses. The warrant for the accused man was issued in Belleville and the man was later returned to this city and today remanded in custody on a charge of fraud.

Police stated today that the man who gave his name as A. W. McKenzie had purchased wearing apparel from a local haberdashery, tendering a cheque in payment and later receiving cash in excess to the purchase made. Later it was alleged that the cheque was worthless and Belleville police informed the Kingston police to apprehend the man, after it had been learned he boarded an east bound train. The man was remanded in custody until Monday's police court.

ASSESSMENT BILLS NOW BEING ISSUED

"Belleville's new assessment bills are now being issued and as far as I can ascertain the new assessment is meeting with general popular favor," his Worship Mayor Bone announced this morning.

"There is no intention on the part of the city to raise the general assessment. On the contrary we hope to have the aggregate assessment remain as it was previous to the re-assessment, which was completed most scientifically," added Mr. Bone, as he pointed out that the city's new assessment taxation was on as fair a basis as could be arrived at.

"Apparently the main street merchants seem to think the business blocks on Front Street, between Victoria Ave. and Bridge Street, are the most valuable business sites and therefore these business houses will have to be assessed accordingly," concluded Mayor Bone in a statement from his office today.

VETERAN FINDS KNAPSACK THAT HE TURNED IN IN '18

Alfred Strickland, carpenter working at the Picton Armouries yesterday noted a familiar name on a knapsack atop a pile of equipment delivered at Picton from Kingston for outfitting recruits of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The knapsack carried the name of "Sergeant Alfred Strickland, 21st. Battalion," and was apparently the same piece of equipment turned in by Strickland when he was demobilized in 1918.

Youthful Rider Escapes Injuries When Thrown From Horse at Fair

Hurled approximately twenty feet into the air when the horse he was riding in the farmers' running race at Tweed Fair yesterday, tripped and fell while coming into the home stretch, youthful Jack Beatty, son of Thomas Beatty, Tweed, suffered slight shock and minor bruises.

The youngster was fortunate in the fact that when the horse turned a complete somersault, it threw him clear of its hoofs as it had crashed heavily to the ground. The horse, apparently uninjured got up on its feet and trotted away thru' a crowd of milling spectators.

CAR ROLLS OVER, HURTLES FENCE

Vincent Dambrosio, Toronto Charged Under H.T.A. and Admitted to Bail

After side-swiping another motor car, an automobile driven by Vincent Dambrosio, Toronto, rolled over into the ditch and hurtled a wire fence coming to rest in a field at Bradshaw's curve, eight miles east of Belleville on Highway No. 2 shortly after 10.30 p.m. last evening. The automobile was completely ruined, but with the exception of the driver, all occupants miraculously escaped uninjured police revealed. Dambrosio sustained head and neck injuries and was attended by Dr. Eckhart of Shannonville.

Dambrosio was proceeding westerly around the curve when, it is alleged by police, his automobile sideswiped an eastbound motor car driven by Fred Tustin, also of Toronto. According to measurements taken by H.T.O. Ervine, Dambrosio's car proceeded along the shoulder of the road for a distance of 50 feet, before rolling over into the ditch for a distance of an additional 45 feet, during which the car bounced over a wire fence without damaging the fence.

The Dambrosio car was completely wrecked. Charges are pending against Dambrosio, who was admitted to bail last night.

PRICES ARE FIRM ON SATUR. MARKET

Eggs 'A' Selects at 35c., Butter Steady at 30 Cents

FEW CHICKENS

Despite the fact that the offering of farm and garden produce on the city market was below the usual quantity, price levels showed little or no change over quotations of last Saturday. There was a brisk demand for eggs with supplies being lighter than a week ago. "A" selects remained steady at 36c the dozen, mediums were firm at 33c, and pullets at 29c the dozen.

Farmers' butter showed no change, two pound rolls selling at 60c each and singles at 30c.

The chicken offering was well below that of a week ago with prices showing a tendency to rise. Broilers were scarce, with a few choice birds offered at 90c the bird. Plump, weighty April birds were sold as high as $1.50 each with older chickens offered at graduating prices. Fowl was quoted from 60c each. A few ducks were available today at $1. each.

Potatoes were plentiful with prices ranging from $1.10 per bushel and 30c the peck. A survey of vendors revealed that thus far no serious attacks of the blight that ravaged crops last year, has been noticed.

Vegetables in Bushel Lots

Vegetables are gradually getting away from the bunch-lot sales and appeared this morning in bushel and basket lots. Pickling beets were quoted at 25c the six-quart basket, onions at 25c the peck, carrots at the same price. Chinese lettuce, vegetable marrow and individual squash were offered at 5c and 10c each. Cabbage and cauliflower, the latter of choice quality, were quoted at from 5c the head.

Homegrown tomatoes were steady with bushel lots quoted at 55c and 60c each. Basket lots were offered at 20c and 25c according to quality.

Sweet corn was offered at 15c and 20c the dozen for good stock. A few large mushrooms were available at 15c the berry box. Brisk demand soon disposed of the stocks offered.

"Select" peaches, imported stock were offered at 30c the basket, with No. 1's selling at 25c each. Inferior qualities moved well at 20c the 6-quart basket. Melons were down in quantity, but prices remained stable. Watermelon and canteloupe sold at from 5c each.

Choice Flemish Beauty pears were offered at 30c the half-peck, with the popular Bartlett variety selling at 5c less. MacIntosh Red apples, "orphans of the storm," were offered at $1. the hamper. Wolf Rivers sold at 20c the basket with other cooking varieties offered at the same level.

Whitefish appeared after a week's absence and sold at 20c the pound. A few mudcats were available at 2 lbs. for 25c.

MOST DETROIT

Washington with protests.

But no matter what the editorial pages say, no matter what the majority of letters to the editors say, it may be safely concluded that the sentiment of 95 per cent of Detroit's people, excluding those from stock of the allies foes, is with Britain and France. But along with this sentiment goes conviction in many cases that the United States should keep out of war.

The Times has distributed thousands of shield-shaped emblems for automobiles. The emblems say "Keep America out of war".

Both Senators Agree.

The Michigan Congressmen are divided, but with a considerable majority of the seventeen House members and two Senators ready to follow the President.

Senator Arthur Vandenburg, Republican, hailed as a possible Presidential candidate, is on record with a warning that should Russia join Germany, the United States had better prepare to meet the dictators after a hypothetical defeat of Britain and France. But he opposes any aid to the allies through permitting of arms exports. Senator Prentiss, Democrat, Brown, will follow the President's lead.

In a recent survey only four of the seventeen Michigan House members could be found to state their opposition to Roosevelt. This was the sign for a renewed Hearst drive to have the embargo stay.

Anti-war demonstrations have been frequent in Detroit. Congressman John Lesinski, who had announced he would follow where Roosevelt led, staged one outside his home. Anti-Roosevelt signs were carried by the demonstrators.

Perhaps the quieter opinion of many Detroiters is best expressed in a letter to the editor of the Free Press. It said:

"Ninety-five per cent of us Americans want to see Hitler defeated. By all means repeal the arms embargo act. If we must stay neutral, at least place no obstacles in the way of helping our former allies win the struggle for everything that is right and decent."

ALLEGED CAR THIEF ACCUSED OF THEFT

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP) — Kenneth Mitchell, 29, of Peterborough, Ont., was arrested by police yesterday and charged he was the driver of an automobile stolen from Stouffville. Cyril Hutt, alleged to be the other occupant of the car, was arrested Wednesday.

Police said they chased the car Wednesday from Marmora to Peterborough along Highway No. 7 at a speed of from 80 to 90 miles an hour while firing several shots at the fugitives.

Mitchell was arrested near Lakefield when he aroused the suspicions of a farmer from whom he offered to buy a meal. Police were called.

Voluntary Registration of Belleville Women for National Service Work To Start Here in Near Future

With Ontario women in various centres of the province through their organized societies including the Women's Institutes in the rural areas, and Red Cross, I.O.D.E., church and other societies registering large numbers for voluntary service, registration of women in the Belleville area will start in the near future, according to a communication from National Registration headquarters received today by Mrs. Archibald Cameron and Mrs. Roger Porter.

Registration machinery is already in motion, and leaders of the various women's organizations of the city will be called to attend a special meeting next Friday night. Mrs. Porter has been appointed Chairman of the local committee with Mrs. Cameron as her vice-chairman. Groundwork of preliminary organization will be laid at an impromptu meeting Saturday afternoon.

Next week, it is intimated, leaders of women's organizations will meet to arrange for telephones. Registration booths and many other incidentals necessary for the complete registration of volunteer lady workers for national service.

In other centres, booths have been besieged with women eager to indicate in what capacities they can be of greatest value to the state in time of national emergency. In Toronto alone more than 12,000 have completed the questionnaires and filed them so that, should the need arise, they may be called upon to prove their citizenship by service.

Questionnaires to Fill Out

That the women of Belleville will respond to the call in large numbers is indicated by the numerous requests that have been received by women's organizations with regard to national registration. By the end of the month or shortly after it is anticipated that Belleville will have fallen in line with other communities in organizing her womanpower in this time of war. Every woman in Belleville, who can contribute time or talents for the welfare of the nation and humanity should file a questionnaire which besides indicating the position of the signatory will give her an opportunity of expressing her desire to train for some branch of service in which she is not now skilled, but would like to know.

Full details of the local registration will appear in the Ontario Intelligencer next week.

U. S. Captain Describes Sinking of U-Boat

New York, Sept. 23 (CP)—Captain Frederick Pickering of the United States steamship Steel Mariner said when his ship arrived here today that on Sept. 11 he saw a British destroyer sink a camouflaged German U-boat by gunfire off the south of England.

Captain Pickering, a lieutenant in the British Navy in the last war, said the ship, chartered by the United States Maritime Commission, left Bristol Sept. 11 with forty-three passengers.

"On the same afternoon, between Tuscan and Scilly Islands, I saw a strange-looking craft going across the bow.

"I looked through the glass and saw a submarine rigged out like a fishing boat. There were rigs fore and aft, but you could see the periscope. It didn't deceive any one.

"In my opinion, the sub was disabled and was unable to submerge and that is why it was camouflaged.

"We watched it moving slowly along, about five miles away, and then we sighted a British destroyer.

"There were flashes of gunfire. The firing lasted ten minutes. The destroyer sank the U-boat, and that was that."

Brilliant Weather is Setting For Successful Tweed Fair

Twenty-Five Hundred View Best Exhibition in Years. Livestock Entries Large

THRILLING RACES

Baby Show, Potato Pegging, Bands, Races, Exhibits, Round Out Fine Entertainment

Tweed, Ont. (Staff)—In direct contrast to the sullen rain-soaked skies that forced a postponement last year, brilliant sunshine and springlike weather provided a perfect seeting for the current edition of the Tweed Agricultural Society's Autumn Exhibition, yesterday.

Upwards of twenty-five hundred representatives of Hastings and neighboring counties thronged the spacious grounds to witness a fair, that according to the consensus of opinion of directors and public alike outshone its predecessors of a number of years.

"The weatherman gave us a 'break' this year, instead of frowning on us," President Charles Bush, Reeve of Hungerford Township, stated between events. "The entry list in all phases of the exhibition is much better than those of the past few years, while the calibre of livestock, produce, entertainment and, in fact the entire fair, is an indication of the increasing enthusiasm and interest of the farmers of the district, and the business men of Tweed in their own exhibition."

It was a typical Tweed Fair with all the glamor, clamor, noise and color, and the free wholehearted camaraderie of residents of the central and northern parts of this county, a heritage bequeathed them by sturdy pioneer forebears, who drove oxcarts and wagons along unbeaten paths to inaugurate the original exhibition.

Reminder of War

The only reminder present of the grim struggle that is taking place overseas were the khaki of a few officers and men of an infantry regiment, the gay kilts of a highland private, the famous red and white insignia of the red-cross nurse, worn by members of the Tweed Branch of the Red Cross Society, and the wellknown uniform of the Salvation Army. Both organizations sold tags to a generously responding public. During the afternoon, Mr. W. E. Tummon, ex. M.P., launched an appeal from the grandstand to patrons to patronise both organizations.

There was plenty of "everything" as the inimitable Tommy Mason, colorful master of ceremonies puts it. From the time the first trickle of automobiles, that grew to a steady stream as the afternoon progressed, entered the gates until the waning rays of the setting sun sent reluctant patrons homeward, there was not a dull moment.

Foresighted directors and executives had arranged a program that went forward without a hitch. There was a midway where you could drink sweet cider or nibble ice cream, gobble tasty hamburgers, throw funny-looking balls at wooden dolls, have your fortune told, toss for baskets of peaches, or do a hundred and one other things.

In the crowded grandstand, the crack Tweed Citizens Band, prizewinners for two consecutive years at the Belleville Band Tattoo, dispensed the melodies for which they are famous. In the track, spirited standard-bred horses provided thrilling races that had the spectators standing in the aisles with hairbreadth finishes.

Variable Program

Proud carriage horses, in pairs and single pranced along the track in full view of the grandstand. On a raised platform old and young dancers step-danced in competition. Those tunes that grandma and grandpa danced to in the good old days were revived in all their melodic splendure by a number of oldtime fiddlers. In a tent, chubby-faced babies, the pride of Hastings County parents, vied for honors in a baby show. Galloping steeds of rural and urban "jockeys" dashed around the track in the farmers' running race. Two riders, in a "Bengal Lancer" reproduction of tent-pegging, only potatoes were used instead of pegs, thrilled the gathering with a novel performance.

Livestock Entries Good

In the livestock pens, the cream of bovine aristocracy was on parade. Shorthorns and Durhams of all ages attracted a large crowd of rural and urban residents alike. Heavy draft horses, Percheron, Clydesdale and other prominent breeds also showed a higher list than last year. Sheep and swine exhibits were excellent with the splendid entries of members of the Tweed Boys' Swine Club, giving a fine demonstration of what scientific care in breeding and raising can produce. In the poultry pens, feathered beauties of all breeds of chickens, turkeys and geese gave ample evidence of the rapid strides made by country fanciers in the propagation of the better class of birds.

Exhibition Building

Evidence of the capabilities of the rural and urban ladies of the district was seen in the splendid exhibits shown in the Exhibition Building. Here was shown excellent samples of ladies' handiwork, quilts, lace work dresses and other garments and other things dear to the feminine heart. Beautiful flowers, the product of local and district gardens, tastefully arrayed provided a colorful centre piece for this exhibit. Grains and seeds, preserves, fruits, from a huge pumpkin weighing one hundred and ten pounds to a diminutive crab apple, vied with the colorful MacIntosh Red and other varieties of fall apples. Home cooking, of all sorts occupied its own particular space while the clever work of Tweed school children was evidenced in an exhibit of school drawings, posters etc. Hastings County's own product, cheese, was represented by outstanding specimens, some fifteen in all.

Grand Parade

One of the most colorful events of the fair was the Grand Parade of livestock and horses that took place on the track shortly after four o'clock. Headed by a magnificent Ayrshire bull, the various breeds of cattle and horses slowly filed by the applauding grandstand, to the music of the Tweed Band. Proud carriage and draft horse, ponies, and other prize animals made up a parade that was evidence itself of the splendid specimens of stock for which Hastings County farmers are rapidly becoming famous.

Thrilling Races

Featured by some of the closest finishes seen here in years, with scarcely two feet separating first and second horses in some of the heats, the speed events proved to be one of the outstanding attractions of the fair. Starter George Tice of Belleville, had little difficulty in getting the horses away, and this in conjunction with a fast track, saw some of the best racing that has taken place in the district this year. "Peter J", James Sutherland's Peterboro crack pacer, took the .22 class in three straight heats but not before he had to go all out to nose out "Infringer Grattan."

In the free-for-all 'Ginger Direct' took the first heat, but dropped the next two by inches to "Richard Hal."

In the farmers' running race C. Kimmett's "Judy", showed a clean pair of heels to three other entries although she was pushed to the wire by "Bell-Coat" ridden by A. Shepherd.

The results:

P. E. County Council Votes $700 to H. and P. E. Regiment

Prince Edward County Council concluded their September session Thursday with much routine business being transacted. Lieut.-Col. Sherman Young, O. C., of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and Capt. Arthur Norrington, Regimental Adjutant, addressed council, pointing out that there was no provision covering costs of recruiting and asking for a grant for same. It was stated that there was the expense of recruits coming here and having to stay overnight, cost of officers' travelling to other areas and travelling expenses of would be recruits. The Council showed their sympathy with the Regiment by voting the sum of $700 for this purpose.

Council declared Thursday, September 28, as a public holiday in Prince Edward County in order that all school students may take part in the parade to Picton Fair on that day.

The sum of $100 was voted to the residents of Huff's Island to assist them in repairing the bridge there, and $39 was voted Athol Township to cover cost of cleaning the shed from Outlet Beach this summer.

Honor Two Officers

County Council tendered a banquet at the Royal Hotel to two members of the council who are active with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, namely Major Howard Reid, reeve of North Marysburgh Township and Capt. Lance Nethery, Deputy Reeve of Picton. They were presented with canes, with Reeve E. B. Purtelle of Bloomfield and Reeve H. S. Colliver of Picton doing the honors. Other officers of the Regiment were guests on this occasion and all speakers were warm in their praise of the local officers and Regiment. Lieut.-Col. Sherman Young, O.C., stated that to date more than 450 had endeavored to join the regiment in Hastings and Prince Edward which he considered a splendid response.

Car Turns Over Injuring Two

When their automobile overturned on the East Lake Road, Thursday, Mary McKibbon and Theo Torch were injured. Miss McKibbon suffered severe injuries to the back while Miss Torch suffered a cut lip and abrasions. When their car overturned at the side of the road, from some unknown reason, the two girls were thrown through the top of the car into a field thirty feet distant. Dr. Leavens was called and an ambulance rushed them to the County Hospital here. County Constable James Lovelace investigated.

Local recruits are smiling these days for putties have been banished. Word was received Wednesday that they need not be worn in future and now the men are comfortable in slacks. Much time is also saved in dressing.

Motor Cycle Escort

A motor cycle escort from Belleville is being arranged when Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, pays his visit to Picton Fair next Friday, Sept. 29.

This week work of tearing down the poultry building at the fair grounds and converting it into a horse shed was completed and it will be used for the first time at the fair. County Council yesterday sanctioned having the interior of the main show building redecorated and the work begins today.

Dr. G. W. Morden of Napanee was in town for several days this week.

Cherry Valley was the scene of a series of school fairs yesterday when pupils of Athol Township competed. The fairs will wind up with that held today. They have all been a splendid success with large attendances and fine exhibits.

County Council discussed the weed menace and as a result are petitioning the government that they particularize all farmers asking that each have the first ten bushels threshed used for milling purposes. In this way it is felt that many weed seeds would be kept separate from the grain. It was felt the threshing machines carried many weed seeds from farm to farm.

THE SPIRIT OF WARSAW

The spirit of the defenders of Warsaw is the spirit of Poland. Many may wonder why they fight on when their staff and government are gone and the cause is tragic. But they are Poland and will fight on until the last.

They have written an imperishable story of heroic people fighting for the capital of their country and for their homes against the Germanic machine.

Polish history is full of glorious battles. On even basis, they could have told a greater story but their forces have not been so mechanized as the German. Never will their glory fade in the grim and grisly records now being written.

U. S. NEUTRALITY

The United States Congress is facing a decision of momentous importance, the question of repeal of the Neutrality Act so that it would permit the "cash and carry" plan for the sale of war materials and supplies to all belligerents. As the New York Times says, Congress has been "forced with the necessity of making a choice certain to affect the course of our people."

The tone of the newspapers of the United States indicates that the majority of them favor repeal of the measure. They accept the attitude of the President that the present neutrality embargo constitutes a menace to the peace of the United States which, he said, all are endeavoring to preserve. Mr. Roosevelt would substitute provision for sale of arms to belligerents of all nations, provided they pay cash and take the arms away in their own ships. Mr. Roosevelt said that this would be in accord with international law.

The neutrality act was provided for an express purpose in 1935 as a temporary measure and it was extended to May 1937 with the cash and carry clause added. This expired in May of this year, and the ban on the sale of arms was left on the books. It is claimed that his plan would remove a great many of the dangers of entanglements and threats against U. S. security It has been said that this would react to the benefit of Britain and France who will have control of the seas while German ships dare not venture out.

The Montreal Gazette says that "the privileges and opportunities would be the same for all nations and it is for Congress to ponder the truth that in the ability of France and Britain to defend themselves against attack, lies the United States' best hope of escaping involvement in war."

Party lines, it seems, in the United States have almost disappeared over the issue and there is assurance after a thorough debate the ban on the shipment of armaments will likely be lifted.

THE SALVATION ARMY

Canadians take a peculiar interest in the new Salvation Army General, George L. Carpenter. The choice of the Army Council, has been a resident of Canada and Commissioner for the Dominion since 1937. He is a native of Australia, 67 years of age, has had forty-seven years in the work of the Army.

The Commissioner is a man of high quality of mind and heart and he makes a special emphasis on personal living and evangelism. He lives at present in Montreal. He has had service in England as well as in Australia.

The leader ,who is to succeed General Evangeline Booth who retires because of the age limit, has had wide experience throughout the world. He falls heir in the democracy of the Army to one of the great spiritual forces of the world, the Salvation Army, whose work is known to everyone. It has a history of over seventy years beginning in a modest way in London in the sixties and taking its militant name and adoptiing a militant organization in 1878. It has carried out the mission of Christ in a world where there are sin, cruelty, poverty, suffering, unrest, anxiety for peace with God and man and has produced miracles in the lives of hundreds of thousands. A vast organization it stands today ,with establishments in 97 countries and colonies using 104 languages, 40,000 officer, cadets and employees, more than a fifth of a million bandsmen, songsters, and unpaid cadets, thousands of homes and hostels, centres, shelters, free and cheap good depots, industrial schools, slum posts and many other worthy institutions.

The new General who will shortly take over the command of this vast organization, whose first thought is rescue from sin suffering and unsocial conditions has been well trained. He has proven himself on many fields of battle with the enemies of the human soul, he is also practical and a keen organizer.

Today the name Salvation Army stands in brighter glow than ever.

Belleville has a fine corps of the Army and a noble and kindly commandant. The city has paid a tribute to this organization which has served her for over half a century, recently, when citizens made gifts to help build a new citadel which will make more effective the tireless and wholehearted work of the Army, its officers and members.

BANK BANDITS ARE TAKING IN TOO MUCH TERRITORY when they venture into the mineral belt of Northern Ontario where men are men and women are few and far between. Recently two bold bank bandits sought to open up new territory and paddled up the Montreal River to the settlement of Matachewan, where a bank branch had recently been located. They held up the bank and scooped up money to the amount of $8400. Then their troubles began for their planned getaway backfired. They were followed by a barrage of bullets and the bandit with the money was the first casualty. Both bandits returned the fire but without effect. Indian trackers took up the trail of the bandit who escaped and he was soon captured. Bank bandits who are wise make sure that their getaway is reasonably sure, but they should know that Northern Ontario residents as a rule know how to shoot straight and true with rifle or revolver, and the country is just full of good trackers, which makes a getaway exceedingly precarious.

The Writ of Habeas Corpus

In the midst of a turbulent and disordered world it is soothing to read of the calm and deliberate discussions in London during the past two days over Habeas Corpus. This ancient remedy was actually invoked on behalf of the four Tientsin suspects but, apart altogether from that particular and most controversial question, it has a wider and more general interest at the present time. That "great and efficacious writ" as Blackstone called it, is one of the principal supports of our liberties; and it is impressive to be reminded of them and of the machinery by which they are recured at a time when constitutional liberty is largely scouted and scorned abroad. Habeas Corpus—possibly because there is a faint atmosphere of ridicule about the tag—is one of the portents of our Constitution most familiar to the average citizen. Yet the suggestion may be hazarded that, apart from industrious students, learned professors, and a handful of the gentry of the long robe, few people could give a coherent account of it, or explain why it is elevated with Magna Carta and the Bill of Rights to a position of such lofty eminence in our Constitution.

The full title of the writ is Habeas Corpus ad Subjiciendum; but in spite of its title the correct answer from the custodian of a prisoner to whom it is addressed is not to bring the body for judgment but to explain on what grounds the person is held a prisoner and—if they are judged inadequate by the court—to set him at liberty forthwith. In other words, it is the machinery for putting into force that freedom from arbitrary arrest which has been enjoyed by Englishmen since the dim, shadowy beginnings of English law, and was embodied in the famous section 29 of Magna Carta, which laid down that "no free man shall be taken or imprisoned unless by the lawful judgment of his peers or "the law of the land". It is often erroneously imagined that Habeas Corpus only dates from the Habeas Corpus Act of Charles II's reign. In fact the Habeas Corpus writ was in common use throughout the Middle Ages, and the Act merely regulated the machinery for its use. One provision of that Act—of particular interest in view of the proceedings yesterday—was that a single Judge of the King's Bench could issue the writ during vacation, on which point there had previously been some doubt. The writ is a common law remedy, though its use is now in certain respects regulated by statute. Perhaps the most famous occasion on which the writ was ever employed was in the eighteenth century, when Lord Mansfield decided that it was no answer to the retention of a slave in England to plead his slavery, and concluded a famous judgment with the ringing phrase, "And therefore the black must be discharged."

The importance of Habeas Corpus in the English Constitution illustrates at once its difference from foreign Constitutions and its strength over them. Many foreign Constitutions—even the oldest and the most free—depend on a written statement and definition of the rights to be enjoyed under them. In this country—perhaps because the Englishman is practical and shrewd—little reliance has been placed on any written definitions of his rights. It has rather been the custom of this nation to provide for its citizens a remedy for enforcing their particular rights—and of these remedies the most impressive is certainly Habeas Corpus.—London Times.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Pain Under the Breast Bone

A middle-aged woman complained of pain under the breast bone. When swallowing food she felt that when the food reached this certain spot in the oesophagus (the tube carrying the food from throat down to stomach) it seemed to "stick" there and cause the pain. Her physician felt that the pain could not be caused by a growth (cancer) as there was no loss of weight or other symptoms. On the other hand, although in the region of the heart, there were no signs of heart disease—shortness of breath, swollen feet.

To ease the patient's mind about cancer, she was examined by the fluoroscope (Xray) and a mirror, and buttermilk containing barium sulphate was given her to swallow. The barium sulphate makes a "black" picture as it is observed by the fluroscope and as it passed the painful or "blocked" spot in the oesophagus there was no blocking, but an occasional spasm occurred. It was this occasional spasm that gave the feeling that there was a growth blocking the oesophagus. As these spasms are usually caused by nervousness and the patient's fear of cancer was removed, the painful and blocking symptoms disappeared.

In speaking about pain under the breast bone being due sometimes to disturbances of the oesophagus, Dr. W. Ballinger, Washington, D.C., in Annals of Internal Medicine ,says

"The oesophagus is a rather silent uncomplaining organ, and yet it is often the offender in pain beneath the breast bone. There may be pockets, inflammation, growths, and simple spasm which occurs regularly and each may produce pain. The distress may be only a feeling of pressure, or it may be more severe as a boring or steady pain. It is always aggravated by swallowing. Ulcer, growth, or other organic disease results in discomfort which is increased by eating coarse food or a large piece of food. Warm soft foods are soothing and relieve discomfort. Iced drinks may cause discomfort if spasm is present. The patient describes a feeling as though food stopped at a certain point and several swallows are necessary to move it through."

The point here is that pain or distress under breast bone, if steady and aggravated by food, may be due to a simple spasm or other disturbance of the oesophagus and not to heart disease.

The British Knew

Weeks before hostilities broke out the British Intelligence Service submitted a report on Hitler's strategy in the light of recent days, it is of high interest:

"Germany (it was decided) would throw almost the whole of her forces against Poland. In the West she would at first be wholly on the defensive and would trust that France (beginning the struggle warily) would be on the defensive too, and that the British Army would only be settling into position on the North-Western front. Thus in the German view, each side would at first be waiting and watching in the West. Italy, meanwhile would be kept neutral: (a) In order to keep the Mediterranean open for supplies of food and petrol to Germany; (b) in order to prevent attack by land and a British attack by sea—a collapse that would require Germany to divert troops either to rebuild Italian defences or to man the Brenner. If all went according to plan, and if Germany could keep most of her divisions free to invade Poland, Hitler planned for a Polish collapse within three weeks. Then, before the war in his view got going in the West he would make a peace offer in the hopes that the British appeasers would say to Poland as they said of Czecho-Slovakia last year, 'No amount of fighting can now prevent her from being overrun; let us come to terms."

It has been revealed many times, and necessitated the meeting between Chamberlain and Daladier to set rumor at rest in Europe, that Hitler's dream has actually been a swift march over Poland and then a patched-up peace with Britain and France, reluctant to continue a major conflict. The German people have been fed with that propaganda, but disillusion is just around the corner. There is a storm about to break on the Western Front. If Poland is conquered on schedule, it will be interesting to watch Nazi moves in diplomacy. But the expected easy peace will not be the dividend from the Polish adventure.—St. Catharines Standard.

We were eating breakfist and pop said to ma, you're not yourself this morning my deer, I know you've been hoping I wouldn't notice it, but you cant fool me. Perhaps you should of stayed in bed. Shall I ask Dr. Rorer to stop around? he said.

Why Willyum of all things such an idea, I haven't felt better in weeks, what a notion, ma said. I haven't even the suspicion of a headake, of all times to make such a remark, she said, and pop said, I'm afrid you cant hide it, I know you too well, you must feel terrible.

Now Willyum you just stop that, I cant understand what ever gave you such a thought, but if it's just pure intuition you'd better leave intuition to the women where it belongs, ma said, and pop said, Intuition has nothing to do with it, I know an unmistakeable simptom when I see one.

But I tell you I'm perfectly all right, so that's enough for land sakes, stop harping on it, ma said. What simptom are you talking about? she said, and pop said, O well, let's drop it, if I'm mistaken I'm mistaken.

But Willyum I demand to know, not that there's anything to know, ma said, and pop said, Well I'll tell you, I just took a 3rd cup of coffee and you never even noticed it, that could never of hapened if you had your health.

Willyum Potts now you're just playing with fire, you know very well that even 2 cups are past the safety zone with that hartburn of yours, why cant you use a little sense and discretion of your own at your age? ma said, and pop said, Now that's better, by gollies I'm relieved, I believe you're all right at that.

And he folded up his paper and left for his office laughing as if he felt even better than ma.

Youth is Not Always Blind

"We have no quarrel with the German people. But there can be no peace until Nazism and its cruelty and persecution has been banished from the earth."

This statement by Right Hon. Anthony Eden, Secretary of States for Dominion Affairs, is important, for it affirms what is now a settled policy on the part of the British government, but it does more. It indicates that Mr. Eden was right when he asserted the same view a year ago, when he had to leave the government of which he was then so great an ornament, because the Prime Minister was unconvinced of his correctness.

It is rarely in public life that a prime minister is found to be so magnanimous that he can not only acknowledge a mistake, but forgive the man he wronged, and not only forgive him, but reinstate him in his confidence. This must be credited to Mr. Chamberlain whenever his action a year ago is considered. Had Mr. Eden's view been accepted and Herr Hitler taken at his true value, the tragedy of Czecho-Slovakia might not have been enacted, and the present invasion of Poland in all probability never have been attempted. The tremendous fortifications which the Czechs had erected against treacherous German foes, whom they knew so well to be untrustworthy, defences which were yielded without a blow to the dastardly Hitler whose promises are as windblown dust, would now have stood as a barrier to his calculated aggression.

And once more all this marks another virtue in Mr. Eden, that he has never once suggested that he had been wiser than his premier. These two men stand out for their public virtue in this remarkable situation, because they can still respect each other, still co-operate for the public weal, still give each other credit for the disinterested devotion to the supreme service of the nation.

Had Mr. Eden been an older man, a contemporary of Mr. Chamberlain, no doubt his views would have received more attention. But the incident may help to remind others that youth is not necessarily blind nor age all-seeing. The outcome of last year's policies are beyond the mind of man to estimate, but the past is past and the present duty is the prosaic one of getting on with the job.—Hamilton Spectator.

WARTIME SESSION

Instances of Fraud

The report gave instances of how the Province was defrauded, disclosed the names of the estates involved. Premier Hepburn used it as his clinching argument as to why Succession Duty legislation should be tightened to settle "once and for all" the Province's right to investigate estates where fraud is suspected.

Conservative Leader George Drew battled every inch of the way against what he termed a "vicious" measure and which he maintained violates British principles of democracy and civil liberty. Under his opposition, the Act was amended slightly, but its chief purpose in giving absolute rights of investigation to Provincial officials was unchanged as it was carried by the Government majority.

Wartime Legislation Passed

The session opened Tuesday amid professions from all sides of the House of a readiness to co-operate in Canada's struggle against Hitlerism. Col. Drew gave effect to his words by helping facilitate Premier Hepburn's war legislation.

The chief measures give the Hydro-Electric Power Commission control over private as well as public power throughout the Province; privileges to enlisted men; power to the municipalities to license public meetings and parades and thus hit subversive activities; power to a committee to gear Ontario industry and agriculture to the Allies' needs; and protection to Hydro-Electric plants and other public buildings.

Conservative co-operation was demonstrated in the matter of power plant guards when Col. Drew introduced a resolution demanding that the Dominion Defence Department assume responsibility for the protection of all plants, public works and other services.

He did not press the matter when Premier Hepburn announced a committee will go to Ottawa shortly to discuss this and other matters. Col. Drew said he himself would go along.

Leave of Absence

The Premier announced that Provincial civil servants who enlist will be given temporary leave of absence and will be able to regain their jobs after demobilization. The Province also will pay their superannuation contributions while they are away.

The special session was called especially to redraft the Succession Duty Act and its acrimonious debate was threaded through the four-day meeting. Col. Drew spoke of it as a "Nazi law" and declared men without legal training would be able to "invade" homes or offices and demand private papers or records.

The section which provides powers of the Provincial Treasurer, special investigator or commissioner "shall not be subject to limitation" was branded as "an iniquitous instrument of legalized blackmail" by Col. Drew.

Litigant Reserves Right

Attorney-General Gordon Conant replied the measure had to have teeth in it to match the "devious" ways of fraud adopted by those evading rightful taxation. He said the bill "both technically and in practice allows access to the Courts to every person upon whom a claim is made."

Premier Hepburn also defended the measure, declaring the task of Treasury officials was difficult in probing suspected fraud in old estates. The "must have these sweeping powers or they wouldn't get anywhere."

The session, apart from its legislative labors, gave no indication of a possible change in the Liberal party leadership. Premier Hepburn, whose resignation has been reported as imminent many times in recent years, showed no evidence of ill-health, but appeared as keen as ever in debate and his Governmental tasks.

NAZI CHIEFS HIDE FORTUNES IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

HEINRICH HIMMLER $2,637,500
FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN GOERING $7,507,000
RUDOLPH HESS $4,007,500
ROBERT LEY $1,891,000
JULIUS STREICHER $4,000,000
JOSEPH GOEBBELS $8,990,000
JOACHIM RIBBENTROP $9,740,000

Seven of the highest Nazi leaders have prepared for either war or revolution by storing vast fortunes in foreign banks, it has been revealed. The biggest Nazi of all, Adolf Hitler, alone has made no such preparation. At least, none can be discovered. Ranked according to their fortunes stored outside of Germany the Nazi millionaires are Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, $9,740,000 in insurance and cash; Propagandist Joseph Goebbels, $8,990,000 in insurance and cash; Field Marshal Hermann Goering, $7,507,000 in insurance, cash and stocks, (Goering is a stockholder in such American firms as Pennsylvania Railroad, Illinois Central, Cities Service and Bethlehem Steel); Deputy Fuehrer Rudolph Hess, $4,007,500 in insurance and cash; Nazi Editor Julius Streicher, $4,000,000 in insurance; Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, $2,637,500 in cash; Labor Chief Robert Ley, $1,891,000 in insurance and cash. Oddly enough, it is a crime, punishable by imprisonment and even death, according to Nazi law, to possess undeclared foreign currency or other assets abroad.

Ontario Bowlers To Aid Red Cross

Stirling—Approved by H. J. Sims, K.C., President of the Ontaro Bowlers Association and members of the executive a circular was issued to all lawn bowlers of the province appealing for support of benefit tournaments to be held before the closing of the season in aid of the Red Cross. The letter points to the Red Cross Benefit Tournament held days ago in Belleville as a worthy example of what could be accomplished. The promotion of the Belleville tournament was directed by Dr. E. A. Carleton, Past President, in conjunction with C. I. Ross, Chairman of District 15 of the Provincial Lawn Bowlers Association. This message from the provincial head of the organization points out that there are 10,00 bowlers in Ontario, men and women, and $1.00 net per person raised on an average, would bring $10,000.00 to the Red Cross.

District No. 7 under H. W. Wagner, chairman, have already accepted the Belleville district plan and will hold a series of tournaments for Red Cross purposes in all clubs of the district. A description of the Belleville tournament was set forth in the document as a cue to all clubs in the province and each was asked to act quickly because of the short time left within the bowling season.

The disposal of the receipts, as far as the Association is concerned, is to have all funds paid in to the Red Cross of each locality, with a receipt obtained and sent Provincial Association Honorary Secretary-Treasurer that the results may be tabulated and a statement made as to how much has been raised by the bowlers through the effort.

The stirring appeal closes with a challenge—"Let us make the Ontario Bowlers' contribution to the Red Cross a credit to greatest of all amateur sports, lawn bowling. The appeal also invites unaffiliated clubs to join in the effort and have their results recorded with those of their fellow bowlers throughout the Province by sending their receipts from the local Red Cross to the writer, A. A. Langford, Hon. Secretary-Treasurer.

So Central Ontario bowlers of District 15 under Chairman Colin Ross, and Dr. E. A. Carleton, Past President have started something with their fine tournament of a few days ago. Oue of it has come a province-wide campaign for Red Cross assistance with an objective of $10,000.00.

The idea, born in the minds of the two men mentioned above, is a worthy one that could be adopted by other branches of sport, as their share in support of His Majesty the

Central Hastings Ministerial Association to be Headed by Rev. W. J. Scott

AT THE BELLE

"The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes"

The strange cast of the chinchilla fetish; the Traitor's Gate; the fiendish instrument that strangles, crushes and vanishes; the Star of Delhi; the albatross of doom; with a woman in love the victim and the $16,000,000 British crown jewels the loot—this is the thrilling story of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" in which the master-detective is pitted against his arch-enemy, the master-criminal Moriarty, in the super-crime of the century!

Latest 20th Century-Fox picture centering on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous sleuth with Basil Rathbone in the title role and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Fresh from his triumph in the recent "The Hound of the Baskervilles," Rathbone, the perfect Holmes, meets the notorious Moriarty for the first time in this new film. The contest between these two men, a battle of courage and wits, is one not to be easily forgotten. George Zucco, veteran character actor, portrays the master-criminal.

The leading roles in the powerful love story that runs through the screen play by Edwin Blum and William Drake are portrayed by Ida Lupino and Alan Marshal. They head a cast including Terry Kilburn, Zucco, Henry Stephenson and E. E. Clive.

"The Bridal Suite" Funny

With laughter its sole mission, and zanies its emissaries of hilarity amid the snowy grandeurs of the Alpine mountains, "Bridal Suite" with Robert Young and Annabella, is announced as the excellent second feature attraction.

Aiding and abetting the leads are Walter Connolly as a psychiatrist, Reginald Owen as a penniless lord anxious to marry off his daughter to money, Gene Lockhart as Young's father, Arthur Treacher as another member of the English nobility and Billie Burke as Young's fluttery mother.

The picture revels in uproarious comedy situations, among which are scenes wherein Connolly puts Young through a side-splitting mental test; Young, Connolly and Annabella find themselves making love on a ledge over a yawning precipice, with the antagonistic Connolly between them; and a free-for-all fight aboard a trans-Atlantic liner.

The story details the efforts of Young's doting mother to have him cured of a mental condition which makes him even forget his wedding date. Connolly is the doctor, but Annabella upsets the apple cart and wins Young away from the society girl chosen by his mother when Young discovers that there's one thing he can never forget namely, Annabella, the manageress of the Swiss inn, who taught him how to make nusspusserls, while he made love.

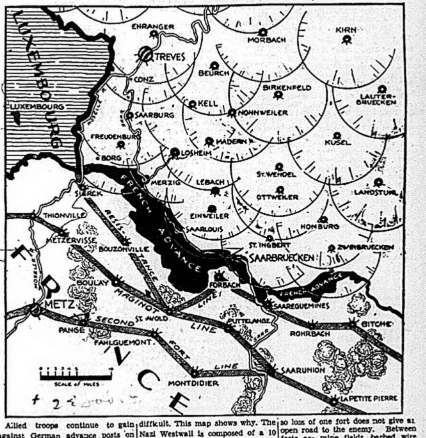
BELGIUM'S OWN "MAGINOT LINE" GUARDS FRONTIERS

If the German armies attempt to use Belgium as the backdoor to France as they did in 1914 and which the Allied general staffs fear they may do again, they will find themselves up against a much tougher Belgium than the heroic little country that managed to stem the German invasion for two valuable weeks in the last World War. A string of steel and concrete forts now runs from the Alps to the North Sea. A soldier is shown manning an anti-tank gun, UPPER LEFT, in a casement of one of the forts that form the Belgian version of the French Maginot line, while a sentry, UPPER RIGHT, is posted on one of the mountains of steel. Protecting the line from tank attacks, 'asparagus beds,' LOWER LEFT, made up of steel rails, are placed well in front of the fortifications. After taking their turn at guard duties, Belgian soldiers are shown leaving one of the frontier fortifications, LOWER RIGHT, for a spell of rest.

WHAT ALLIED ARMIES FACE ON WESTERN FRONT



Allied troops continue to gain against German advance posts on the Western Front, without regard for changing situation in the East. Progress, however, is increasingly difficult. This map shows why. The Nazi Westwall is composed of a 10 to 25-mile series of steel-and-concrete forts. Their guns cover overlapping semi-circular zones of fire, so loss of one fort does not give an open road to the enemy. Between forts are mine fields, barbed wire entanglements, machine-gun pillboxes, concrete trenches, blockhouses.

IVANHOE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Ivanhoe local Institute held their annual grandmother's meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Shaw on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. T. E. Fleming presided and the meeting opened in the usual way by singing the Institute Ode followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was well responded to by the name of a person who has made history in Hastings County. During the business period bills were paid and plans were made for the Officers' Rally which is to be held in the Ivanhoe town hall. It was decided to cancel the short course on planning and preparing meals.

The president welcomed the grandmothers and presented the oldest and youngest grandmother each with a beautiful bouquet. Mrs. Geo. Post being the oldest grandmother present and Mrs. Rutherford the youngest. The older members sang some of the old favorite songs. Mrs. Arthur Hagerman read a beautiful poem dedicated to grandmothers. Mrs. H. Rutherford the district president and guest speaker of the afternoon was introduced by Mrs. D. Fleming and gave a splendid talk on the different phases of Institute work, stressing particularly historical research. A short but instructive discussion followed Mrs. Rutherford's address. Mrs. Geo. Post took as her subject the three words "Do you remember" and in addressing the members recalled many interesting incidents of years ago.

Collection was taken and the meeting closed with singing the National Anthem. Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants. The assistant hostesses were Mrs. E. Rollins, Mrs. S. ## The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, September 24

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly routine one, with the accent placed on the customary religious, friendly, social and festive occupations, and with avocations moving in happy grooves. Literary, artistic or musical interests may enliven the day, with companionship in such directions encouraged.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly successful day, with much flourishing in all cultural, educational and artistic matters, which should attain important recognition or promise. But friendly companionship and social activities may lure from workaday interests and incite to undue extravagance.

A child born on this day may be talented in many artistic and educational or intellectual pursuits, assuring it place and popularity in its social aspirations.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To keep book bindings from breaking, paint them with a thin coat of clear shellac. This is especially advised for books that are used a great deal.

For a little treat put a teaspoon of peanut butter in the bottom of each greased pan to be filled with cake batter. When baked and unmolded the butter gives added flavor and a little coating.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Whipping Not Needed in Training a Child

Almost every week I get letters asking me if it is true that Quintuplets have never been whipped; that we have trained them to be well-behaved. Well, that is true, but people are hard to convince. At least some of them are, for some still belong to the old "Spare the rod and spoil the child" school of thought.

I am firmly convinced that children can be brought up without whipping. There are other and I think better ways of disciplining children. I have seen children who were models of behaviour who were almost never whipped, and I have known some of the worst little imps possible who were spanked regularly.

We must think of behaviour under two separate heads. First comes the usual routine of the child's day. Does he dress himself in the morning? Does he go to the bathroom when he should? Does he eat properly? Has he formed the routines you have, or should have, been teaching him?

These are the parts of a child's training for which you parents are directly responsible. If he fails in these things, then you as parents are at fault.

The other aspect of behaviour is when the child does something which he quite distinctly knows is wrong. Take for instance the child who has been solemnly warned that he must not run across the street. One day he sees something on the other side of the road that attracts him, so he crosses in spite of his warnings. Once he has done this and gotten away with it he will repeat unless something is done to draw attention to the fact that he has done wrong.

So every child has to be punished from time to time to make him realise that he just can't break the laws laid down for him without paying the penalty.

Now I don't intend to go very far into the subject of spankings. To a great many people, punishment and spanking mean the same thing. There may be times when only a spanking will achieve the desired result, but all I can say is that I haven't come in contact with many children who couldn't be controlled by other means.

Try making the child do something he doesn't like to do, or deprive him of something he wants very much. And be sure to let him see that this penalty inflicted upon him is the direct result of his disobedient act.

Our experiment with the Dionne Quintuplets has been very interesting. They have never been spanked or slapped. But when a little Quint is disobedient—and they frequently are—we put her in the isolation room. That is all we ever need to do, for they are together all the time and to be separated for awhile is a real punishment, as the culprit can hear the other little girls laughing and playing and she can't take part in it.

It so happens that this punishment of solitary confinement works with the Quintuplets. Now this might not work with some other child. But there are many ways a child can be disciplined. I have known children to be more impressed by being sent to bed supperless than they ever would have been by a spanking, but I don't recommend this.

New Trends in Furniture

BY ELEANOR ROSS

LIGHTNESS and informality, coupled with real beauty, seems to be the trend of today's furniture, and this applies to traditional as well as to modern pieces. Provincial furniture, not only of France but of Switzerland, Holland and Mexico, has inspired many of the best suites and individual pieces.

Early American and Colonial, while retaining its fine characteristics, has been given a new lease of life through the medium of new and different upholstery, lighter finishes and different scaling. In fact, upholstery has added new beauty to all types of furniture. Better designs, better dyes and fabrics, with emphasis on sunfast quality and non-fading and washable qualities, add value to the attractive textiles and fabrics now coming on the market, and colors have never been lovelier.

Chair of Lyre Design

One of the handsomest chairs seen lately is a Regency arm chair of lyre design. Lyre strings mark the sides and a framed lyre the back. Beige leather seat and festoons of gilt nailheads all around add charm to this chair.

Another lovely piece of the same period is a low book case with bronze grille doors flanked by open shelves. One of the comfiest chairs seen in many a day is an upholstered corner chair, a triangular-piece with fitted cushions a chair that is a life-saver for that awkward corner.

Comfort is the keynote of a sofa with tufted back and arms and a fringe base. Beige with bronze pipings is the color scheme. Sectional corner sofas are becoming very popular, and every modern line shows several, some with their matching coffee tables.

Mirror Top Table

Modern cocktail tables with big round clear mirror glass tops are favored and go nicely with almost any interior. Most of the furniture whether traditional or modern, is designed with an eye to mixed interiors. A useful piece is a console table in mahogany, a perfect copy of an 18th century piece. Only twenty inches wide, it may be extended to seat seven persons comfortably. Grand for the dining foyer.

A lovely modern foyer set consists of an occasional table with flanking arm chairs having cane backs. Another modern group has a game table and flanking chairs, the table having cane panels and a tooled beige leather top. The chairs have a wide band of caning in back and have fitted leather cushions.

Mahogany with squares and bands of tile inlay forms a handsome modern commode. One chair that interested us very much is a Chippendale painted bamboo carved armchair, a real novelty but not extreme.

Backache—Kidney Pains

Poison causes pain. When you have pains in the back, lumbago or rheumatic pains you may be suspicious of the kidneys. They may be slow and sluggish in removing uric acid poisons from the blood.

Along with inactivity of the kidneys you usually find the liver torpid and the bowels irregular. You can clear up this whole condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For fifty years this popular medicine has proven its outstanding efficiency as a regulator of these vital organs.

Pretty Hands Passive

Dr. Chas. Endicott, D.D., directed a discussion on the subject of

By HELEN FOLLETT

HANDS are prettiest when they are passive, resting in the lap, posed on chair arms, with fingers curled like pink and white petals.

Nervous hands are tiresome. They twist buttons, pull an ear lobe, dig at hangnails, move restlessly, wave in the air. Constantly fiddling one way or another, they make the observer uneasy. Girls who do that lack poise and manner.

The most interesting hands are not softly dimpled, but strong and capable. There is a charm about them, as there is charm in faces that display intelligence, humor, tolerance and understanding. Hands can be very expressive.

Make your paws presentable by using lotions freely, giving them an oily massage now and then, keeping them beautifully groomed and polished. But all that is not enough; you must watch their behaviour, endeavor to cultivate graceful movements.

If you have subjected your mitts to hard labor in the house and would beautify them for the festive evening party, wash them well with soap suds and a brush; rinse, dry, apply a foundation cosmetic. Friction well until the creamy substance has disappeared. The skin surface will be soft and smooth.

White of egg makes an excellent astringent pack to tighten sagging tissues and to refine a coarse skin texture.

Apply to freshly-washed skin surface that has been dried thoroughly. The egg white should be beaten to a stiff froth, spread on with flattened fingers or a silver table knife. When the first application dries, apply a second one. Pick up your mystery story and read for half an hour.

Remove the pack with clear water, pat the skin with a soft towel, get out the massage cream and give the flesh a brisk tapping.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

In Love With Girl Whose Father Interfered

Dear Miss Fairfax

I went with a girl for about a year, until finally her father—who had always objected to her going with me—made us quit and refused to let us see each other any more. She told me she would always love me more than any boy she had ever known, and I know I felt the same about her.

That was about six months ago, and now I go to see a girl whose parents like me very much and would approve of marriage. However, she has told me something about herself which is very much on my mind, and knowing this I'm afraid I couldn't be happy with her.

What do you suggest? Shall I wait and take a chance on marrying the first love, or keep on with the second girl, learning to love her in spite of her past?

Bert

I've never thought much of the idea of "learning to love" someone. We're too prone to fall in love without trying, instead of setting to it as a task, and doing this, more or less, against our wills. In your case, there's something in the girl's past that it is hard for you to forget. Wait and see what fate has in store for you, either with the first love or with someone you have not yet come across.

For the Least Expensive Wedding

Dear Miss Fairfax

We two are very much in love with each other and want to get married, but I don't have enough money to have a nice church wedding. We are so much in love that we think it's foolish to wait until we are financially prepared to have a conventional ceremony. Our plan is to elope and get married without much cost.

He has a job with a good future and his salary right now is just enough for us to live on. Please give us same advice as to what to do. We want to do the right thing. Thanks a lot.

A Couple in Love

Pliease don't elope. Tell your nearest relatives, if you have no parents, that you intend to marry on a certain date, and then get married without the usual fuss and feathers. Many people are doing just that in these days, and elaborate weddings are rather out of style. If you do it this way, you will have nothing to regret later on.

Steady Enough in Fair Weather

Dear Miss Fairfax

The man I've been engaged to for three years is five years older than I am, and I'm 22. When we first became engaged he had a good job but he lost that and has had minor jobs since then, and in the last year he hasn't been in good health.

Under these circumstances, I feel that I don't want to go "steady" any more. I want to be free to go out with anyone, and I'd like for him to be free, too.

He always treats me as a gentleman, and my family likes him very much. He's a good worker when he can get work, and has bought me lovely gifts. I feel I am not doing right, as I know he cares for me. Should I continue to go "steady" or not?

Rose K.

Personally, my dear Rose, I feel terribly sorry for those boys who are let down through no fault of their own, but just because they are unemployed that I dislike to agree that your suggestion of giving him up is the worldly-wise policy.

If you really care enough to make a go of things you wouldn't consider giving him up. You'd keep up his courage until he got his health back and another good job. The fact that you see so clearly the material advantages of breaking your engagement leads me to the conclusion that it might be just as well for you to do so.

Prospects of Happiness Not so Bright

Dear Miss Fairfax

For the past six months I have been going "steady" with a man who is approaching his forties. I am 25. Now he has asked me to marry him and I hesitate. I think a great deal of him, and he loves me. But this is the problem.

He was married to another woman for twelve years but his wife divorced him about a year ago and he claims it was all her fault. However, I've heard that he drank quite a bit at one time, but since going with me he hasn't touched a drop to my knowledge. He has no money at all, and only an insignificant job. If I marry him I will have to keep my position. Would you advise me to mary him?

J. B.

Your prospects of happiness do not seem very bright with this man my dear. If you decide to marry him, I hope you will insist on finding out first why his wife divorced him after twelve years. If he did drink to excess at one time there is always a question of his drinking again.

Listen With Beauty, Too

By HELEN FOLLETT

PRETTY EARS are a rare beauty asset. Evidently Mamma Nature designed them only for our convenience, not for decorative qualities. Now that they are out in the open, uncurtained by side locks, we had better give them a look-see, resort to such aids as cosmetics offer.

They should be like delicate white and pink shells, small, fitted close to the head, of graceful outline. A large lobe makes an ear look dowdy; it can be made to appear smaller by applying an ivory colored foundation cream and powder a trifle deeper in tone.

When the natural flush appears upon a woman's face, the ears go rosy. That is why, if cheeks are reddened, the lobes should be touched lightly. Outstanding ears can be corrected by the plastic surgeon, who takes a neat tuck at the back, sews up the wound. This trouble can be corrected in infancy by a cap made of tapes that holds the little sound receivers close to the head.

Some times the first wrinkles come in the soft tissues in front of the ears. Keep that in mind when applying your massage cream at night. Go over the flesh with brisk little circles of the finger-tip, follow with friction with an ice cube. Nothing like cold water to firm tissues that are on the toboggan.

There are a lot of cute variations of bangs that seem to be coming to the fore again. These forehead fringes are youthful and piquant; too few women wear them.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN

Her pretty ears get proper attention

They can be cut on a slant, divided in the centre or arranged in flat pin curls and then fluffed out. Grand to fill in at the side of the face if the hair is thin there. That's where hair gets skimpy first.

When getting a permanent wave, have a brief heating of short hair on the forehead. If the wave is tight, the tresses will go crimpy—all because of moisture of the skin.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Name Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—My husband's name is (let's say) John Jones, Jr. His father has been dead for several years. Isn't my husband's name now but "John Jones" because, since his father's death, he is the only one bearing that name?

2—We will soon be living in an apartment which although it is an entirely separate apartment with its own doorbell, and so forth, is in the same house with my mother-in-law. She uses the name Mrs. John Jones instead of Mrs. Mary Jones. Am I expected to have the card over our doorbell read, Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, Jr., or should I continue to have my cards engraved Mrs. John Jones?

3—Won't our son's name now be John Jones, Jr., instead of John Jones, third?

Margaret

1—When your husband's father died, your husband correctly dropped the "Jr". from his name . . he is now John Jones.

2—The fact that you will both live at the same address creates a name-situation that will demand a definite adjustment.

Your husband's name is John Jones: your name is Mrs. John Jones and your visiting cards should be engraved with this form of name.

Your mother-in-law is absolutely correct in not using the form of Mrs. Mary Jones . . . a widow should continue to use her husband's Christian name. But she has two alternatives in the form of name she may choose to use. She may have Sr., added to her name. Or, if she prefers (and especially if she is the head of the family), she may drop all first names and have her cards engraved "Mrs. Jones. ("Mrs. Jones" won't sound very distinguished, but the name at the top of your letter-paper will!) Very often when a widow and her daughter-in-law bearing the same name live in different cities, they use the same form of name . . .Mrs. John Jones. But when they live at the same address, or under any other circumstances where confusing situations may arise, the form of the name must, for practical reasons, be adjusted.

However, if, for some important reason, your mother-in-law prefers not to change the form of her name, then the name-adjustment must be made by you and your husband, and you and he will have to use the "Jr".. after your name. This is a matter for "family conference".

3—According to the usual name-procedure, your husband is now John Jones, and your son is John Jones, Jr. But this must be decided at the present time by the outcome of the family conference.

No Gifts Desired

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

A couple are to be married away from their home town, and no friends or relatives will be present at the ceremony. The couple are very anxious not to receive any wedding presents or any receptions.

Will you please advise whether it would be good form to send out an announcement after the wedding, with some sort of notation to the effect that no gifts are desired?

I have so often heard people say, "I've got to buy so and so a wedding gift" and I would much prefer that my friends would not feel themselves obligated to give gifts, especially when they are doing it merely for show.

Male Reader

I don't believe it is possible to request one's friends not to send wedding gifts and still make this request sound gracious and graceful. To set down such a request, as honest and well-meaning as it is, gives a socially awkward and unattractive impression.

I fully appreciate how you feel about this . . . many people enthusiastically agree with you. But while it might serve to limit the gift-activity of those who give wedding gifts grudgingly or just to make an impression, it does take the joy from those friends . . . and these are real friends . . . .whose spirits are sweet and generous, who sincerely wish to send something generously and wisely chosen for the new home.

Do you think it is really friendly to penalize friends who have the right spirit about giving, just because of the superficial attitude of a few not-such-real friends? I wonder if you should.

Perhaps this fact may be a comfort to you and determine your decision . . . . people don't take so seriously as formerly the giving of wedding presents. More often than not, they give if they wish to, and don't make the effort if they aren't particularly concerned. And, since most budgets have been curtailed, people don't make such a point of giving elaborate or costly wedding presents. Very often the people who complain "I've got to buy So-and-so a wedding gift" never get any farther than the repetition of the complaint.

So I'd advise you not to send this request. Instead let things take their natural course, and everyone concerned will, I am sure, be much happier.

The Fun Begins

an Hour From Now

THROW down your newspaper; turn off your radio—get your family and grab your hat!

Down on the streets right now is the bright and beaming face of a 1940 Nash. And just looking at it will make you feel good all over!

One sweet sweep of glittering line, it looks gay as a Mardi Gras—and twice as exciting.

But don't waste time staring. You belong in the driver's seat. For that's where the fun begins.

Before you start, turn on the Weather Eye to the comfort you want. (It offers new conditioned air wonders this year.)

Just a nudge of your toe, and in one split-second you'll get a good idea of what a hundred-odd stampeding horses can do. Three finger flicks—and the gears are shifted. Then—a lift, a rush, a click—and a new Fourth Speed Forward lends soft wings to your ride.

Don't worry about that Sunday driver ahead: There's something new in the throttle—the Nash Automatic Overtake. Just press your toe—and leave him dawdling in your dust, wondering where you came from—or where you went.

Then head for a backwoods road where the others dare not follow . . . and feel what happens.

Ruts and bumps rush up to meet your spinning wheels, but—they never seem to reach you. Your hands stay idle on the wheel.

It's riding magic, pure and simple. A ride so smooth, so level, so silent that you might be in your easy chair at home, or sleeping in the Nash convertible bed.

It's the new Arrow-Flight Ride . . . result of an entirely new spring-ing combination . . . and we dare you to say you've ever experienced anything like it, or known steering that was so sure and effortless.

With singing heart, you give the throttle another nudge.

From where you're sitting, the world looks like one straight, unending ribbon of road ahead . . . in a land of perpetual spring.

It is—and always will be, in your Nash . . . long after other cars are parked for good.

We're asking you, with nothing but your own preferences, experiences, and instincts, to get behind the wheel of a 1940 Nash. For ten glorious minutes—that's all.

Then decide if any other car today . . . of any power, weight, or wheelbase . . . can give you as much downright fun as this new, low-priced Nash!

Get your hands on it now—for you'll regret every minute you don't own one! Your Nash dealer is waiting. Come on—it's getting late—let's go!

Reds Add Half-a-Game to Lead Over St. Louis Cardinals by Defeating Pirates in Twin Bill

National Loop Fight Becomes "War of Nerves" but Neither Team Cracks

FELLER WINS 22nd

Cullenbine Hits Two Homers Off Speed Ball Ace but Tigers Lose

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

This National League pennant fight has become a "war of nerves" with the baseball world waiting to see whether Cincinnati Reds or St. Louis Cardinals crack first.

The Reds seem to have passed an important crisis by plastering a pair of defeats on Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-0 and 10-9, to expand their lead to three full games but the fact remains that Cincinnati or no one else can have any calm until someone stops the surge of St. Louis, even if the Reds have to do it themselves next week.

The Cardinals cuffed Chicago Cubs, 3-2 yesterday for their fifth straight victory.

This was the way they came to the post today:

| | W. | L. | G.B. | T.P |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati .. | 90 | 54 | — | 10 |
| St. Louis ... | 87 | 57 | 3 | 9 |

The Reds confronted with another doubleheader with the Pirates made the most out of their chances yesterday, but left a lot of supporters a bit shaken.

Lombardi Hits Homer

In the first game, Gene (Junior) Thompson hurled seven-hit ball, Ernie Lombardi hit his 20th home run and Ival Goodman contributed two triples. They started just as impressively in the nightcap, taking a 7-0 lead in the third inning when Wally Berger homered with the bases loaded.

But then they gave up seven runs in one inning on three hits, three walks and three errors. It was anybody's ball game after that, and the Reds were lucky to win.

The Cardinals ganged up on Larry French in the fourth with three runs on two singles and two doubles. Bob Bowman came through with some sparkling pinch pinching when the Cubs began getting playful with Mort Cooper's offerings.

Bob Feller got his 22nd victory of the campaign as Cleveland Indians downed Detroit, 5-4, but it came in an unexpected manner. Feller scattered nine hits, but two of these were home runs by Roy Cullenbine, one of them with two on base. The Indians, as usual, hit behind Feller and brought him into the ninth inning with score tied. Feller promptly doubled and then scored the winning run on Roy Weatherly's single.

Boston Red Sox raked three Philadelphia pitchers for 13 hits and bunched four runs in the fourth to beat the Athletics, 7-5.

These were the only scheduled games.

FORMER TORONTO FOOTBALL PLAYER HAILED AT QUEENS

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—Captain Doug. Annan and George Carson remained on the sidelines today as Queen's University of the senior division of the intercollegiate rugby union worked out under direction of Coach Frank Tyndall, assisted by Dr. Harry Batstone and Tuffy Griffiths. The team was drilled in line pays.

Tyndall believes he has a find in Art Walker, former kicking half with Oakwood Collegiate of the Toronto Secondary Schools League. Walker matched punts today with Jack Brown, last season's booter, which drives of 60 yards.

Annan ,who suffered a leg injury Wednesday, today discarded crutches for a cane after X-rays disclosed a bad bruise on his leg. He may be ready to play in a week.

Carson, recovering from an illness, is expected to don a uniform Monday.

Queen's open the season with an exhibition game here Sept. 30, against Ontario Agricultural College of Guelph, an intermediate intercollegiate club.

AUDITORIUM WILL BUY FRANCHISE

Montreal, Sept. 23 (CP)—Agreement by directors of the Ottawa Auditorium to purchase the franchise of the Senator's Hockey Club in the event they decided not to operate this season was recorded last night at a meeting of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

The agreement, assuring Ottawa of an entry in the seven-team circuit, was made between Clare Bunton, representing auditorium directors, and J. P. McCaffrey, acting for the present franchise-holders. McCaffrey was given until Monday for final decision.

It left the league at the same strength as last season. Quebec Aces, McGill, Concordia, Royals and Verdun again will operate while Cornwall Flyers, whose application was accepted recently, will replace the defunct Vitorias.

Cornwall performed last year in the rival Quebec Provincial Senior Hockey League, a motion was passed by delegates asking the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association to outlaw the recent inclusion of a Qu[illegible] entry, by the P.S.H.L. as replacement for Cornwall.

King and the cause of peace, which in truth, is the only thing that permits restful recreation in various fields of sport. A cheer for Colin Ross, Dr. Carleton and their assistants for a high and noble effort that is the beginning of something really big.

AMERICANS SIGN CHUCK CONACHER FOR THE SEASON

'Red' Dutton Places Accent on Youth in Assembling Squad

18 AMATEURS OUT

'Sweeney' Schriner Will Perform With Toronto Leafs This Winter

New York, Sept. 23 (CP)—Mervin (The Red) Dutton, the miracle maker of the National Hockey League who managed to get two ancient teams—they called them "The old men of Manhattan"—into the playoffs, is going to have a crack at the Stanley Cup with a bundle of comparative youth in the 1939-40 season.

Dutton came out from under a summer's accumulation of paper work at his desk here yesterday long enough to announce that his 1939-40 New York Americans look like the best outfit he has ever started in the N.H.L.

He called it the "fastest and toughest team in the history of the club" and said there would be eight new faces on the squad when it assembles for pre-season training at Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 4.

Conacher Signed

The No. 1 acquisition is big Chuck Conacher, former star Toronto right winger who was turned back to the Maple Leafs by Detroit last season when the Red Wings failed to complete a conditional purchase.

Most of the other newcomers also come from Toronto or from the Syracuse Stars of the International-American League, a Maple Leaf "farm." Harvey (Busher) Jackson, who worked at left wing when Conacher was at right on Toronto's famous "kid" line, Frank (Buzz) Boll and Elwyn (Doc) Romnes were acquired late last spring in a trade for Dave (Sweeney) Schriner.

Chuck Shannon and Murray Armstrong, forwards, and Bummer Doran, defence man, are coming up from Syracuse and Pat Egan, another defence player, from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League.

Accent on Youth

This accent on youth means that waivers will have to be asked on some of the old warhorses, but the pepper leader of the A's couldn't be drawn out on that subject yesterday. About 18 amateurs will report to him at Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 4. The regulars are due Oct. 10.

The A's will play six exhibition games with New York Rangers, two games each in Port Arthur, Winnipeg and Regina.

The team will also embark in the farm business this winter as sponsor of the Riverdale Hockey Club from Hackensack, N.J., which will be an entry in the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League.

CONN FAVORED TO BEAT BETTINA

Light-Heavyweight Scrap to be Held in Pittsburgh on Monday Night

By Gayle Talbot
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pittsburg, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Professor Mike Jacobs and his justly famous fight menagerie have moved in here for another one-night stand, this one to feature the eminent light-heavyweights, Champion Billy Conn and ex-champion Melio Bettina, on Monday.

The troupe arrived to find it being taken more or less for granted that Conn, making his first title defence before the home folks, would give them fully as good a show as Joe Louis gave his Detroit neighbors the other night.

They think around here that Billy the Kid is a cinch to beat Bettina again, that this scrap merely is a little chore he promised to attend to before he goes on up a notch and begins slugging heavy-weight contenders around. Specifically, Billy's opening heavyweight opponent is supposed to be Lou Nova. After he disposes of the light-heavyweight challenge of Gus Lesnevich, always supposing of course, that he gets by Bettina.

But others, who saw the first Bettina-Conn fight, think the thing is far from cut-and-dried. Billy is a beauty, all right, but there was some doubt whether he gained more than about a one-round edge over Bettina before, and whether the title should have changed hands on that close a fight.

However, Billy might prove himself a real champion Monday night and even look like a coming threat to the heavyweights. Nova, by the way, has recovered sufficiently from the Galento shambles to be aching for a shot at Conn. He is certain he could rip the slender youngster apart with body blows, says his manager, Ray Carlen.

BEARS NEED ONE GAME TO CINCH LEAGUE PENNANT

Defeat Rochester Red Wings for Third Straight Time by 4-1

FINE COMEBACK

Newark Down Two Games Before Squad Starts Clicking

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Newark Bears, holding a three-to-two advantage over Rochester Red Wings, will seek tonight to clinch the International League's Governors' Cup and the right to meet Louisville of the American Association in the annual "Little World Series".

The Bears, continuing their amazing comeback after dropping the first two games of the four-out-of-seven final playoff series, scored their third straight victory over the Red Wings last night in Newark, N.J.

While Joe Beggs, a right-hander, was holding the Wings at bay with five hits, his mates pushed all their runs across the plate in the fourth inning to take the decision 4-1.

Louisville, which like Newark finished fourth in the season's regular competition, clinched its "Little World Series" berth last night by defeating Indianapolis 6-5 to take the Association's final playoff series four games to one.

The "Little World Series" opens Tuesday night in either Newark or Rochester. The first three games of the best-of-seven competition will be played in the International League city and the rest in Louisville.

The Bears who eliminated the pennant-winning Jersey City Giants in their first playoff struggle, climbed on Mike Ryba for five of their 11 hits in the "Big Fourth".

Mike Chartak, hard-hitting outfielder who had been out most of the season with a broken leg, accounted for all of the Bears' runs. After Buddy Blair, Walt Judnich and Mickey Witek had rapped out successive singles, Chartak doubled to left field and then scored on Jim Asbell's wild throw to the plate.

BOMBERS STILL ON TOP

Winnipeg, Sept. 23 (CP)—Half the 24-game Western Interprovincial Football Union schedule is completed and Winnipeg Blue Bombers, champions the last two seasons, are unbeaten.

Calgary Bronks, defeated in their first two games, have come from last place to second with three victories in their last four starts.

Bombers ran their victory string to six at Edmonton last night, whipping Eskimos 18-0. Bronks took over sole possession of second place at Calgary with a 24-0 conquest of Regina Roughriders with whom they previously were tied at two victories apiece. Edmonton has won but once.

Pittsburgh All Steamed Up Over Approaching Conn-Bettina Brawl

BILLY CONN .... fancy boxing champion

MELIO BETTINA..unorthodox

By ED KIELY
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23—An epidemic of fight fever, a disease that hasn't caught Pittsburgh's lethargic "slug row" addicts since the demise of the famous Harry Greb, has wrapped its tentacles around this teeming metropolis once again.

For on the 25th of this month, five days after the Joe Louis-Bob Pastor heavyweight title match in Detroit, the city's pride, a handsome Irish gent named Billy Conn, will defend his recently won light heavyweight title in his home town.

His opposition will be the rugged Melio Bettina, the broadbeamed Beacon (N.Y.) bopper, the fellow from whom Conn lifted the toga.

Both men, from their respective posts on the outskirts of the city, ballyhoo their Herculean strength and how they are going to polish off one another.

From Conn's camp, a toney layout called "White Mansions," came the communique that the Hibernian, who has just moved with his parents up to Pittsburgh's ritzy Fifth Ave., has developed a "knockout punch," a potion which he intends to slip to the unorthodox upstate New Yorker.

Billy the Kid, who sent boxing experts scurrying to the records to find a better exponent of boxing skill in the past decade is a "natural" draw. The lank six-footer, with dark wavy hair and a matinee idol profile even entices squeamish females through the turnstiles to the ringside of his fights. Immobile to these facts, sweet "Willyum" said:

"All this talk about my boxing ability I guess is okay, but I want to be a hitter.

"Recently I've been spending a lot of time trying to develop a punch that will 'mow 'em down.' I think I'm succeeding.

"Fellows like Jack Dempsey," Conn continued, "drew million dollar gates. And why? Because they were strong as oaks and could clout. Fans like that.

"You might add," Billy said, flicking his famous left under our nose, "that I could use a couple of those big gates, too."

Johnny Ray, an ex-fighter who nurtured Conn from boyhood, teaching him all the tricks of the manly art, is positive his boy will repeat his victory over Bettina. Ray is the champ's manager. Both the fighter and the manager have such devotion and faith in one another that their contract is merely verbal.

Over at Eagle's Rest, Bettina's gymn prior to the imbroglio, there is a determined atmosphere which exudes from all, especially Mello (pronounced May-lee-o, the accent on the second syllable as Webster would say).

Bettina, a self-styled "tough hombre" is the antithesis of his opponent. He has a moon face, with gnarled features. His hair is fine and flat. He is squat and chunky, and his chest is very hairy, making him look much like a playmate of Tarzan.

A southpaw, this unconventional lad is the first "lefty" since Lew Tendler, who is able to hit with his right hand. Asked what he liked to do besides fight, Bettina replied:

"I like to dance. I'm a fancy rung cutter. You know, a jitterbug."

His boss, Jimmy Grippo, a fight manager by vocaton and a hynotist by avocation, feels that the decision his fighter lost to Conn in Madison Square Garden last May was unjust and he and his boy are out to redeem themselves.

He, with the purported "evil eye," felt sure the bacon would be returned to Beacon.

Meanwhile, "Uncle" Mike Jacobs, czar of the prize ring from Podunk Centre, U.S. to the Bali Isles, Germany excluded, gleefully claps his hands and predicts a $140,090 gate, a record breaker indeed for a "Smoky City" fight.

MAY MEET LEADING RIVALS IN PIMLICO SPECIAL

Rated among the top horses on the continent this year is Kayak II, ABOVE, South American-bred stablemate of Seabiscuit in the Charles S. Howard stable. Chief challenger to his claims is Challedon and they may settle their difference on Nov. 1 when officials at Baltimore's Pimlico track hope to stage another "Pimlico Special"—the third annual, last year's being the great duel between Seabiscuit and War Admiral. Expected to race are the five best three-year-olds and handicap horses, as selected by votes of turf writers, the five being Kayak II, Challedon, Johnstown, Eight-Thirty and Cravat. Kayak's biggest wins have been in the Santa Anita Handicap and the Hollywood Gold Cup.

REEVE PREDICTS A SECOND PLACE FOR HIS ROYALS

Substitute Strength Lacking but Main Squad Quite Formidable

GOOD FRONT LINE

High-Class Outsides Could be Used Nicely but Reeve Not Worrying

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 23 (CP)—As cautious as a man chewing toffee with a new set of store teeth, Ted Reeve went out on a limb today—for Ted Reeve—and predicted that his Montreal Royals "may finish second" in this year's Big Four football race.

But even the announcement was qualified with: "It all depends on whether we're hot on the days we play Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders. Then again, there's another thing that enters into it. We haven't an awful lot of substitute strength, but maybe we will be lucky and go through without too many injuries."

The long-jawed Reeve, making his first start as a coach in the Interprovincial Union after coaching Queen's University in the college loop for a half dozen seasons, finds no fault with his starting team. It is a lack of alternate strength and a dearth of high-class outside wings that has him a bit worried.

Good Plunging Team.

On the credit side, Reeve has as nice a group of line-blasters as can be found in the east in Bill Davies, Gordie Noseworthy, Jim Allen, Pete Jotkus and Andy Anton. In addition, the kicking duties are well taken care of by Noseworthy, Herbie Westman and Walter Morley.

Reeve grants that the kicking of Westman and the plunging of his big fellows will likely be the strong spots in the team's attack. But just so other teams in the league won't think Montreal's offensive is confined to line plunging and good kicking, Reeve is counting on the forward passing of Westman and Joe Cicero, an American, to "help loosen up their defence".

The Royals' first team shapes up well on paper. At snap, either Mac Parsons or Jerry Searight can be used. Glen Brown, Paul McGarry, Archie Harfield and Luigi (Slug) Segatore are available as inside wings. The pick of the middles are Anton and Jotkus, while at outside are Lloyd Daniels, Jimmy Hamilton, Lauri Mathieu, Buster H. Albert and Don Hall.

At quarter, Reeve likely will use Bill Irwin, coach last year of Peterborough Orfuns of the Ontario Union, although Leo McCullagh, an intermediate Montreal player last year may get the call in some games.

"It's possible I may have to do the same as when I was a bit short of material at Queen's," said Reeve. "Some of the fellows will have to learn different positions and in that way they can be shifted around to different spots."

No matter where they finish up, the Royals undoubtedly will do better than last season when, as the Cubs, they went through the Big Four schedule without a victory. This year they have a lot of new faces on the line-up and Reeve has taken over the coaching job held by Jimmy Macdonald in 1938.

Among the newcomers to the team are Cicero, who is playing baseball with St. Hyacinthe in the Provincial League; Irwin, who really is a lineman but who is a capable quarter also; Westman and Anton, with last year's champion McGill Redmen of the College League; McGarry, with Toronto Balmy Beach last year and Davies, who played in 1938 with Montreal Nations of the O.R.F.U.

In addition, Jotkus is making a return to football after a year's layoff. And in the workouts, the Royals players have said that the charging Pole, one of the best middle wings in Canada only a few years ago, is back in his old time form.

TENNIS TROUPE ARRIVES HOME

Back from Europe—like many other troupes, performers and just plain citizens—are the members of the touring professional tennis circuit, seen here as they arrived in New York. LEFT to RIGHT: Don Budge, whose jump to the pro ranks lost the Davis Cup for Uncle Sam; Ellsworth Vines, immediate predecessor as top man in United States Lester Stoefen, and Bill Tilden, usually rated the all-time tops at the game.

Followng our very candid remarks made recently regarding the condition of baseball in Belleville, the Peterboro scribe severely admonished us for our "cold water attitude" as he termed our references. Unfortunately at the time we felt we were justified in our open and candid opinion, which was made in order not to deceive the Central Ontario Baseball League mentors, who are to function again, according to the Liftlock City scribe, sometime this fall when an effort to revive the old C.O.B.L. for 1940 has been suggested. Today, however, there shone a ray of gleaming light over the baseball horizon in Belleville, as the name of the Canadian National Railways was quite recently linked with baseball once again. Veteran ball fans will well recall the first senior O.B.A. team in Belleville, sponsored by the old Grand Trunk System back in 1919 and later when the railway became the Canadian Nationals, the local senior ball nine was known as "the Nationals."

Those were the days when baseball was an institution in Belleville and Quinte sons and daughters were proud of their diamond teams. Actually what this is all leading up to and the climax to our reference is the rumor that the C.N.R. may bring back the housing of their large 6100 type engines to the Belleville roundhouse. This type of engine is now housed and serviced at Hamilton and Toronto, but originally the Belleville C.N.R. roundhouse was the home of these iron monsters, when they were first introduced along the mainline. We understand if the 6100's are brought back to Belleville to be serviced for main line work, dozens of helpers, fitters and others will follow these huge "steam horses" to Belleville. In both Hamilton and Toronto baseball and softball players are now employed servicing these engines and in the event Belleville is again made the terminal for the 6100 type engine, these diamond players will follow their trade in Belleville, which might mean much to the future of baseball in this city. We hope this revealment will appease the Peterboro scribe, who is very much mistaken regarding our baseball feelings.

As we stated at the beginning, this matter is only in the rumor stage, despite the fact it is supposed to have come from the Belleville divisional point. However, if it be true and authentic, which we hope for the best at all times, we still hold there is the necessity of floodlights, which today are paramount in the success of sports in the small town as well as the larger cities. It would be very nice to see the Belleville Nationals once more in action and we certainly hope there is foundation to the talk now going the rounds.

Dr. Jack Sinclair, one-time University of Toronto football captain and star kicking half-back has joined the medical staff of the R.C.A.F. and will assume his duties immediately. Sinclair has been assisting head coach Warren Stevens with coaching duties at Varsity this season. If Sinclair is to be located at the Trenton Airport, he might be persuaded to drop down to Belleville and tutor the Collegiate gridders in the art of punting the pigskin occasionally.

Heavyweight wrestling will definitely return to the Hume Arena next Friday night with a three-bout card, Manager Norm Barriage announced today. The return of the grunt and groan artists is completely under a new wrestling circuit, that has been set up in Canada with headquarters at Montreal. The bout will be featured by the appearance of Rudy Epps, powerful German wrestler from Toledo, Ohio, who has grappled in the squared circle in most every recognized sports country in the world. Epps stampeded successfully in South Africa, his native Germany, France, Italy, England and Belgium before coming to the U.S.A. He meets Joe Maich, the Canadian lightheavy weight champion in the main bout next Friday night. A fine supporting card is being planned, added Mr. Barriage. Professional wrestling suffered severely in Belleville of recent years owing to the continued appearance of the same faces week after week, but with the assurance of new faces in a Belleville ring, wrestling should return to its former lofty prominence in the local sporting picture.

Secretary Joe Shortt informs us the Y.M.C.A. will open its doors, after a long summer vacation, next week. New equipment ..has been added to supplement that now at the "Y" and will be available for use on the gym floor. The entire building has been renovated, including the swimming pool and bowling alleys, all of which should be most inviting to the public eye, Mr. Shortt assures us.

Wilmer Hillock's good pacer, Lastic Gratian, broke the track record in Kingston yesterday when he paced the oval in 2.04 3-4. The previous track record of 2.06 1-2 was held by the Kingston-owned Toll Gate. The times for the quarter, was .31, 1.03 3-4, 1.34 and 2.04 3-4. Lastic Gratian won the free-for-all at the Belleville Fair with ease. Incidentally Hillock colected an extra $50.00 note for breaking the track record at Kingston. This added feature might well be introduced during subsequent Belleville Fairs.

Those old frontline firing mates Chuck Conacher and "Busher" Jackson are back together again, the former having been signed by the New York Americans yesterday, while Jackson was traded to the Gothamites some time ago. Buzz Boll and Doc Romnes, former Leafs, are also with the Americans this year, so it will be like old home week when the Americans commence training. Manager Red Dutton revealed today he intended to team Jackson and Conacher on the same front line. It's too bad he couldn't induce Joe Primeau to return to the hockey wars, thus completing the old Toronto "kid line."

4 BURN TO DEATH

Complete Loss

The building, valued at $3,500, was a complete loss.

Bodies of Amede LaPointe and his family were recovered about .5 a.m. The younger child was still in bed, but the other three were near the window as if they had made an effort to escape before being overcome.

Fred LaPointe is believed to have been the first to waken. The sound of roaring flames awakened him. He said:

"I opened the door into the hall. There was a roar and the flames shot into the room. I ran back and smashed a front window. I jumped through the window and yelled to the people upstairs.

"I could see Allard at the side window and I told him to throw the children down to me. He dropped his two children and then his wife and then he jumped out of the window.

"I couldn't see my brother. I went back in through the front window to get my money and then got out."

Fred LaPointe said he had just finished putting a concrete foundation under the house yesterday. He was working for his brother.

FOOD RATIONING

The new food rationing will become effective next Monday. Bread cards will make their appearance then, and only children, pregnant and nursing mothers and the sick will be allowed to drink unskimmed milk.

The decrees came as an army high command communique claimed the surrender of Lwow which, it said, signalled the end of fighting in Galicia.

Division of Poland

With Germany and Soviet Russia in agreement on a line of demarcation between their forces in Poland, rumors spread that the close co-operation might lead to a German-Russian military alliance.

No one in a responsible position, however, ventured a comment on such a possibility.

The agreement, announced yesterday, gave Russia approximately three-fifths of Poland as her zone of occupation and left two-fifths, including Warsaw, for Nazi soldiers. It was pointed out, however, the line was not necessarily permanent, and that future boundaries still were the subject of diplomatic negotiations in Moscow.

A communique today said Lwow had surrendered to German mountaineers just as they were being relieved there by Russian troops. It also claimed the capture Thursday of the commander of the Polish army in Pomorze (the Polish Corridor), his entire staff, and of 103,-000 prisoners and "unmeasurable" arms in the Galicia campaign.

Meat Rations Cause Anxiety.

Until now there was no restriction on bread consumption. There still is none on potatoes, fruits, fish and fresh vegetables, which may be purchased without cards.

Meat rations of approximately 1.1 pounds a person each week — the weight of one fair-sized steak—have become a cause of special anxiety among many German housewives.

Even with the introduction of two meatless days—Monday and Friday —they have been compelled to do a lot of figuring on how to divide the meat allotment evenly over the remaining five days.

Seafood is almost impossible to get because of Great Britain's domination of the North Sea.

Coal, on the other hand, has been eliminated from the rationing system. It was said Germany possesses sufficient coal now that Polish coal mines have come within the German economic system.

POLICE CONTINUE

Baker was said to have been questioned by police into the disappearance of Morris Gershow and Murray Baker, whose truck was found near Clarkson a few days after they left Toronto on a poultry-buying trip June 23.

Robber Struck with Shoe

Police said that Miss Stout took off her shoe while Kivell was struggling with Baker and struck the armed robber on the head. He fell unconscious and died a short time later. His identity was established at police headquarters.

The young couple were in a parked automobile a mile from Erindale when Baker crept up to the car and demanded money. He took 50 cents from Miss Stout, got nothing from Kivell and forced them at gunpoint to drive about the district for two hours.

Later, at another isolated spot, Miss Stout tied Kivells' hands together with his necktie when ordered to do so by the gunman. She tied the bonds loosely, however and when Baker threatened to take Kivell into a cornfield and shoot him, the youth freed his hands and grappled with the armed man.

A shot rang out from Baker's gun and both fell to the ground. Miss Stout then removed her shoe and struck Baker on the head.

Kivell said that as he and the thug entered the field, he turned and grappled with his captor.

Threatened to Shoot.

"He said 'let me go or I'll shoot'," Kivell said. "But I held on to him and the gun went off. I felt the thud and smelled the powder. I hollered to Glenna to come up and I kept hold of him.

"Glenna took off her shoe and whacked him in the face. There was blood over everything. I was pretty near losing my grip when I got another hold on him. Suddenly he went limp. I told Glenna to grab the gun and she did. Then we tied his hands with the necktie and put him in the car."

The couple drove to the home of Provincial Constable Fraser Bell at Cooksville and turned Baker over to him, unaware Baker was dead. An autopsy revealed Baker died of head blows.

Mr. Conant said last night that on the basis of information he had received, the couple had performed an act outstanding in law enforcement.

NEW LIFE SEEN

Sudden application of the nightly blackout caught most people unprepared, created a run on stores that exhausted supplies of materials such as heavy curtaining which became new necessities. It was tiring scurrying from shop to shop trying to buy blue light bulbs, flashlights, black paint, gas mask carriers and the like.

On Darkened Streets

It was tiring walking through darkened streets at night, trying to sense where unseen pedestrians were walking, trying to avoid the jolt of slipping off the curb, trying to avoid striking lamp standards, remembering motorists' visibility was restricted to less than 10 feet and that the pedestrian's life was exclusively in his own hands.

It was tiring before the blue lamps and curtains came to grope one's way to bed with the aid of a small torch. At first it was torture eating dinner in a blacked-out restaurant which could not be ventilated adequately and where the temperature rose into the 80's.

Eyes Accustomed to Dark.

But the rush of preparation subsided quickly. One's eyes became accustomed to the dark. One began automatically to remember where the sidewalk automatically dropped into an ally, where an unlighted intersection should be.

The householder invented ways of ventilating rooms without showing light outside. He could burn more light and read again, take his evening meal in comfort.

In the pubs it was found that war had become a great leveller. The places usually were full of singing soldiers, a lot of them pink-cheeked youngsters with their girls. At first the girls looked scared, but they soon caught the cheerful spirit of the lads, newly dressed in khaki or air force blue.

Bands Play Again.

The parks looked nice, where they hadn't been torn up to fill sandbags. It was not long before the bands were playing again and the people sitting around in deck chairs. There were no children to feed the pigeons or the ducks in the ponds, but adults are good at that too and the birds did not suffer.

Sandbags and boarded windows made streets ugly by day, but when it was clear the sight of the balloon barrage made up for it. When they were pulled down one started missing the great silver, fish-like bags that swung in the wind on the ends of long cables.

When the theatres reopened after the first few days it was good to go to the movies again.

So London recovered from its initial weariness and settled down to a new life.

White Lilacs

By Florence Mellish

"Well, Janet Ransom, I was afraid you wouldn't come. I expect Amos and the children every minute. My, but you look tired!"

"It was close on the train."

"Step into the bedroom and freshen up a bit, you thought you'd wear your tan-colored dress."

"It's my best one, Sylvie."

"It makes you look all of a color, somehow."

Janet obediently straightened her collar before a small mirror.

"All of a color! she echoed. "I didn't suppose anybody was going to notice my looks. Perhaps Gladys is old enough to be critical. Well, as Paul said, 'I am what I am'."

She went to the open window and sniffed the fragrant air.

"White lilacs! My Goodness. I wonder if that old book is in the case now. Yes, of course. Pretty sentimental, but I was just a girl."

She laughed indulgently as she turned the leaves. She had followed pretty rustic Millicent Brant's story eagerly until Reginald Harcourt came out of his thrilling adventures to claim her.

"And so romance had come to Millicent."

That was the last line. How well Janet remembered!

She had finished the book that afternoon when they had left her alone to go to Seth Kimball's funeral.

Then she had gone to stand under the white lilac by the gate, listening for Uncle Andrew's wagon, thinking that Millicent was very much like her and wondering how her own romance would come.

It had never come.

Still, Janet had been pretty once—in her quiet way. She had a faded, angular prettiness even now.

The next fall after her visit she had begun to go to singing school, and Dwight Burrows had been home with her two or three times. Then her father had fallen from the barn loft and broken his leg and her mother had been laid up from sciatica.

After that, Belle's husband had been killed in the saw mill, and Belle had come home with the children.

Belle was never very strong or very dependable, and Janet had stood patiently in the gap. Dwight Burrow had transferred his attentions to May Logee.

If she ever thought of that half hour when she had stood under the lilac, listening for her uncle's wagon and dreaming dreams, it was with a smile for her girlishness. Neat and trim from long habit, she seldom gave a thought to her appearance.

Now Janet was left alone.

She had given herself without stint until it seemed to her in her late thirties that there was little left.

Now Amos Barlow, two years a widower, with his eight-year-old Gladys and his five-year-old Oscar, stood in her path confronting her like manifest detiny.

"They're coming!" called her cousin, "and dinner's just ready."

Janet started and came out hastily. Mrs. Harley Ball had left a pan of biscuits in order to gaze down the street.

"I'd nnow Amos anywhere by his walk. All the Barlows have that gait, and little Oscar is catching it. Gladys is ahead, as usual—a smart kid, but she needs training. Oscar's more docile, but he's backward and dreamylike. You'll wake him up, though. You have a way with children."

Janet looked startled. "Why, Sylvia, I haven't promised Mr. Barlow yet!"

"But of course you will. You'd better settle everything after dinner. I've started a little fire in the sitting-room fireplace to take off the damp chill. You can show Amos those pictures Addie got on her Western tour. I'll keep the children out, popping corn or something, and I'll show Harley back to the store. But don't look so down-hearted, Janet. Amos is a good provider, and he has no bad habits—steady as the kitchen clock. Such a nice disposition, too. He was patience itself with Charlotte in her long illness.

Janet sighed. "Yes, I know,, Sylvie."

"I know what the matter is. Janet Ransom. I saw you poring over that old book of Mother's. 'Millicent's Romance.' Oh, I remember! It came to her in the shape of a city chap who called her.

'A violet by a mossy stone
Half hidden from the eye.'

"Well, romance didn't come to you, Janet, nor to me, either, unless you count Harley. I believe you are still in the romantic age. Ten years from now you'll be thankful for a good home and a good provider. That's right, Gladys. Come right in folks. And here's Harley, too."

The children were introduced to Janet. Gladys looked at her appraisingly and shook hands politely. Oscar held out his left hand bashfully when prompted by his father.

There was an air of constraint about the little dinner party.

Harley Ball made an attempt at genial conversation.

"You folks been fishing lately?"

"Not I," Amos answered. "I haven't had time."

"I've never been fishing," said Janet.

"That so?" Then you've missed half the romance of life."

"And the other half, too, perhaps," she answered briefly.

Mrs. Ball began to talk volubly about the last supper.

Mrs. Ball opened the sitting-room door with a little hesitation, struggling with the knob.

She need not have hesitated.

Janet and Amos were seated in front of the dying fire intent on the western photographs.

"I can't keep the children back much longer. Gladys is a sharp kid, and she suspects there's something going on. But, gracious! are you people looking at those pictures all this time."

Amos looked surprised and slightly injured.

"I thought you wanted me to see them. There are three more packages."

Mrs. Ball put on her most despairing expression.

"If that isn't just like a man! I suppose Harley would have been just the same. And I thought you would have everything settled."

Janet's face was hard and quiet.

"I don't think there will be anything to settle, Sylvie."

Mrs. Ball faced Amos squarely.

"Now, Amos Barlow," she demanded, "I recommend two other women for you, nice women, too, besides my cousin, Janet. I want to know why you have set your mind on her."

He turned to look at the children in the doorway—Gladys; eager and excited; Oscar, earnest and puzzled—and the smile that transformed his rugged face made it almost beautiful as he answered, "Because I know she will be a good mother to my children."

"There. Janet Ransom! Haven't you sense enough to know that to hear a man like Amos Barlow say that and to know that he means it is worth more than if he said you reminded him of all the flowers in Gray's Botany?"

Janet's face had softened.

A cascade of photographs had fallen to the floor.

"The children!" she breathed. "Don't drive them back, Sylvie." She smiled and reached out her hands to them. She noticed then that Gladys' hair needed cutting and that Oscar had warts on his hands.

"You can settle everything in 10 minutes," declared Mrs. Ball. "Go out and get some flowers for the supper table." She threw a blue scarf over Janet's shoulders. "Why, Janet. Your eyes are blue as ever, and the fire has given you a color. Isn't she pretty, Amos?"

Again the transforming smile.

"She is beautiful," he said with quite fervor.

"Well, go on. I'll keep the children with me."

Janet had thrown an alarm around each of them.

"Oh, let the children come with us, Sylvie. We'll gather a big bowl of white lilacs."

Canadian Bacon to Fill English Needs

It is evident that for the duration of the war Canadian bacon will fill a larger part of the English market than it has in the past. English consumers who have been buying bacon produced in the Baltic States will be obliged to buy some Canadian bacon.

This is both an opportunity and challenge to those engaged in the Canadian bacon industry. The larger market is the opportunity and the challenge is to produce a product that will so satisfy the consumers that when they buy bacon in the future they will ask for Canadian bacon.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of September 22nd are as follows:

TORONTO STOCK CLOSE

Toronto, Sept. 23 (CP)—Food and utility stocks led an upward trend in the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange today. Mining stocks were inclined to lag. Turnover totalled about 190,000 shares.

Canners A, Laura Secord, Canada Vinegars, Westons, Common and Preferred posted gains. Papers held their ground and the senior oils boarded more gains than losses. Distilley stocks were unchanged except for a minor gain for Canadian Industrial Alcohol A. Ford A firmed 3-4 and Massey-Harris 3-8

Royalite was in demand at 40 1-2 or better for a gain of 2 1-2 and turnover was heavy in Home Oil on an advance of 15 cents.

While the golds traded in comparatively small volume some sizeable gains were posted. Sullivan advanced 13 cents, Toburn 5, Lamaque, Macassa and Pamour. Sigma droppetd 20 cents and Pickle Crow 10.

Trade in the base metals was dull. Smelters and Nickel recorded gains and Noranda declined a point. Falconbridge was off and Sherritt weakened slightly.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Stock market buyers got behind rail equipments and specialties in today's brief session and neglected many of the recently strong war issues. Domestic business promise remained sufficiently bright to bolster selected stocks throughout.

Dealings were sluggish. Transfers were around 600,000 shares.

Part of the day's timidity was attributed by brokers to the belief some in Wall Street that the battle over the Neutrality Law in Congress might be drawn out to such an extent as to stem market bullishness.

Stocks stepping into higher ground included Pullman, Westinghouse Airbrake, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Southern Railway, N.Y. Central, Loft, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney and General Motors. Some these backed away at the last.

Lacking much support were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Anaconda, Western Union, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Douglas Aircraft and U.S. Gypsum.

Dome Mines, McIntyre and Lake Shore were among Canadian issues pushing ahead as much as two points. Distillers Corp-Seagrams moved off a fraction. Canada 4s in the bond mrket added 1-4.

Liveweights: Hull $8.

Dressedweights: Hull $10.65, London $10.75 plus transportation, Stratford $10.75 plus transportation.

Gas Rationing In London, Eng.

London, Sept. 23—CP)—Rationing of gasoline swept motor traffic from the streets of London and other British cities today and threatened an acute shortage of taxicabs.

At the same time, the government prepared for general distribution Monday of national registration forms on which food rationing will be based. Registration day for everyone in the United Kingdom is next Friday.

For the ordinary motorist, the new regulations meant a driving range of from 100 to 300 miles a month. For instance, the owner of a small, popular Canadian car of 60 horsepower is allowed 10 gallons a month.

Butter Continues Firm, Eggs Ease

Toronto, Sept. 23—The trend continued firm for butter at Toronto Friday as eggs tended to ease in dull trading.

Prevailing small shipments of fresh receipts, with holders not inclined to offer so readily left available supplies light on the butter market. Buying on the other hand was of a more cautious nature, and the forward buying that existed at the beginning of the war seems to have faded. Ontario No. 1 creamery solids moved at 27¼c.

Quiet trading and slightly increased receipts imparted a weak tone to the egg market. Prices generally maintained former levels, but the tendency was toward lower ground. Despite war risks and increased insurance rates, 1000 cases were inspected and passed for shipment to Great Britain during this week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Sept. 23—Produce market prices here Friday as reported by the Dominion Agriculture Bureau, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, job price, 28c-29c; first grade solids, job price, 27½c-28½c.

Cheese: Ontario white, current receipt price, 12 9-16c - 13 3-16c; Ontario colored, current receipt price, 12 13-16c - 13½c. Receipts, 359 boxes.

Eggs: Graded, inspected shipments in used free cases. A large, 32c - 32½c; A-medium, 30c - 30¼c; A-pullets, 24c - 25c; B-large, 25c; C, 17c. Uninspected shipment ½ cent less. Receipts, 290 cases.

Ontario Goes Off Daylight Saving Time this Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Millions of timepieces will be set back one hour this weekend as towns and cities or North America make the adjustment from daylight saving to standard time.

In Great Britain, however, summer time will remain in effect until midnight, Nov. 19, to give city dwellers the extra hour of daylight to get home from work before the blackout, which makes transportation difficult.

An exception in Canada is Regina, only western centre on daylight time, where summer time will be observed until Oct. 10.

Among the cities across the Dominion which go back to standard time Sunday are Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, Saint John, Moncton and Halifax.

Ontario cities will be solidly back on standard time this week end.

Sudbury changed back Sept. 3 and Hamilton on Sept. 10. But the other centres that observed daylight saving time make the change Sunday.

In most cities of the United States the shift back to standard time will be effected at 2 a.m. Sept. 24.

McDONALD GIVEN DEATH SENTENCE

Chatham Resident Convicted of Murdering Wife—Hangs Nov. 30th.

Catham, Ont., Sept. 23—(CP)—Charles McDonald, 31-year-old shipping clerk, was reported near collapse in his cell today as he awaited hanging Nov. 30 for the beauty-parlor murder of his wife, Adeline.

Sentenced last night by Mr. Justice W. D. Roach when convicted on the murder charge by an Assize Court jury, McDonald was so affected he had to be practically carried from the courtroom by two police constables.

The jury pronounced its verdict, adding a recommendation for mercy, after four hours' deliberation. Mr. Justice Roach did not comment on the recommendation.

The trial climaxed a case that had stirred Chatham ever since McDonald and three of his wife's friends came upon the woman's body on the floor of her darkened beauty salon the night of May 1.

With a bullet wound through the breast, the body lay in a pool of blood with a towel over the wound, witnesses said. A rifle, rented by McDonald the same day, lay beside it.

Former Beauty Queen

Mrs. McDonald, crowned "Miss Chatham" in a beauty contest in 1930, was a successful business woman. She and her husband were popular in the city's younger set.

W. H. Bragg, a Chatham lawyer, testified that a week before she died Mrs. McDonald came to him to have separation papers drawn up. Acquaintances said that Mrs. McDonald spent the next week in Windsor and Detroit and a copy of a telegram from the woman to her husband, demanding that he sign the separation papers, was produced in court.

Dr. I. H. Erb, Toronto pathologist, testified that in his opinion Mrs. McDonald could not have shot herself, judging by a comparison of the length of the rifle and the distance from the wound to the woman's finger-tips.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, Sept. 21, 1939.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville.

Dear Sir,—

In your edition of September 19, page 2, column 3, first paragraph, I read: "....the committee reported to the Council that Ray Cornell, "Pat" Cornell and Croft Smith who sat in for the ratepayers on the discussion were perfectly satisfied with arrangements made by the Company to protect their interests and were quite willing that the work should be proceeded with."

The above excerpt refers to the laying down of a pipe-line in South John Street by the Shell Oil Company.

This is an incorrect statement told you, presumably by a member of the Council or by somebody with authority to speak in their name.

At no time did the above mentioned delegates express their satisfaction with the means adopted for the protection of the ratepayers' interests, nor did they give the seal of their approval to the projected laying down of this pipeline.

We have, on the contrary, taken every possible step and used all means at our command to put a stop to those proceedings.

Our wishes aren't "clouded in mystery." The Council has been made manifestly acquainted with them. We have already applied to the Provincial Board of Health for redress against the action taken over our heads by the Council who granted permission to the Shell Oil Company to lay the pipe-line without previous reference to, or consultation with the citizens whose interests were directly and vitally affected by this measure.

We are determined to carry this issue up to the very highest jurisdiction, rather than allow ourselves to be tamely dispossessed of our rights by the very people who are supposed to protect them and to whom we pay our rates and taxes.

We are advised, on reliable authority, that the pipe-line business is no longer regulated according to the whims and fancies of municipal authorities, but is subject to Federal by-laws, jealously guarded and stringently enforced.

Incidentally, if I may be permitted to hazard an opinion, it seems to me, though I am not strictly conversant with such matters, that there was an easy solution to the whole scheme, a solution which would have protected the ratepayers' properties and saved the Shell Oil Company a deal of unnecessary expense.

Instead of carrying the oil up to the tanks, why not move the tanks down to the bay shore?

Mr. Editor, you have now got both sides of this moot question. May I suggest that, in fairness to us you print this letter and give it, in your paper, the same prominence as you gave to the article out of which it arose.

Yours very truly,

RAYMOND CORNELL,
"PAT" CORNELL
CROFT M. SMITH.

Editor's Note: The committee of the City Council on Monday, who sat in with the ratepayers and the Shell Oil Company officials, reported to Council that arrangements were satisfactory and the Council voted that no action be taken on the petition presented.

Hitler Visits Western Front; Attacks Increase

Paris, Sept. 23—(AP)— Military dispatches today said German attacks near Saarbrucken "coincided with the presence on the western front of Adolf Hitler and Colonel-General Walther Von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army."

Hitler's intention of visiting the western fortifications had been reported for several days. Von Brauchitsch recently returned from the eastern front.

GEN. VON FRITSCH KILLED IN ACTION

Fuehrer Hitler Orders National Funeral Service for Commander Killed in Poland Friday

Berlin, Sept. 23 (CP)—Fuehrer Hitler today ordered national funeral services for Colonel-General Werner Von Fritsch, former Commander-in-Chief of the German army, who was killed during fighting before Warsaw yesterday. He was 59.

General Von Fritsch, who left his high army post Feb. 4, 1938, at the time of Hitler's shakeup of the German army, was given one of the key commands when the Fuehrer sent the Reichswehr into Poland.

Announcement of the General's death was made by the Fuehrer's general headquarters, through the German News Agency. The exact manner of his death was not revealed.

The Feb. 4, 1938, army shakeup came slightly more than a month before the German invasion of Austria. At that time Hitler himself assumed the title of Supreme Commander of the armed forces and ousted War Minister Werner Von Blomberg.

Colonel General Walther Von Brauchitsch replaced General Von Fritsch as army Commander-in-Chief.

General Reinstated

General Von Fritsch subsequently was reinstated as Honorary Commander of the 12th Artillery Regiment in "recognition of great service in the rebuilding of the Third Reich."

He was perhaps the only man of prominence in Germany who could claim that Adolf Hitler sought his support even after they had quarrelled.

When Von Blomberg married a woman whose family background was not up to the standard of the German army, blunt General Von Fritsch did not hesitate to tell the Fuehrer that Von Blomberg's continuation in office was impossible.

Von Blomberg resigned, but soon after Von Fritsch also resigned.

The reason given was poor health, but those who knew Von Fritsch said he was out of tune with Hitler's breath-taking pace of remilitarizing the Rhineland in March, 1936, and of annexing Austria in March, 1938.

By The Associated Press

Idol of the German army, Colonel-General Werner von Fritsch, killed in action near Warsaw, was sent to the eastern front in a comparatively minor role after reputedly falling out with Adolf Hitler over the annexation of Austria in 1938.

Small, sabre-backed, be-monocled, with a chestful of gleaming medals and an ice-cold eye, General von Fritsch appeared a movie director's ideal of the Prussian officer type.

As such, he scoffed at Hitler's brown-shirted "amateurs" — sometimes too openly for his own good —and the story goes that when Hitler announced his intention of seizing Austria, Von Fritsch told him frigidly:—

"If you do, Britain and France will march and you'll get a terrible licking."

Detested Politics

Germany's armed forces, he said, were not then ready to face the consequences of risking war; but Hitler dismissed him and carried through the bluff which brought only diplomatic protests from Britain and France.

A professional fighter with 41 years of service in the German army, Von Fritsch detested politics.

His blunt, contemptuous attitude towards Hitler's Brown Shirts was anathema to the Fuehrer; but he was powerful enough, nevertheless, to force the showdown which resulted in the execution of Captain Ernst von Roehm, Hitler's colleague, and the exclusion of Brown Shirts from the Officers' Corps.

Roehm had insisted his "untrained amateurs" should be incorporated wholesale into the officers' corps.

"Why don't you want me as an officer?" he demanded of von Fritsch at a reception.

The general fixed him with a chill eye. "Because," he said, "you are not a soldier"—and turned on his heel.

Despite his iron severity, the rank and file worshipped him. In barracks countless German soldiers had a photo of von Fritsch over their beds as theid "beau ideal" of what a good Prussian soldier should be.

FINNISH STEAMER SUNK

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Finnish steamship Martti-Ragnar, loaded with woodpulp for England, was reported sunk today by a submarine off the southern coast of Norway.

Members of the crew, all safe and unhurt, said the submarine was German.

It was said to have stopped the 2,262-ton vessel off the coast town of Arendal, ordered it to approach territorial waters so the crew could reach shore easily, then set fire to the ship by placing explosives in the hold.

"GREAT ACTIVITY"

German guns along the Lauter river—which recently had been quiet—opened fire on French batteries in the vicinity of Wissembourg. In this area, the Lauter forms the boundary between France and Germany.

Military information from the Western Front said the Germans had massed troops hurriedly brought from Poland and sent them into almost immediate action against the French.

The dispatches also reported concentrations of German aircraft along the east bank of the Rhine river, opposite the main ramparts of the French Maginot Line. The planes, these reports said, were in addition to previously reported aviation concentrations near Aauchen.

Action Not Cleared

The morning communique said there was "great activity" during the night on the western front, particularly between the Saar River and the region southeast of Zweibrucken and on the Lauter River.

Preliminary information from the front failed to make clear whether the German attacks were isolated actions or might be considered the large-scale drive the French have been expecting.

French sources reported, meanwhile, that the government is speeding production of mechanized military units for fear Germany may strike through neutral countries in an effort to turn the flanks of the Maginot line.

(German propaganda minister Paul Goebbels claimed two days ago that Germany has no intention of violating the neutrality of Belgium, Holland or Luxembourg, "either now or in the future."

War Council Meeting

Observers believed the speed-up measures were decided upon at a meeting of the allies' war council in England yesterday.

They said the lessons learned from the swift advance of mechanized German and Russian units through Poland had emphasized the need for adequate anti-tank and anti-aircraft defences at the extreme ends of the Maginot fortifications.

German assurances that the frontiers of neighboring neutrals would not be violated were not taken seriously by French commentators.

The French declared Germany has two choices—a dash through neutral states or a frontal assault against advance French positions between the Moselle and Rhine rivers in an attempt to remove the present menace to the Saar mining regions.

There was increasing evidence a major engagement might develop with extreme suddenness. The question of which side would take the initiative remained a matter of conjecture.

Advertise For Blood Donors.

Trains continued to discharge fresh French and British troops, as well as munitions, at strategic points and behind the lines, French hospitals advertised for blood donors to stock up on transfusion supplies.

The Pasteur Institute said it was ready to provide 50,000 doses of anti-tetanus serum daily, compared with 20,000 during the last war.

Germans were reported hauling up heavy guns near the Swiss border, where the two armies face each other across the Rhine River.

Possible extent of the Russian understanding with Germany apparently was causing the French some concern, particularly with reference to the military and economic aid Russia could give the Reich through her back door.

Look On Surprises.

Some French sources suggested, however, that Russia, as a neighbor to Germany and with a border meeting Rumania and Hungary, could prove a boomerang to the Nazis as well as an aid.

These sources said even more Russian "surprises" are expected here.

Lucien Bourgues, writing in the newspaper Petit Parisien, said the Nazi delivery of the larger part of Poland to the Russians was a betrayal of Europe by its creation of a Bolshevik "threat" on the flanks of the continent.

Paid Exorbitant Price.

"The Reich paid Russia an exorbitant price for the (Soviet-Nazi non-aggression) pact and the economic services Berlin expects from Moscow in an effort to avoid the effects of the Franco-British blockade," Bourgues said.

The noted Foreign Affairs commentator, Pertinax, commenting on the division of Poland in the newspaper L'Ardre, said that "Hitler must really have despaired of resisting the Anglo - Franco - Russian coalition which menaced him this spring and summer to pay a ransom of this size."

Reports from Poland that Warsaw still was holding out were hailed in Paris. The French claimed the Polish campaign already had cost the Germans 150,000 casualties.

German Losses Heavy.

The estimate of the German losses was made last night in a broadcast speech by Jean Giraudoux, French General Commissioner of Information. Giraudoux also said the Germans had lost 400 to 600 planes and 600 to 700 first-line pilots, who are harder to replace than planes.

During his broadcast, Giraudoux told the nation the "first phase of the war is ended," and that Germany faces "a war of which it has lost command."

ENEMY SUBS

Representing France at the meeting were Premier Daladier, General Mauric Gamelin, Munitions Minister Rtoul Dautry and Admiral Jean Darlan.

Britain was represented by Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax; Lord Chatfield, Minister for Co-ordination of Defence, and Major General Hastings Ismay, Secretary of the Imperial Defence Committee.

Meanwhile, the Admiralty sought to tighten the naval blockade to keep vital supplies from reaching Germany and issued new detailed instructions to British ships passing through the Dover Straits.

"Cynicism" Criticized.

The British press criticized the "cynicism" of the Nazi-Soviet territorial bargain in Poland.

Joseph Stalin, said the Daily Express, "does none of the fighting and collects half of the loot. But Hitler is always ready to make a bargain when it suits him."

"All pretense that the Soviet government is merely 'liberating' the White Russians and Ukrainians is dropped," the Daily Herald declared. "A huge area with an almost pure Polish population comes again under the Russian rule."

Bordering neutral states are wondering how far beyond the boundaries of Poland the "shareout" goes, the paper said.

The News Chronicle said that on many previous occasions Hitler has prided himself on acquiring new territory without fighting for it. "In Poland he has fought for new territory without acquiring it. Moscow has been more than a match for him."

IT'S NOT ALWAYS THE DRIVER'S FAULT

Careless Pedestrians and Cyclists Cause Many Fatal Accidents

Last year 8,790 pedestrians and 3,266 cyclists were killed or injured on highways in Canada. Official investigations proved that a large percentage of these accidents were caused by the carelessness of the pedestrians and cyclists rather than the driver of the automobile.

Don't put all the responsibility on the driver's shoulders. For your sake and his be careful.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

"How silly of me. I'm so sorry," she apologized, and impulsively touched his hand in a mute caress, which made him smile again.

The orchestra was playing the "Lambeth Walk," and Roy started up.

"We must dance this. It's too good to miss."

"If we can find room," she said resignedly.

They squeezed their way between the closely-packed tables, but they had only danced a few steps, when Elizabeth suddenly gave a little cry.

"Oh—someone has stepped on my frock, Look!"

She held up the torn silk for Roy's inspection.

"Clumsy idiots!" he said indignantly. "Can it be mended?"

"I'll ask the cloakroom attendant."

He went with her as far as the door.

"You go back to the table," she said breathlessly. "I won't be long. She'll just stitch it together for me it can be done properly afterwards."

She broke into a little run as he turned away, and almost ran into the arms of a man who was coming towards the restaurant.

Elizabeth drew back swiftly with a little smile of apology, which died on her lips as she looked up into the face of—Kim Lawless....

For a moment she just stared at him, her lips parted, her color fading treacherously. Then she said, as if it were the only thing of importance in the world:

"Someone stepped on my skirt—the room is so crowded. I'm just going to see if it can be mended."

The shadow of a smile crossed his face though he looked a little pale.

"Most things can be mended—can't they?" he asked. But she passed him without answering and went on her way.

She felt curiously breathless and her heart was racing as if she had been badly frightened, but she stood at quiet attention while the cloakroom attendant made a rather clumsy job of the torn frock and snapped off the thread.

"There! It ought not to get any worse," she said consolingly.

Elizabeth thanked her and turned to the mirror, surprised at her pallor. She rubbed her cheks vigorously, but her hands felt cold, though a moment ago she had thought the dance-room unbearably hot.

"Now I suppose I must go, she thought. I suppose I must go back."

It was a moment before she could force herself to gather up her handbag and handkerchief and to retrace her steps. No band was playing just then, but the babble of laughter and voices buzzed around her as she threaded her way through the closely-packed tables.

"I've just seen Lawless," was Roy's cheery greeting. "He's here with a party. Say; he'll come across presently to have a word with us."

INSTALMENT 19

Elizabeth took the chair that "Oh, will he?"

Selby had drawn out for her.

"Frock all right?" Roy enquired.

"Yes, it's rather a cobble, but it doesn't show much. Fill my glass, please, I'm thirsty."

"Told you you would be," he said. "I expect you're hungry too. Here, waiter!"

Elizabeth glanced furtively round the room as though in search of an enemy, but she could not see Lawless among the crowd. She picked up the spray of lilies and held them against her lips, and suddenly she was back again in the walled garden at High Chimneys standing before the sundial which bore the words, "Love makes Time pass away. Time makes Love pass away."

Odd that she should think of them now, for there had been no lilies there.

"Lawless is with the Desmonds," Roy was saying. "Aren't they friends of your sister's?"

"Yes, I think they are, but I don't know them very well."

"I can't stand Mrs. Desmond," Roy said boyishly. "She's such a cat. She said all sorts of things about Penelope after her engagement to Lawless was broken off. Sour grapes, I expect."

"What sort of things?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Well—she made out that Lawless jilted her and said there was another girl he'd been running about with and Penelope wouldn't stand for it."

"Is that such a very dreadful thing to say?" Elizabeth asked quietly. "It might be the truth."

He looked at her with faint suspicion, before he answered bluntly:

"Lawless isn't that sort of chap; he'd play fair."

"He's lucky to have such a champion," Elizabeth said.

Roy smiled as if the words pleased him.

"Mrs. Desmond and I had quite a flare-up about it," he told her complacently. "And when I'd made her thoroughly angry, she went one better and offered to bet me anything I liked that they were married."

Elizabeth raised her beautiful eyes to his face, not understanding.

"Who were married?" she asked.

"Lawless and Penelope. She talked a lot of rubbish about a runaway match—not that I believe it" he added a little shamefacedly.

Elizabeth's eyes did not falter, and she was even conscious of a faint amusement because Roy looked so embarrassed.

"But how can Mrs. Desmond possibly know—even if it is true?" she asked.

He shook his head.

"I don't know. Except that at one time she and Penelope were awfully thick, and Penelope may have told her."

There was a short silence before Elizabeth said slowly.

"There was no need for a runaway, match. Nobody objected to Penelope's marrying Mr. Lawless, did they? I think it's a silly thing to say."

"People do silly things sometimes," Roy answered. "Especially when they're keen on someone. I suppose it makes things a bit more romantic."

He looked at her and smiled boyishly.

"I'd rather have a runaway marriage myself than all the fuss and dandangle of a wedding anyway. I loathe weddings." He seemed struck by her silence for he asked hurriedly: "I say, you're not offended because I told you what Mrs. Desmond said, are you?"

"Why should I be offended? It's nothing to me."

Roy looked relieved. "Come and dance," he invited as the band began to play. "Oh, goodness, here's the waiter with the food. I suppose we'd better eat it or it will get cold." He peered down at the dishes which were being set before them. "What is it, do you think?" he inquired interestedly.

Elizabeth picked up the menu card.

"It's something a la something," she told him. "I'm no good at French."

"Why don't they use English names?" Roy grumbled. "Hullo, talk of the angels—here they are."

He rose reluctantly to his feet as Lawless and Mrs. Desmond approached, but Elizabeth still studied the menu.

"Hullo!" Mrs. Desmond greeted them. "Hullo, Elizabeth! How are you? And how is poor Penelope?"

There was exaggerated anxiety in her voice as she spoke the last words.

"I've heard all about her and I'm terribly distressed, though we haven't met since she came home. Really she has no luck, simply no luck, has she?"

"Penelope is very well, thank you," Elizabeth answered.

Mrs. Desmond shrugged her shoulders. She was a very thin, rather overdressed young woman, with sharp pale blue eyes which seemed to be forever on the search for something which other people were trying to hide.

"One hears such exaggerated stories," she murmured, tapping Roy smartly on the arm. "Are you going to ask me to dance, Roy?"

Roy glanced down at his plate and said at once:

"Tell the waiter to keep it hot. They're used to it." And before he could protest further, she took his hand and dragged him away.

"Do you care to dance, Elizabeth?", Lawless asked.

Elizabeth shook her head.

"Do you mind? I'm really rather hungry and the food looks good."

"Do you mind—if I stay?"

"Of course not."

But although she had said she was hungry she made no attempt to touch her supper, but sat leaning back in her chair, her eyes on the crowded scene before her, and she did not look at Lawless even when he said:

"I am glad to see you again."

"It's a long time since we met," she answered.

"Two months," he agreed.

"We were in Paris seven weeks", she told him. "I like Paris. You said I should, didn't you? Of course, it was rather spoiled because Penelope was so ill, but—I liked Paris."

"I am glad Penelope is better," he said formally.

Elizabeth's long lashes flickered. Better! She visualized her sister's tragic figure bowed over the silent piano keys.

It seemed like an eternity before Lawless spoke again.

"I waited in vain—for the telephone to ring."

The faintest color dyed her pale face,

"It must have been a cruel disappointment," she said with a touch of sarcasm.

"It was," he agreed. "I thought about ringing you, to ask for an explanation."

"I am glad you didn't," she answered.

He half turned his seat to look at her.

"What have I done?" he demanded bluntly.

At last she forced herself to meet his eyes.

"What have you done?" Nothing! I only said I am glad you didn't ring me, that's all, and I am glad."

"Why?"

"Because—of Penelope," she said quietly, and she felt faintly amazed that she could speak so calmly with his gaze still upon her.

"Penelope was in existence before you went to Paris," he reminded her hardily. "And then—"

She managed a little laugh.

"And then there was a fog," she said flippantly. "And everything was different."

"There seems still to be a fog," he submitted dryly, and then as she half shrugged her shoulders he went on: "It won't do, Elizabeth. I want the truth, whatever it is. We parted as friends, and one cannot break a compact of friendship without adequate reason."

"What a grand speech!" she protested flippantly. "All about nothing! Will you please pass the toast?"

He did so and at last she made a valiant attack on the "something a la something."

Mrs. Desmond and Roy struggled past them.

"If this is dancing," she called out, "give me a wrestling match!"

Elizabeth nodded.

"I love her frock," she said when they were out of earshot.

Lawless laughed shortly.

"That is the most insincere thing I have ever heard you say," he told her.

"I'm improving," she answered gaily. "I've found it doesn't do to be too sincere about anything." She pushed her plate away. "I'll dance now, if you'll ask me," she invited.

Better than prolonging the conversation, Elizabeth told herself recklessly, and as they pushed their way into the crowd she glanced up at his face, and a little pang of remorse wrung her heart.

INSTALMENT 20

Was it fair to condemn Kim just because of Penelope and because of Roy's idly repeated gossip? Elizabeth realized painfully that it was not as if she and Penelope had a great affection for each other as some sisters had.

Then suddenly she knew that it was really nothing to do with Penelope, but that it was her own bitter jealousy which was driving her, and that it would have been the same no matter what other girl had once shared Kim's affection.

Was this how people always felt when they were in love? Somehow, she could not believe that any other woman's heart could ache so intolerably as hers was aching now, just as she found it impossible to believe it could be true when people said that love died, that a day always came when it no longer mattered, when the pain had gone and one merely felt a little ashamed to look back and remember.

She could not visualise a day when the sight of this man and the sound of his name could fail to stir her senses, when now the very strength of her love for him could make her cruel, could make her long to know that he was suffering too.

And then suddenly, as the music stopped, she felt his arm tighten around her and, before she could protest, he had swept her out of the crowded room into the comparatively deserted foyer.

Dazed and breathless, she raised bewildered eyes to his face..

"Don't quarrel with me, Elizabeth," Lawless said with deep intensity. "Tell me what I have done—you mean everything in the world to me—only tell me what I have done!"

But before there was time for her to reply, or even to realize his words, Roy came helter-skelter after them.

"Hi, you! Stealing my partner!" he said. He gave Lawless a playful dig. "Haven't you got enough beautiful ladies of your own without sneaking mine?" And he dragged Elizabeth away.

"Like his cheek!" he protested. "Though I can't blame him for trying to give Mrs. Desmond the slip." He laughed. "She and I nearly ended in a free fight. Hanged if I know why on earth she wanted to dance with me!"

He looked comically down at Elizabeth.

"Are you tired?" he asked quickly. "You're quite pale."

"I think I'm always pale," Elizabeth said. She hunted for a powder-puff.

"What time is it?" she asked.

"One o'clock. Want to go home?"

"I think I ought to."

"All right, I'll just get the bill. Enjoying the evening?" he asked hopefully.

She nodded

"Very much indeed. It's done me a lot of good, and I've been thinking. I might come to High Chimneys again, after all—if I'm invited, I mean."

He looked delighted.

"I'll see you are invited," he declared.

He tried to hold her hand going home in the car, but she gently repulsed him, and he said with a long-suffering sigh:

"There I go, you see! Give me an inch and I take an ell."

Before they parted, he had extracted a promise that the visit to High Chimneys should be as soon as possible.

"Next week?"

"If your mother will have me."

"Oh, she'll have you right enough!"

"Then good night and thank you so very much."

Roy blew her a kiss as she vanished into the house.

"Good night—and bless you!"

It seemed a long way up the stairs to her room. Elizabeth felt that she had suddenly grown unutterably weary, very step was an effort.

She crept past Penelope's door, but when her own was shut and locked behind her, she made no effort to undress. She stood in front of the long mirror, staring at her reflection with sombre eyes.

She was looking weary now. Even her dress seemed tumbled and unbeautiful, with its hurriedly mended hem dejectedly trailing the floor.

"Most things can be mended," Kim Lawless had said, and now in her heart Elizabeth answered him. "Not everything."

"You mean everything in the world to me."

She could hear him saying that, too, and for a moment her sensitive face softened wonderfully before quickly the unkind thought followed. Perhaps he had once said the same thing to Penelope. Back came the burning jealousy and youthful sense of outrage like a child who feels it has been ill-treated. She wept as she tore the frock from her slender shoulders and crept into bed to sob herself to sleep.

At breakfast the following morning there was no Penelope.

"She said her head ached, and so I advised her not to get up," Miss Thornley told Elizabeth. "You might go and see how she is presently and try to cheer her up."

Miss Thornley always made the same remark about trying to cheer Penelope up, usually in the discouraged voice of one who knows the futility of her request.

"Did you enjoy yourself last night?" she asked.

"Very much."

Miss Thornley eyed her younger niece critically and decided that her looks belied her words.

She sighed, wondering whether her responsibilities were to continue indefinitely. "I was so different when I was a girl," she thought impatiently.

Elizabeth heard the sigh and roused herself.

"Roy wants me to go back to High Chimneys next week."

Miss Thornley beamed.

"Now, that's a splendid idea. It will do you all the good in the world. I hope you have accepted."

"He said that his mother would write to me."

"Such a delgihtful family, the Selbys," Miss Thornley said, though she knew very little of them. "I only wish you could persuade Penelope to go with you. I am sure Mrs. Selby would be kind enough to extend the invitation."

"If you think she would care about it," Elizabeth answered, but her heart sank at the thought.

"I am quite sure she won't care about it," Miss Thornley declared. "Still, you might make the suggestion."

Elizabeth went up to Penelope's room and knocked softly.

"Come in."

Penelope was sitting up in bed without any sign of a headache.

"Are you better?" Elizabeth asked. "Aunt Thornley said—"

Her sister broke in. "I know, I told her I had a headache but I haven't. It was the only excuse I could think of."

She looked at the younger girl with a faint smile.

"At least, if I stay in bed, I can't be told to rouse myself and take an interest in life," she added dryly.

Elizabeth stood at the foot of the bed feeling a little at a loss as she always did in Penelope's presence.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she asked.

"Do you mean can you hold my hands and dry my tears?" Penelope asked briskly. "If so, let me assure you that I never shed tears and that I dislike having my hand held. But you might, if you will be so good, look in the drawer over there, the second drawer, and bring me a small leather box. Wait a moment, it's locked. Here are the keys.

She tossed the keys towards her sister, and Elizabeth flushed a little as she picked them up.

"Were you very bored last night?" Penelope inquired.

"No. I enjoyed it very much."

"In that boy's company?" Penelope said cynically. "I can't think how you can tolerate him. He gets on my nerves."

"He's kind," Elizabeth defended him. "Which key is it?"

"The small one. Are you going to marry him, Elizabeth?"

Elizabeth laughed. "Of course I'm not."

She found the right key and fitted it into the lock.

"Is this the box?" She turned around with the small leather case in her hand, caught her sleeve on the head of the key and let the box fall, scattering its contents in all directions.

Penelope gave an exclamation of annoyance.

"How clumsy you are." She threw back the bedclothes and came to help collect the scattered trinkets.

Elizabeth was already down on her knees, a little flushed and apologetic.

"I'm sorry, I caught my sleeve—" She sat back on her heels. "Is this all? Oh no, there's another ring." Sh picked it up from the thickness of the rug and held it out in the palm of her hand.

"Why, it's a wedding ring," she said.

INSTALMENT 21

Penelope snatched the ring from Elizabeth's hand.

"Yes,, it's a wedding-ring," she echoed. "Is there any reason why it shouldn't be?"

She slipped it on to her third finger, holding her thin hand outstretched for her sister's inspection.

"'A trap to catch a dream,'" she said bitterly. "No wonder married women refuse to wear them nowadays. They're such damning evidence."

She sat down on the side of the bed, still critically examining her hand, and there was a queer silence before Elizabeth asked slowly, still kneeling on the floor:

"Penelope—are you married?"

Penelope looked down at her and laughed.

"Am I married? You sound like the deluded heroine in an old-fashioned drama!"

She flung herself into a dramatic pose with her thin arms flung high above her head as she cried mockingly, "Are you married? Answer me! Answer me!"

Her arms suddenly fell limply again and there was a tragic silence before she said suddenly:

"Yes, I am married—married! Married! Married!"

Again her voice rose shrilly as it had risen that afternoon in Paris when she cried out Kim Lawless's name.

Elizabeth gave a little choking cry.

"Penelope!"

She stared at her sister with frozen eyes, and suddenly Penelope covered her face with her hands.

"I wish they had let me die," she said, with the quietness of despair. "Why didn't they let me die?"

X X X

Mrs. Selby glanced towards the open window with a frown on her pleasant face.

From the garden came a tumult of shrill voices and laughter, and presently a girlish form dashed across the lawn with Roy in hot pursuit. When they had passed out of sight, she said with a sigh:

SWITZERLAND RELIES ON HER ARMY TO SAFEGUARD HER NEUTRALITY

Believing in preparedness Switzerland recently organized its army for greater efficiency. With a population of 4,066,400 Switzerland maintains proportionately the largest armed force in Europe, at the largest per capita military expenditure of any country in the world. A recent decree extends the liability to serve in the Swiss army in an emergency up to the age of 60. Since the Swiss army has no general in peace time, the Federal Assembly convening in war emergency on August 30, elected Colonel Henri Guison, INSET, as head of the Swiss army. R.A.F. flying boat is shown here circling the torpedoed British freighter Kensington Court which was sunk off the British coast by a Nazi submarine. Note the lifeboat, LEFT, pulling away from the sinking freighter. Two of these R. A. F. flying boats landed by the stricken vessel and saved the entire crew. This is thought to be the first time that such a rescue was ever effected. This picture was radioed to New York and then transmitted by Phonephoto.

Britain Answers Mussolini's Suggestion to Call War Off By Intensifying Preparations

Chamberlain's Statement 'to Redeem Europe from Perpetual and Recurring Fear of German Aggression' Still Holds Good

MAISKY CALLED IN

Russian Ambassador to Britain Asked to Clarify Soviet's Aims in Eastern Europe by Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—Problems of munitions and supply occupied the Government today as the Royal Air Force continued to pepper Germany with pamphlets telling the German people that the war was against their Nazi leaders and not themselves.

Prime Minister Chamberlain and his ministers of supply and labor, Leslie Burgin and Ernest Brown, talked with Major Clement Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, Labor party leaders at 10 Downing Street. The interview was believed to be in preparation for tomorrow's first meeting of the council of ten, the group that will control munitions during the war.

Criticisms of the Supply Ministry by Labor newspapers were believed discussed. Further consideration may be given them at tomorrow's meeting.

Munitions Problems

Munitions was one of the Government's most vexing problems during the last war. Not until Winston Churchill became Minister of Munitions did munitions manufacture begin on a systemized basis.

London afternoon newspapers reported in headlines: "Our planes make daylight flight over Germany." They featured accounts of the Royal Air Force flight Sunday which dropped pamphlets on Western and Northwestern Germany. All the British planes returned safely, according to the Government's report.

Genuine 'White Paper'

A German "white paper" giving the Reich's view of the last days before the war brougnt a charge from the British Government that Fuehrer Hitler and Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop did not wish to reproduce an accurate account of the last negotiations between Germany, Britain, Poland and France.

Germany's submarine warfare accounted for two more allied ships and 11 lives. In each case the U-boat was beleived to have escaped.

A British freighter, the 4,646-ton Hazelside, was attacked and sunk off the Irish coast with a loss of 11 seamen, according to the Government's report.

Watchers on the shore got their first sight of the war at sea when the French Collier Phryne, of 2,660 tons, was sunk just off the British coast. Destroyers steamed to the scene as the crew of 24 reached shore in coast guard lifeboats and circled the site of the attack but no mention of successful retaliation was made by the Government.

Britain, meanwhile, answered Premier Mussolini's suggestion to call off the war with Germany's occupation of most of Poland by intensifying her preparations for a fight to the finish.

An authoritative commentary on Mussolini's speech in Rome Saturday declared Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement of Britain's war aim—"to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression"—still held good.

Britain remained determined, it said, despite the complication of Soviet Russia's occupation of eastern Poland.

Informed source said Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, who called Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky to his office for an hour's interview last night, had requested clarification of Soviet aims in eastern Europe.

Villages Behind Belgo-German Frontier Crowded With Germans

Manchester, England, Sept. 25 (CP)—The Manchester Guardian today said "prodigious concentration of troops is now going on" in the region around Aachen, behind the German-Belgian frontier.

"All villages are crowded with soldiers," the paper reported. Roads are choked with men on the march and with army transport. Vast numbers of lorries packed with Infantry pass by. Inhabitants have had orders to be ready for evacuation.

In Aachen itself old people and women with small children have been ordered to notify the authorities of the approximate value of their household goods. Some of the smaller towns are to be evacuated altogether.

'In several places inhabitants waited for transport to arrive to take them away. But no transport came, apparently because movement of troops made it impossible. Inhabitants were then told that they must remain in readiness to leave, though there could be no certainty as to when transport would come.

'It is this prolonged uncertainty that has produced 'evacuation fever'—a condition of suppressed excitement at times resembling panic. Nervous tension is such that some observers declare that the people seem to be going mad.

"In the region around Aachen there has been a steady deterioration of the quantity and quality of food during the last week or two. Prices have begun to soar, especially of the simpler luxuries. A glass of beer for example, which cost 25 pfennigs two or three weeks ago now costs 50. Ice cream that cost 10 or 15 pfennigs now costs 40. A cup of coffee that cost 15 pfennigs now costs 50.

FRENCH ARTILLERY OPENS FIRE ON NAZI WESTWALL

Large Calibre Shells Being Dropped on Casemates of German Line

GERMANY REPLIES

French Tactics Designed to Lure Germans Into an Offensive

By ROY PORTER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Sept. 25 (AP)—French troops struck at German positions in the Haardt Mountains today under cover of heavy fire by artillery which French dispatches said was bombarding main fortifications of Germany's west wall.

French troops were hitting at a Haardt Mountain road which winds through some of the most rugged terain of the western front. A continuation of the Vosges Range, the Haardts cover a 20-mile sector between the German town of Pirmasens and French Wissembourg.

Apparently the French believed they had found a weak spot in Germany's fortifications where the Germans had depended on rugged country as a protection.

Military advices said shells screamed across the Rhine for the first time since the first two days of the war. The Siegfried and Maginot lines are separated only by the river along the southern half of the German French frontier.

These reports said French batteries were dropping large-calibre shells on casemates of the German line.

Enemy artillery replied, but dispatches said no direct hits were made on French advance posts on German territory.

Most of the artillery action was reported centred south of the German town of Saarbruecken and along the Lauter river, where the main French and German fortifications are closest.

Dispatches said Sunday night was comparatively quiet along the entire front as the Germans failed to renew assaults they have been launching during the past few days with small bodies of troops between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers.

Military Leaders Convinced Conquest of Poland Cannot be Used as Stepping Stone to Peace

SUB SINKS DESTROYER

Eight French Planes Shot Down on Western Front Also Claim of German High Command

(By Robert Schildbach Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Sept. 25 (AP)—Sinking of British destroyer by a German submarine was claimed in a communique today as German military leaders were reported preparing for operations on the Western Front.

The communique did not identify the destoyer and gave no details of the sinking, but declared maritime warfare was "yielding good results."

The same announcement claimed eight French planes had been shot down during an air fight in the west, where, it added, there had been "reconnoitring activity and artillery activity on both sides" at various undisclosed points.

German military leaders were said to be convinced that occupation of a large area of Poland could not be used as a stepping stone to a possible peace with France and Great Britain. These quarters said the high command, which announced the Polish campaign officially "ended," was concentrating its attention on the Western Front.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The coming week will probably reveal something of the plans of Allied and German general staffs for operations on the Western Front. Sooner or later and, most likely sooner, a big offensive will be launched there. It remains to be seen which side will first attack on a big scale, and towards what objective the attack will be directed.

Two items in the weekend news indicated developments may be expected this week. One was an official declaration from Berlin that the Polish campaign could be considered finished. The other was official word that the British expeditionary force was preparing to go into action.

The concentration of German forces at Aachen, opposite the junction of the Netherlands and Belgian borders with the western border of Germany, last week led some observers to predict a German march through the two neutral countries. Aachen is considerably north of the present battle area which runs from Luxembourg to the Rhine where the Franco-German border follows in an east-west direction.

Defensive Precaution

The concentration at Aachen, however, might also be a defensive precaution against an Allied thrust into the highly industrialized German district lying west of the Rhine. French operations so far have been almost all in a northerly direction pointed at this area and little attempt has been made to move on the other half of the border which follows the Rhine in a general north-south direction.

If the Allies gained control of the left bank of the Rhine by a northerly push German economy would suffer a severe blow. The push would, of course, involve breaking through the Siegfried Line. The great industries of such centres as Koblenz, Cologne, Duesseldorf and Essen all lie on the west side of the Rhine or within artillery range of the west side.

This district is the Rhineland, which was demilitarized under the Treaty of Versailles, and it may be recalled that the first aggressive move on the part of the Hitler Regime was the remilitarization and fortification of this area. Until that was accomplished no other project was attempted.

German Anti-Aircraft Guns Fire Tracer Bullets into Sky Bursting Like Giant Candles

German Zeppelin Works Given Taste of British Might but Actual Details Lacking

BOMBERS WARNED

Swiss Frontier Patrols Fire Sky Rockets to Warn Planes Against Invading Swiss Territory

Romanshorn, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (AP)—One of Germany's main airplane motor factories was reported today to have been put out of action by bombs from French or British planes staging a raid on the zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, Germany, last night.

The first alarm in the Friedrichshafen area—five miles across Lake Constance from here—started the searchlights sweeping the skies at 8:15 p.m. (2:15 p.m. EST) and a number of anti-aircraft batteries on the German side opened fire. Explosions of a few bombs could be heard here.

Thirty Bombs Dropped.

The main part of the raid apparently came when a second alarm was sounded at 11 p.m. Military observers on the Swiss side, judging by the dull roars heard here, estimated at least thirty bombs were dropped by the raiders despite heavy anti-aircraft fire, which included tracer bullets.

Reports reaching here said several direct hits on the factory were scored, but because the border was closed these could not be confirmed.

(The German High Command, a dispatch from Berlin said, denied there had been an air raid on Friedrichshafen.)

Aimed At Manzell.

Reports here said the attack apparently was aimed, not only at Friedrichshafen but also at the town of Manzell, about three miles up the lake from Friedrichshafen, where the zeppelin works, recently converted into a factory for airplane motors and other parts, opened another plant.

It was not known if any of the raiders—whose number also was unknown—were hit by the anti-aircraft fire or by pursuit planes sent up to meet them.

Swiss frontier patrols along Lake Constance fired sky rockets to warn the bombers against invading Swiss territory.

(A Ministry of information communique in London announced new "reconnaisance" flights by British planes over western and northwestern Germany last night, but said only propaganda leaflets were dropped.)

New York, Sept. 26 —(AP) — George McCoy, who conducts a man-in-the-street radio program, thought one man in the street was tossing him a curve when he gave his name as "Neville Chamberlain."

But the man produced papers attesting he was sergeant-at-arms in the liner Queen Mary, and that his name really was Neville Chamberlain.

Polish Sub Enters Swedish Waters And Surrenders

Copenhagen, Sept. 25 (AP)—A third Polish submarine, the 980-ton Zbik, entered Swedish territorial waters today and surrendered to the Swedish Government.

The submarine with five officers and a crew of 49 aboard, was sighted by the Coast Patrol which sent out a ship assuming it might be the Polish submarine that escaped from Tallinn, Estonia.

Members of the crew said they had been at sea 26 days without fresh food and subsisting on emergency rations.

GIVEN 7 YEARS FOR ROBBERY

Rudolph Schramek is Sentenced for Armed Robbery of Windsor Bank

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 25 —(CP)— Rudolph Schramek, 23, of St. Catharines, Ont., was sentenced today to seven years in pentientiary for the armed robbery of a Windsor branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada here June 30. Albert Farr, 24, of Windsor who aided in the robbery was sentenced to three years in penitentiary.

Harry Miller, 32, of Windsor, the third man in the case, pleaded guilty today, but sentence was reserved until Saturday.

Loot in the robbery totalled $1,400. Schramek, born in Brantford, Ont., was arrested at St. Catharines where he worked in an automobile parts factory.

Farr's sentence will be concurrent with a six-month term he started serving in July on a charge of assaulting Mrs. Harry Miller. An assault charge against Miller will be heard Saturday.

JAPAN WOULD END WAR DURING YEAR

To Do So Must Smash Chiang Kai Shek's Armed Resistance

Tokyo, Sept. 25 (AP)—Wang Ching-Wei, former Premier of General Chiang Kai-Shek's government, was said today to be formulating plans rapidly for consolidation of the Japanese-controlled Peiping and Nanking governments into a single Japanese sponsored-regime in China.

Wang, it was announced recently, visited Japan in June and discussed the projected administration with Prince Fumimaro Konoye. Observers expressed belief that if Japan's political program goes according to schedule, she will be able to present the world with an accomplished fact before the end of the year.

These sources said the plan calls for a supreme effort to smash Chiang's armed resistance and for the installation of a strong central government favorable to Japan. Thereafter, they said, the army might be expected to take a defensive position along borders of the area already occupied.

Neutral Balkan States Heartened By Duce's Neutrality Declaration

Budapest, Sept. 25 (AP)—Neutral states of southeastern Europe, concerned over partition of Poland and Soviet Russia, were heartened today by Premier Mussolini's week-end declaration that Italy would maintain her status as a non-belligerent.

Diplomatic circles placed the Duce's speech at the top of a list of encouraging developments which included:

1. A message of sympathy sent by Hungary to Rumania on the death of Premier Calinescu, which the Budapest press called evidence of improved relationship between the two countries;

2. Announcement of a new airline between Moscow and Sofia, which was taken as illustrating increased friendliness between Bulgaria and Russia;

3. Russia's revived interest in the southeast.

Evidence of Russia's renewed interest in this corner of Europe was welcomed for the same reason that these small nations have been cheered by Italy's recent efforts to strengthen her economic and political ties here.

The little southeastern states have felt the political and economic power of Germany and now see a chance to play Italy as well as Russia against it.

Equality of Sacrifice and Prevention of Profiteering Are Demanded

MANY RESOLUTIONS

London, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP)—"Equality of sacrifice" and protection of workers' interests in wartime are stressed by the Executive Council of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada in its message to delegates at today's opening session of the annual convention here.

"As a bulwark of the workers' liberties," the Council's introductory report states, "and determined to preserve their essential rights, the Congress demands that there must be equality of sacrifice, and that profiteering be prevented."

Victory is Imperative

Text of the preamble to the executive report reads:

"Industrial conditions entailing a continuation of unemployment on a serious scale have persisted throughout the last year and those problems associated with unemployment remain with us. This, of itself, makes the outlook serious enough for the Congress but during recent weeks events of even greater, and possibly more tragic, importance to the workers of Canada have occurred.

"Canada, as a part of the British Empire, is now involved in a war of the first magnitude. We, in Can-

Mrs. Barriage sustained a broken leg, fractured arm and internal injuries and is in the Bowmanville Hospital.

The two ladies were returning from Oshawa in an automobile driven by a friend of the family, when their motor car is said to have been struck head-on by a west-bound motor car. The older Mrs. Barriage was rushed to the Bowmanville Hospital, as the accident occurred west of that town.

FINE AND JAIL TERM IMPOSED

Edward G. Restell Must Pay $300 and Serve Six Months for Disparaging Remarks

"This kind of utterance cannot be tolerated. We had such a case last week when a conviction was registered and I intend to increase the penalty until it reaches the very maximum if these violations of the War Measures Act continue," sternly warned Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's city police court as he fined Edward G. Restell, English-born vagrant, $300.00 and in addition six months determinate in the Ontario Reformatory, following a conviction under the Act.

Restell appeared charged "that he did unlawfully make statements intended or likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty, contrary to the Defence of Canada Regulations, Section 39, enacted under the War Measures Act of 1939, Chapter 49."

Harold White and Lee Keets, employees at the Robson Motors Ltd., West Moira Street, told of Restell coming into their place of employment on Sept. 17th last seeking employment.

"I asked him why he didn't join the army, if he was unemployed and he replied—'to hell with them', I hope Germany blows Great Britain right off the map," testified Mr. White while Mr. Keets corroborated this statement. Restell did not testify on his own behalf and pleaded guilty as charged.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced a list of previous convictions which had been registered against Restell, but they were all for petty offences, despite the fact he had been ordered deported back to England some years ago.

Magistrate Butler sternly warned Restell and the entire court regarding the seriousness of this type of crime. On a second charge of vagrancy a six months sentence to run concurrent with that of the former, was imposed, while in default of the payment of the imposed $300.00 an additional one month's sentence was imposed, also to run concurrent with the original sentence of six months definite.

DELEGATES TELL OF CONFERENCE

Miss Gordon of Tweed and Mr. Spence of Lakefield Heard at Bridge Street United Church

Miss Bessie Gordon, B.A., of Tweed and Mr. Robert Spence, school teacher of Lakefield, who attended the World Conference of Christian Youth at Amsterdam on July 24 to Aug. 2, spoke at Bridge Street United Church Sunday evening before a large congregation. They were introduced by Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of the church, who stated that 58 per cent of those attending the Conference were under 36 years of age.

Miss Gordon was delegate from the Bay of Quinte Conference. She stated that this was the first conference of youth, previous conferences having been given over to adults. There were seventy nations represented and 220 separately organized religious groups and national churches.

There was unity manifest in spite of differences of race, color, confession, language. All believed in one God and in their love for Jesus Christ. All delegates had been chosen as speaking one or more of the three languages used at the Conference and there were 1775 young people in attendance.

Miss Gordon noted that different groups were mainly concerned with the church and worship, or Bible study as in the case of the Lutherans and the Continental Protestants, and the practical side of Christianity as seen in Canadian and English and U. S. churches.

Among the results of the Conference she noted a new desire to express God's will in all relations and to discover the basis of Christian faith and an understanding of the work of the church, the sense that Christus Victor (the motto of Christian Youth) is the goal of all and that only in Him can all find salvation.

A Japanese delegate said, she stated, he was going home to have a difficult time when there because he felt Japan was wrong.

Miss Gordon also saw as a result the need of examination of individual lives, of development of the devotional life and the practice of Christian principles. Delegates came not to be afraid of another church form of worship, and also felt that they must know their own church better as the Church of Christ, not of the United Church of Canada.

Mr. Spence was to have been an official visitor but in absence of delegates he was made a delegate. He said delegates had the privilege of worshipping in ways very unfamiliar and learned how great were the people of other races and creeds. The Prince of Holland in his address spoke of Christianity as the true light in which all may be one.

Mr. Spence declared that one lesson learned was the true meaning of that portion of the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Mr Kitchen of Peterborough, convener of the committee on missions for youth in the Presbytery of Peterborough, offered prayer at the service.

ALLIED VICTORY

ada, know that our nation in no sense provoked the present trouble, that we have been drawn into the struggle in spite of our instinctive desires for peace and good will among men. Much has already been said in various quarters on the subject of the causes leading up to the crisis and it has been made clear that the responsibility for the conflict lies with Hitler and Nazi Germany. However, the important face now is that we are at war and that for Canadians peace through victory is imperative.

Labor Congress Backs Government

"In this time of national emergency the Congress has let it be known that it is unequivocally behind the stand of our government in active support of the democracies, that in its efforts the government may rely upon our whole-hearted co-operation and assistance. But older members of the trade union movement will remember the problems created by living costs and necessity for maintaining continuous production in essential industries.

"In this war, like conditions may develop and we shall look to the government to protect the workers effectively. Steps already taken to curb profiteering met with our full endorsation, and will, we hope, be followed up vigorously as occasion demands.

War For Democracy.

"This is a war for democracy and personal liberty against a system of government that denies all rights of the individual. As a participant, Canada will be called upon for sacrifices but as a bulwark of the workers liberties and determined to preserve their essential rights, the congress demands that there must be equality of sacrifice and that profiteering be prevented.

"It has freely offered and stands ready at all times to co-operate with the government to obtain proper relations between employer and employee to ensure uninterrupted supplies of the sinews of war and of home requirements. While faithfully carrying out our duties to the state during this critical period, it is also necessary to remain loyal to our unions and broad principles upon which they are based, and continue to hold our faith that ultimately sanity and reason must emerge triumphant.

"By maintaining the strength and influence of our organizations, when that time comes, as come it must, the labor movement will be in a position to play its part in the reconstruction of civilization based on freedom, justice and peace."

War Program.

Approximately 400 delegates from Labor organizations throughout Canada attended the opening session of the 55th annual convention. President P. M. (Paddy) Draper of Ottawa was ordered to remain at home by his physicians and his place as chairman was taken by R. J. Tallon of Calgary, secretary-treasurer.

A "war program" for the organization will feature the discussions, including such topics as national conscription and manpower and wealth, mobilization of natural resources, anti-profiteering measures and the contribution of the congress as a national body.

Many of the 347 printed resolutions were drawn up prior to Canada's declaration of war and another 100 were received too late for printing, Mr. Tallon said.

Other important questions slated for discussion are the Committee for Industrial Organization issue as it effects Canadian trade unionism, railway unification, subversive movements, injunctions and the right to organize.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Golden Boy"

In preparation and production for more than a year and a half, Columbia's "Golden Boy" comes to the McCarthy Theatre this week with a record of critical acclaim rarely achieved by any motion picture. With Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden starred, the sensational screen version of Clifford Odets' stirring stage success has been hailed as one of the greatest emotional experiences ever offered by Hollywood.

"Golden Boy" is the stirring drama of a youth with the sensitive soul of a great musician, and the mauling fists of a champion prizefighter. Tired of working toward artistic triumphs in some nebulous future, the boy abandons his art to win for himself a quick success as a prize-ring killer. "Golden Boy" is the thrilling, tender story of that decision; but, more important, it is the screen portrayal of the tremendous conflict which rages when the youth attempts to force both himself and his family to believe that his decision is the right one.

William Holden, in the title role, is said to merit the fore-thought which caused Columbia to search the nation for more than a year in an effort to find "the" actor who could play the role of "Golden Boy."

Barbara Stanwyck, who shares starring honors with Holden and Adolphe Menjou, is said to give the most absorbing dramatic performance of her career As Lorna Moon, the disillusioned young woman who finds romance in the adoration of the "Golden Boy," Miss Stanwyck's characterization has already made her a definite contender for Academy Award honors.

As the caustic, harassed manager of the "Golden Boy," Adolphe Menjou contributes a screen portrait said to be remarkable for its naturalness.

The supporting cast, as carefully selected as the leading players, includes Joseph Calleia, Lee J. Cobb, Sam Levene, Edward Brophy, Beatrice Binn, William Strauss, Don Beddoe, Frank Jenks and Harry Tyler.

AT THE BELLE

"These Glamour Girls"

Glamorous youth, 1940 style, is served in delectable fashion at the Belle Theatre, next, when "These Glamour Girls", latest screen treatment of the modern trends opens for a two days' run with Lew Ayres and Lana Turner in the featured roles. Just as "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Flaming Youth" treated the drama behind the youthful scene in their respective years, so does this newly modernized story of college life, written by Jane Hall and Marion Parsonnet, draw aside the veil of youth today with its fancies, foibles and dramas, with the society glamour girl much in the spotlight today, "These Glamour Girls" is an up-to-the-minute story of Park Avenue versus Tenth with the setting of the battle a collegiate campus. Lana Turner, playing her first top featured role, is seen as a dime-a-dance hostess who invades the collegiate stronghold of the debutantes and not only walks off with social honors after a pitched battle of wits, but also wins the most eligible undergrad who, in this case, happens to be Lew Ayres. Portraying the glamour girls are four of Hollywood's outstanding young beauties—Jane Bryan, Anita Louise, Ann Rutherford and Mary Beth Hughes. Marsha Hunt deviates from her usual sweet ingenues to lend a touch of tragedy to the story as the perennial prom girl who, sensing the loss of her popularity, prefers suicide to humiliation. "These Glamour Girls" is a combination of comedy, pathos and tragedy, dealing with the side of the entertainment and lives of six different girls with telling effect. On the male side of the entertainment ledger are Ayres, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Owen Davis, Jr., Summer Getchell, Peter Hayes, Don Castle and Tom Collins.

"6,000 Enemies"

Based upon incidents from the outstanding prison breaks of the news headlines, "6,000 Enemies" announced as the companion feature attraction presents the most dramatic revelation of how such breaks are made ever seen in a film. With a cast headed by Walter Pidgeon, as a District Attorney framed by gangster enemies, and Rita Johnson, a girl he has sent to prison, the picture presents a stirring life behind prison walls.

The story is of a militant district attorney framed into prison by a crime lord. In prison, the district attorney, Pidgeon, finds himself hated by all the convicts. To gain their confidence he has a brutal fist fight with the prison "tough" and, although beaten, wins recognition as a "right guy." On his duties as a trusty, Pidgeon meets a girl whom he himself sent to prison. The girl, played by Rita Johnson convinces him that she, too, was framed by the gangster boss. While trying to work out a plan together, romance starts between them. At last Pidgeon's brother gets sufficient evidence to clear them, but he is murdered while doing so. A prison break is averted by Pidgeon and the truth comes to light, giving him freedom and the girl he loves.

Directed by George B. Seitz, the picture gives a strong supporting cast to Pidgeon and Miss Johnson, with prominent roles played by Paul Kelly, Nat Pendleton, Harold Huber and Grant Mitchell.

The Belle World-Wide News Events will be exhibited on the same program.

Two Features Tonight

Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino and Nigel Bruce are featured in the exciting mystery story, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" to be presented at the Belle tonight, with a romantic comedy feature, "Bridal Suite" featuring Robert Young, the lovely Annabella and Walter Connolly. The last complete show starts at 8.30 p.m.

AS ROOSEVELT ADDRESSED CONGRESS

President Roosevelt is shown as he addressed the special joint session of congress, which was called to discuss the American Neutrality Act. The president urged that the Neutrality Act be put on a cash and carry basis. Seated behind the president is the Speaker of the House, William B. Bankhead.

WESTERN FRONT MAY INCLUDE BELGIUM

Heavy German troop movements from the Polish front toward the Belgium and Luxembourg frontiers have caused French and English to fear a violation of Belgian and Luxembourg neutrality as in 1914. On the ABOVE map, Aachen, Germany, near the Holland-Belgian-German border, has been evacuated by civilians and heavy troop concentrations made. Lille, on the French side of the Belgian border, has been evacuated and made a base for British troops in a sector extending east to the Meuse River. Belgium's "Little Maginot" line along the Meuse has been fully manned and her advance resistance line from the Liege forts north along the Holland line and south along the Luxembourg border is manned. The heavy fortifications at Ghent, Antwerp, Brussels and Namur are also fully garrisoned. Belgium will not be caught unprepared this time if invasion comes.

KING CAROL ACTS SWIFTLY TO PREVENT NAZI COUP IN RUMANIA

Acting swiftly to fight the threat of a coup by the Nazi Iron Guards following the assassination of Premier Calinescu, King Carol called up troops, declared a state of emergency throughout Rumania and installed a new government headed by three generals noted for their stern discipline and favorable to England. Eight assassins of the premier were publicly executed at the spot where it was charged they assassinated Calinescu. King Carol and Crown Prince Michael, LEFT, are pictured as they review their armed forces in Bucharest. The Chasseurs de Montagne, RIGHT, are the crack fighting men of the Rumanian army and here you see a battalion on the march. Crown Prince Michael is an officer in this corps.

BRITAIN ISSUES BLUE BOOK

The Blue Book, which has been issued in Great Britain, shows how strenuously and tirelessly Britain has worked to preserve peace and by preserving peace to bring back to earth that sense of security which had been affected by the acts of the German Nazi leaders. The book reveals at every point the steady peace effort which has marked the British hope and offer of the solution of the grave difficulties which have been pressing upon Europe. The Book shows how Britain throughout made clear where she stood on the question of the defence of liberty of Poland.

Hitler is here shown up in perhaps the clearest manner the world has been privileged to have a revelation into the mind and spirit of this man. The German Chancellor made a bid for an alliance with Britain in August at the expense of Poland. The Blue Book shows that on August 22nd., Hitler was "violent and uncompromising, his language was violent and exaggerated both as regards England and Poland". Later on that same day while Hitler was more calm he was far more categoric as to his determination to attack Poland "if another German were ill-treated in Poland" as he said. In this second interview Hitler told Sir Nevile Henderson, the British ambassador, that England was determined to crush and exterminate Germany. He said, he was 50 years old and he preferred war now rather than when he would be 55 or 60. Sir Nevile continued in his report of the interview. saying that Hitler declared England was fighting for lesser races, whereas he (Hitler) was fighting only for Germany and that the Germans would this time fight to the last man and that it would have been different had he been chancellor in 1914.

Sir Nevile points out a strange statement of Hitler as follows: "Among various points mentioned by Hitler were: that the winner of another European war would be Japan; that he was by nature an artist and once the polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist and not as a war monger." This gives a sidelight into the psychology of the German leader.

At that same time there was the Hitler statement to Henderson that the German army was ready and eager for battle.

British suggestion that there be discussions in a peaceful atmosphere brought the Hitler announcement of his intention to mobilize the German army.

Hitler's remark to Henderson that once the Polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist and not as a warmonger stands out sharply in contrast with his actions with relations to Austria, which he annexed, to Czechoslovakia from which he asked first only Sudetenland and said his territorial demands in Europe were then satisfied, to his 1939 annexation of Poland and Memel and to his departure from the treaty which he had made with Poland. These acts contradict that he would settle down after the Polish issue was decided.

Last week Hitler stated he had no war intentions against Britain and France, the powers then opposed to him, and yet he assailed Britain as his chief enemy.

The Allies have given their word that Hitlerism must receive a death blow. Such a regime as that of Hitler and his Nazis has kept Europe in a state of unrest and finally has brought on war and only with his disappearance and the disappearance of all that he stands for in the relation of nation with nation will Europe and the rest of the world have peace and security.

RALLYING AS UNIT

All across Canada citizens are united in the effort to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion and to have this Dominion's contribution the most effective possible so that not one ounce of effort be wasted or unused.

Able men have been chosen for posts which require to be established for the wartime duties which press upon the nation. These men are serving in every field of national interest, because modern war claims the efforts of every citizen and every factor in the life of the nation.

One of the great factors in the war's prosecution will be the industrial effort Canada puts forth. Business men, like men in other walks and like women in their wartime activities, have offered their services to the Government to be used in any manner in which they are best suited.

There is a spirit of unity and intensity which are the most effective elements in the national contribution.

In a time like this when the democracies and freedom are fighting to end militarism and to banish the spirit of Hitlerism and Nazism from Europe and for that matter from the earth, the Government is the rallying centre to which Canadians of all walks of life converge in their thoughts and efforts.

SLEEP MARGARET

(The following lines, by H. I. Phillips, in the New York Sun, were inspired by news of the death of 10-year-old Margaret Hayworth, of Hamilton, Ont., one of the injured passengers rescued from the S. S. Athenia.)

Sleep, Margaret . . .
And may sweet dreams displace
The black nightmare which a better world
Would have spared a child!
There is a smile on your face, Margaret,
It must have come as the horror
Of memory faded, blacking out
The frightful night at sea and restored
The sweet fancies of childhood.

It must have come as every frightful
Recollection of sound and fury,
Of shot, explosion and flame,
Of screams in the darkness,
Of pain and delirium was "blacked out"
To give way to a burst of golden sunlight,
Bringing back a world of innocence—
A world of laughter and music,
A world of romping children, open fields,
Rippling brooks, village greens and
Merry school yards at recess hour.

It must have come, Margaret,
When the memory of crashing timbers,
Hissing shell and of figures running
In the twilight vanished,
To give way to pictures of home
Green pastures, smiling playmates
Kindly grownups, toys, dolls
And birthday parties.

Sleep, Margaret . . .
You are out of it now . . .
You had heard people talking
Of a war somewhere, but it seemed
So unreal and so incredible . . .
You might have seen much more of it . . .
You might have lived to know
It was not a dream.

AWAY UP WHERE THE NORTH BEGINS the new mining town of Val d'Or, on the border line between Ontario and Quebec, isn't very big but bagosh its ambition is big as all outdoors, and there's plenty outdoors up thataway. Val d'Or is the biggest little town whatsomever and don't you forget to remember it. Just now Val d'Or is busy in war preparation, organizing an artillery company, no less, nothing small about Val d'Or. Second Lieut Tom Keefer, of the 2nd Survey Regiment of the Royal Canadian Artillery, is doing the organizing and meeting enthusiastic response. Posters have been hung up from Bourlamaque to Rouyn and a fine type of recruits are joining up. Memories of Old Timers naturally turn back to the days of 1914 and after when the north country gave of its best to curb the ambitions of a war-mad Kaiser. Over There they knew when the boys from Northern Ontario arrived, and there are lively recollections in official army circles of such picturesque characters as booming "Foghorn" Macdonald, who scared hell out of the Boche by just yelling at him; Jack Munro, and his collie dog, both of whom came through the war with wounds but lived to tell the tale around prospectors' camp fires north of Cobalt and Haileybury. Jack Munro was the lad who went four rounds with the great Jim Jeffries when the latter was champion and in his prime and the latter was just a husky miner in Butte, Montana. Then there was Lieut. Col. MacLang, who served the mining country as representative both at Ottawa and Toronto at various times, and is now Chief Commissioner of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, the property of the people of Ontario. In France during the Great War Mac supervised the erection of sawmills and turned out vast quantities of timber of various kinds. There were other interesting characters and all in all the boys from Northern Ontario were a braw lot. They did not all come back but their memory is kept sacred as heroes not afraid to give their all for a free Canada and an Empire not dominated by a military-mad cult. Hark! Hark! the boys are marching at Val d'Or.

MEMORIES

A traveller in Ireland stopped for a drink of milk at a white cottage with a thatched roof, and, as he sipped his refreshment he noted, on a centre table under a glass dome, a brick with a faded rose upon the top of it.

"Why do you cherish in this way," he said to his host, "that common brick and the dead rose?"

"Sure, sir," was the reply "there's certain memories attachin' to them. Do you see this big dent in my head? Well, it was made by that brick."

"But the rose?" said my friend.

His host smiled quietly.

"The rose," he explained, "is off the grave of the man who threw the brick."

PADDY THE WANDERER DIES; FAMOUS NEW ZEALAND DOG

There died in Wellington, N.Z., recently of old age and sickness a dog, Paddy the Wanderer. He was as famous in his own way throughout the Dominion as the dolphin, Pelorus Jack, who for years met and accompanied New Zealand coastal steamers through French Pass on their voyages to and from Nelson, in the South Island, and who was protected by special Act of Parliament as a prodigy of the sea.

Paddy, a big Airedale-Irish terrier cross, was given his name of Wanderer by his friends on the water front of Wellington — seamen, wharf laborers and taximen —because of his strange habit, whenever it took his fancy, of travelling by sea or land.

So far as is known, he never sailed on any ocean tramp or cargo liner, but seemed to choose instinctively vessels on New Zealand or Australian articles. Similarly, for his overland trips it is said that he always preferred the cars of his friends the taxi drivers.

Wherever he went—and he went all over the North Island and visited the ports of the South, and twice even voyaged as far as Sydney—he was always welcome—a grave, sedate dog, standing on his dignity with strangers but unbending among his friends. He was the first dog to fly in New Zealand, and he stepped aboard the airplane a passenger with his fare fully paid by his friends the taximen.

In the ten or eleven years of his travels, wherever they were, he always returned to Wellington. It was not that he had owner or master, here, or even a regular home. It was Paddy's peculiar title to fame that he lived independently as the guest of the community of transport workers on sea and land, with Wellington as his headquarters and home port.

Many legends grew up about him, but his origin was unknown until accounts of his death and funeral in the newspapers elicited the following story. It seems that he was given as a puppy about a dozen years ago to the little daughter of a seaman, whom he used to accompany to the ship's side with the family to see him off on his voyages.

The girl died two years later. Paddy was inconsolable and roamed about the wharves. The dog could not settle down at home. Finally he was left to the wandering life he had chosen—Manchester Guardian.

"TRULY A STRANGE WAR" SO FAR AS IT HAS GONE

The British newspapers which have come to this country from the period when England was slipping slowly but surely into war are a study in nonchalance.

It would be hard to find a nation wherein the dangers of a long and exhausting war were so minimized.

The editors obviously had some sort of an agreement not to drum up war feeling too far while negotiations were still on and they did this with a vengeance. The war stories were generally brief and unilluminating. They merely set forth what Hitler said, or what Chamberlain said, without comment and without embellishment.

The London Express gave the current football matches far more space than a Chamberlain address to the House of Commons. A whole column was devoted to a study of how to transport dogs cheaply by rail, and only a paragraph to a dispatch from Rome.

In advertisements of bomb-proofs, gas masks and headlight darkeners, the wordage referred to the coming struggle as an "eventuality" or "emergency."

On the other hand, the Paris papers splashed the news in deep type and followed with bulletin after bulletin, but generally without editorial comment. The last German papers to reach this country were filled with news of Polish "insults." But no hint was found that war was near. The German newspaper reader, following the course of his nation's drift to war; undoubtedly must have been shocked when the real facts were brought home to him.

England has a free press, but the press itself has a gentleman's agreement with the government not to embarrass it in times of crisis. It takes about the same attitude as His Majesty's loyal opposition in parliament.

One of the surprising developments of the war on land has been the alertness of the German army to counteract unfavourable propaganda from the other side. No matter what the German navy does, the army has another view.

It is evidently straining every nerve not to repeat the blunder of Belgium in its Polish campaign. Less than 24 hours after a Warsaw radio report was issued charging the burning of the famed shrine at Czestochowa, the Germans wireless a picture to New York showing the shrine intact, the priests conducting services, and a widely-known and efficient American newspaperman standing by. In addition this newspapermen was taken on a tour of the battlefields to offset stories of brutalities to the civilian population.

This is the first time that this sort of procedure has been adopted, and it shows a regard for world opinion that is historic as well as puzzling.

The British have dumped millions of leaflets over German regions, and both sides in their official communiques have held to a consistent line of information. The Germans are insisting that they are not attacking the French and the English either by air or on the western front. The French show no signs of a general attack in that area other than efforts to establish a direct contact at the outposts of the Limes.

It is truly a strange war, up to now.—Boston Post.

A Natural Result

In an editorial decrying the present strict censorship which has been applied to news from the war, and also on internal arrangements for conducting the war, The Edmonton Journal has this to say:

Too much censorship breeds rumors. Because no official statement has been issued, wild stories are current about bombs being found, sabotage plans discovered and so on. Most of these yarns are without foundation in fact.

Edmonton is not alone in experiencing a flood of rumors which have been proven absolutely baseless. Since the outbreak of hostilities Sudbury has been alive with them. Names have been mentioned and even the circumstances described in the most minute detail. In one case the man named is not only a Canadian citizen but fought the Germans for 17 months during the last war. In all cases the reports were purely and simply the outgrowth of somebody's wild imagination.

There have, of course, been some minor incidents, but these have been in the main the results of different nationalities in argument. And, strangely enough, there has been little comment, and little rumor about those which actually had a foundation in fact.

The fact that the cases which have been brought to official attention have been reported in the press and that there have been no further rumors about them, is perhaps the best support for the Edmonton Bulletin's appeal for a less rigid censorship. There is no question that the public believes what it reads in the newspapers. When it is forced to rely on word-of-mouth information, rather than that supplied in the printed word, gross exaggerations are the only natural result.

"WAR ON NERVES" CONTINUED

Christian Science Monitor: Letters to metropolitan newspapers expostulate against the frequent interruption of radio programs with war bulletins, largely on the ground that the persistent projection of disturbing news into the public consciousness is a continuation of the nerve-racking series of crises that preceded hostilities. The announcement that radio chains are seeking to return to a more normal schedule doubtless will be welcomed.

One complaint has been that many radio news bulletins were no more than unconfirmed rumors. These are in a class with unjustified headlines in the daily press. Moreover, radio listeners, like newspaper readers, are entitled to their war news at regular and specified periods. It is unfair to one who has sought retreat from world turmoil in a radiocast Beethoven symphony or Brahms concerto to crash in upn his peaceful relaxation with an explosive recital of disaster which might just as well await the end of the program.

BOOKS FOR FARMERS

St. Mary's Library Board has a special provision for the accommodation of farmers and others in the surrounding community. Rural subscribers are permitted to take out two books at a time. As they may be changed weekly, farmer members can read up to a hundred and four book in a year. For this service the fee is a dollar a year. There are now 8,000 books in the library including three hundred books placed there the past year. The use of the reference room and magazine reading room is free to the public. Folks who do not patronize the library are missing something worth while. — St. Mary's Journal-Argus.

Goering, Heir Apparent

Condensed From an Article by Douglas Reed in Life Magazine

In any kind of absolute rule, monarchy or dictatorship, the question of succession to the seat of power becomes of vital importance. Last week, as Adolf Hitler prepared to lead his armies into battle, his first thought was of his own succession. "If anything should happen to me in this war," he told the reichstag, "then my successor will be Field Marshal Goering."

His words amount to a command, which Nazi Germany will not dare to disobey. The choice was practically inevitable. For 18 years Goering has been Hitler's ablest assistant and most trusted adviser. While Hitler dreamed the dreams and laid the plans for Germany's "great destiny", Goering did the heavy work of putting them into effect.

As Germany moved toward war, Goering's role loomed greater and greater. During the fateful conferences of the two weeks preceding the invasion of Poland, he was Hitler's constant companion. Von Ribbentrop, the foreign minister was the only other person present throughout the diplomatic negotiations.

A Contradiction

Goering is a mixture of Falstaff, Murat and Bismark. He has had hundreds of his comrades shot without turning a hair. Yet he is the only Nazi leader, besides Hitler, who is widely popular.

Famed for his bulk, Goering's actual weight is a State secret, conservatively estimated at some 240 pounds. The world's No. 1 Roly-Poly is also its greatest clotheshorse. He probably has 50 uniforms of varying hues and shades—more than anyone else in the world except for a few kings and maharajahs. A pet lion cub appears with the marmalade at his breakfast table. Jokes about him are innumerable. Berliners say that if he were to receive any more decorations he would have only one place to put them and would then be unable to take his seat in parliament.

Vastly dissimilar, Hitler and Goering are as mutually essential as sun and moon. Hitler plans; Goering executes. Hitler remains inexplicable. Celibate, vegetarian, abstainer, cake-eater, non-sportsman, non-pilot, he belies all that he preaches. Goering is paradoxical but crystal-clear, a man with contradictions but without mystery.

Wounded in Last War

Hermann Goering is the ninth son of Dr. Heinrich Ernst Goering, first governor of German Southwest Africa, from 1885 to 1890. When war broke out he became an infantry lieutenant and six months later was the first subaltern in his regiment to win the Iron Cross, second class. With a comrade, Bruno Loerzer, who is among his chief helpers today Goering presently transferred to the young air force and was decorated with the Iron Cross, first class, by Crown Prince Wilhelm.

Goering was always lucky. By 1918 he wore the Pour le Merite, Germany's highest decoration for valor. In that year too, Manfred von Richthofen, Germany's greatest airman was killed, and his famous "Circus," No. 1 Squadron was given to Captain Reinhard, who in June was invited with Goering to Berlin to try out a new fighter. Goering went up first. When Reinhard followed, the wings broke off. Goering became commander of the "Circus."

That November, Goering was ordered to surrender his machines to the advancing Americans. Instead, he flew them back to Germany and, with his officers, held a bitter farewell celebration in the Rathauskeller at Aschaffenburg.

Took to Morphine

In 1918, Germany's "liberation" seemed distant indeed. Embittered and penniless, Goering left the German Republic which he detested and went to Sweden. In the bottom of his despair he is reported to have taken to morphine and to have been committed for a time to the insane asylum of Langbro. In October, 1921, Goering saw Hitler for the first time on the Konigsplatz. Next day he sat hand in hand with his wife and heard Hitler speak. From then on he was Hitler's man—charged to organize the Brown Batalions.

By 1922 this human barrel of energy paraded the first Storm Troopers before Hitler. In October, 1923, the Bavarian government rebelled against Red Berlin and Hitler thought the opportunity had come to seize power first in Bavaria, afterwards in the Reich. When Hitler's first Brown Army marched towards the Feldherrnhalle on November 9, 1923, machine-gun bullets received it. Old General Ludendorff fell flat and his top hat went rolling down the street. Hitler dropped, unwounded. Goering, who marched between them, fell with a bullet in his thigh.

As Hitler's right-hand man, Goering's masterpiece has been Nazi Germany's miraculous rearmament, effected at lightning speed and with astounding secrecy. When Goering began in 1933, Germany was forbidden more than 100,000 soldiers and a little artillery; no tanks, no airplanes.

At the time of the Czecho-Slovak crisis in 1938, Colonel Lindbergh was reported to hold the opinion that the German Air Force was superior to those of England, France and Russia together.

If it is to Goering that Hitler owes his enormous power, it is also to Goering that he chiefly owes his ability to wield it. It was a coup by the fat field marshal that got him appointed Chancellor on January 30, 1933. The aged Hindenburg always said he would never make Hitler chancellor but when told the chancellor he had dismissed, General Kurt von Schleicher, meant to march in with troops from Potsdam and arrest him, he signed the decree of appointment with trembling hands. The story about Schleicher was Goering's.

Goering's second great coup for Hitler —the smashing of the opposition — followed promptly. In the cabinet that Hindenburg approved, Hitler and his men were still the prisoners of a majority of non-Nazi politicians. The other political parties still existed. How could the Nazis achieve untrammeled power? The answer came 28 days later, when the reichstag was burned.

Though Captain Goering was only Prussian police minister he acted immediately and independently. His roundup squads were herding the left opposition leaders into concentration camps within a few minutes. The constitutional safeguards were abolished. Hindenburg, either duped again or believing the tory of impending Red revolution, signed decrees legalizing everything.

Goering's activities in the army purge of June 1934 are less mysterious. On June 29, 1934, Hitler had a long secret conference with his trusted aide. Then he flew to Munich and superintended the execution of bosom-friend Roehm and the others in south Germany. Goering, a picture of calm, cleared up north Germany. He had the firing squad at work from dawn to dusk in the old military academy at Lichterfelde, where he had learned to be an officer.

He is an economic dictator with a military objective. He buys up ten years' harvest of some small neighboring county—against German goods, not cash, for one of his major tasks is to husband Germany's slender resources of gold and foreign exchange. He has spent unlimited sums on promoting the production of German substitutes for raw materials previously imported from abroad. He has taken a million men from their workaday occupations and set them to building on frontiers unbroken chains of concrete teeth to bite into the bellies of enemy tanks, of marshy pits to drown them. He has forbidden the import of this, subsidized the export of that. Hitler orders the apparently impossible; Goering does it. He is, says Hitler, "the best man I have."

BRITAIN ANSWERS

Developments Disclosed.

Meanwhile these developments were disclosed:

1. British expeditionary troops are moving toward battle positions along side the French troops who already have carried operations onto German soil. Some of the militia called up last summer under the Compulsory Service Act have arrived in France to serve behind the lines.

2. Gilbert Szlumper, general manager of the Southern Railway, who was Senior Transport Officer of the British Army in the last war, has been assigned to direct all military transport by land and sea.

3. The British fleet and air forces are widening their warfare at sea, trying to cut off the escape of raiding German submarines to hideouts.

4. Plans have been made to speed up production in British shipyards to replace tonnage destroyed by submarines.

Survivors Put Ashore.

The latest British merchant ship lost was the 4,646-ton freighter Hazelside. Her survivors, put ashore in Ireland, said the ship was attacked and sunk off the Irish coast yesterday by a submarine after an unsuccessful effort to escape. Twelve of her crew of thirty-four were reported missing.

The communique yesterday, commenting on Mussolini's speech, said British official circles understood and appreciated the Italian premier's sincerity, but rejected the suggestion that an accomplished fact in Poland made continuation of the war purposeless.

"The suggestion that by not spreading the conflict farther in view of the Russian fait accompli, Great Britain and France have compromised their moral justification for attempting to annul the German fait accompli, is not recognized here," the communique said.

"The decision of the British people to declare war was indeed the direct consequence of the invasion of Poland—but the invasion of Poland was itself but a further illustration of the lawlessness in international affairs which it is the principal purpose of this country to resist."

No Declaration Praised.

The press generally reflected the view that a declaration of war against Russia would have played into Germany's hands. The Red army, it was stated, has blocked any German advance to the Black Sea by occupation of territory bordering Rumania and Hungary.

Mr. Chamberlain was expected to amplify the government's attitude tomorrow in his fourth war review in the House of Commons.

The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent said he was informed that even Germany was surprised at the swiftness of Russia's invasion of Polish territory.

The News Chronicle said that although Whitehall still was extremely reluctant to comment on the German-Soviet non-aggression pact "there is no doubt that it how regards it more favorably than it did a week ago."

In an editorial the Daily Mail said "Stalin is not acting for love of Hitler nor to save the democracies."

"He has moved into Poland solely in the interests of Russia," the newspaper said. "He is pursuing a realistic policy as he always has done.

Controls Oil Fields.

"Now Hitler sees Stalin in possession of the Galician oil fields and in command of the direct route to the Rumanian oil fields. Certainly this position is awkward for Hitler. But that fact should not delude us into believing that a quarrel between Germany and Russia is probable in the near future. Stalin is much more likely to trouble Hitler at a later stage of the war."

Discussing Mussolini's speech, the Daily Herald said: "If this suggestion is seriously made, then it is clear that Mussolini does not understand what Great Britain is fighting for. The defeat of Poland makes no difference to the determination of the British and French peoples. They have resolved to make the world safe against aggression. To do this they will carry on the war until Nazism has perished forever."

The Daily Express said Mussolini's peace proposals contained nothing new and "only repeat the words which the German radio has been broadcasting for many days."

"The answers to this case are simple," the Daily Express continued. "The war we fight is a war of extermination. Britain is not out to exterminate Germany, but she is out to exterminate Hitlerism."

KILLED IN FIGHT

Earl Baker, 37, of Clarkson, Toronto police fingerprint records show, is the man killed in a fight with a young man and woman on a sideroad near Streetsville after he had allegedly robbed them at gunpoint. Unidentified until his fingerprints were checked by police, Baker is said by them to have been convicted of shop-breaking in 1931.

HEADS GOVERNMENT

A military government headed by General Casimir Sosnkowski is reported to have been established in Poland, refusing to recognize existence of the refugee government, leaders which have been interned in Rumania.

GERMAN

Tracer Bullets Fired

Swiss shore watchers said they saw the German anti-aircraft guns fire tracer bullets into the sky like powerful Roman candles and that they heard terrific detonations as though from bursting bombs.

Swiss authorities opened an investigation to determine whether Swiss territory had been violated.

The German batteries were said to have kept up their fire for two hours while searchlights criss-crossed over Friedrichshafen.

The roar of what were believed to be invading warplane motors could be heard only a few minutes.

Since the border is closed and the lake is five miles wide at this point it was not possible immediately to make any direct investigation in Germany of possible damage.

Airplane Factory

The giant Zeppelin works, which turned out all of Germany's lighter-than-air dirigibles, had been converted into an airplane motor factory and were working day and night. Special bomb-proof shelters had been built for the factory workers deep under the plant.

If British bombers participated in the reported night raid, history will have repeated itself, for early in 1914 a British plane carried out one of the first air raids against the Friedrichshafen works.

That raid brought a protest from Berlin to the Swiss government, charging the British flier had crossed Swiss territory.

PROLONGED WAR

Bomb-Proof Quarters

Construction of a bomb-proof army headquarters is said to have been started "somewhere in the west."

Until now, Nazis had expressed hope that once the Polish campaign was over, France and Great Britain might listen to peace proposals, but the high command appeared, satisfied a prolonged was was inevitable.

There were indications nevertheless that the Germans planned at first to limit hostilities against France as much as possible in the hope of weaning the French away from Britain.

It may be expected that the German air force will strike at British troop concentration areas.

Communiques yesterday gave little attention to activity on the Western Front, saying merely that "in the west there was heavier artillery fire at certain points" and that "local enemy attacks were repulsed."

While Warsaw continued to hold out, an official announcement said German troops were moving "along the entire eastern front" toward the Demarcation line splitting Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

Army authorities said the German soldiers were withdrawing westward while the Russians were advancing toward the line from the east. It was expected that German and Russian forces would take up their positions tomorrow night on opposite sides of the new frontier extending from East Prussia to Hungary.

Meanwhile, thousands of German mothers who have not heard from sons with the army in the east anxiously awaiting posting of official casualty lists, expected within the next few days. An aarmy announcement described German loses as "unusually small in comparison with the enemy," but so far the public has been given no actual figures.

Some light on how the German government expects to finance the war was given in the current issue of Die Deutsche Volkswirtschafte, Nazi economic monthly. The publication said a special levy on incomes was expected to yield 2,600,-000 marks annually. (Par value of the mark is 40 cents).

Contributions by cities and communities were expected to bring in 1,500,000,000 marks and taxes on tobacco and alcoholic beverages another 1,250,000,000. Total revenue from these sources was estimated at 5,350,000,00 marks or about $2,140,-000,000 at normal foreign exchange rates.

Another eastern Ontario highway mishap took the life of Fred Cooper, 64-year-old Marmora resident. He was hit by a car while walking along the road. The vehicle allegedly was driven by Walter Leal of Tweed.

Plane Crashes at Clifford

Pilot Roy Fry of Ayr, 27, and Elton Seip, 26, Harriston, died Saturday night when Fry's light airplane crashed at Clifford from a height of 1,500 feet. Cause of the occident was undetermined.

William Johnston, 34, St. Catharines, and John Jamieson, 40, St. Catharines, executives of the Macs soccer club in that city, were killed and three other soccer players seriously injured Saturday night in a collision between a car and truck two miles east of Beamsville. The truck was driven by Donald B. Johnston, St. Catharines.

When Paul Stevens' automobile plunged off the highway and overturned near Alliston early Sunday, the 40-year-old Toronto man was killed and his wife and four friends injured. At Bridgeport, Miss Lillian Rimelow, Guelph, died about the same time when the car in which she was a passenger went out of control and overturned.

Truck Turns Over

A fractured skull proved fatal to Clayton Allen, 22, of Gravenhurst, when his light truck turned over at a bridge over the Kashe River, two miles south of Gravenhurst. He died on the way to hospital.

The body of a transient, apparently struck by a train, was found lying on the Michigan Central Railway line near the boundary of Stamford township Sunday. Cecil Irwin of Sarnia, another transient, told police the victim's name was Michael Hogan, 26. He is believed to have come from Ottawa.

Joyce Quick, nine-year-old Colchester south township child, was hit and killed by an automobile Saturday night while walking on the highway east of Amherstburg. Police later arrested John Haas, 35, of Arner on a charge of failing to report an accident.

Breaks Neck in Fall

Edward Whittaker, Toronto, drowned near Penetanguishene Saturday after the small motorboat in which he and Albert J. Thomas of Lansing were fishing, capsized. John Wesley Branton, 74, met death Saturday at Brooklin when he broke his neck in falling from a straw stack.

Hit by an automobile in Port Burwell, Billy Smith, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, Port Burwell, was killed Sunday. Frank Longa, 38, of Windsor, allegedly drove the car.

FIVE PERSONS

Sheriff Howard Durley of Ventura County said there was no hope that the 26 persons aboard the pleasure fishing boat Spray which capsized in the surf near Oxnard, would be found alive.

In addition to those known dead and those reported drowned, an additional 65 to 70 persons aboard various fishing boats were unreported today.

Havoc in Power Lines

The Spray was a 48-foot fishing boat, and no list of passengers was kept. All aboard were believed from Southern California Two of those aboard the craft were rescued. They were Abe Agins, Los Angeles, and Miss Genevieve Force, Lynwood, Calif.

The gales and rain wreaked havoc with power lines, left many communities without lights for long periods, temporarily disrupted main railroad systems and closed highways.

IS OVERJOYED AT RELIEF MOSBY'S TONIC GAVE HIM

Mr. W. S. Hunter Was Victim of Stomach Distress — Couldn't Eat or Sleep Right —Bowels Badly Constipated—Felt Worn Out Before He Found This New, Scientific Compound.

People in all parts of Belleville, and this general vicinity are now taking—and praising!— this "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and

MR. W. S. HUNTER

Other Splendid Medicinal Agents" known as MOSBY'S TONIC, which is now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer. And at the same time, many men and women—some of the Best Known Residents of Ontario and Section—are coming forward daily with Grateful Statements, publicly endorsing Mosby's Tonic in the newspapers. Druggists say they have never before seen any medicine receive so many voluntary endorsements. Among the many well-known people who praise Mosby's Tonic, none is more enthusiastic about this New Medicine than Mr. W. S. Hunter, of 140 Osler St., Toronto, Ont. Mr. Hunter is an Electrician by trade. What he has to say about Mosby's Tonic is Truly Worth Reading. His statement follows:

Stomach Gas Distressing, Sharp Back Pains

"For a long time I was a victim of Upset Stomach," said Mr. Hunter. "Gas pains followed every meal I ate, and I want to tell you that these pains were certainly distressing. I had no appetite to speak of, and always felt more tired in the mornings when I got up than when I went to bed. In fact, I couldn't eat or sleep right at all, and felt tired and worn out ALL THE TIME. I had sharp pains in my back, and my bowels were so badly constipated that I was always taking laxatives.

"Well, that's the condition I was in and I tried medicine after medicine, but never got any real relief. I read about Mosby's Tonic in the papers and decided I would give it a trial. And I am surely glad I did, for this medicine helped me almost at once. It cleared the gas from my stomach and now I CAN EAT. My meals digest properly and I can sleep fine from the moment I go to bed until I get up next morning. The pains are gone from my back and this medicine has regulated my bowels better than IN YEARS. # MILLION CHINESE BAFFLE JAPANESE

Chinese Authorities State Forces Prevent Co-ordinated Attacks

Shanghai, Sept. 25 (AP)—Chinese, reporting they have nearly 1,000,000 men in the field, declared today they had balked Japanese efforts to coordinate a new offensive in China's interior.

The Japanese army claimed its troops were within 50 miles of Changsha, in Hunan Province, South Central China, after a thrust down the Canton-Hankow Railway.

Chinese authorities, however, declared their forces had prevented coordinated air, and naval attacks from deveoping into a major drive from the Yangtse River southward toward Changhsa, objective of a Japanese drive since Tokyo reached a truce with Russia regarding the Manchoukuo frontier.

A Chinese army report said the Japanese had been repulsed at a point 60 miles north of Changhsa with the loss of 30 landing boats and many men. The Chinese were said to have destroyed many bridges and dug numerous tank traps in the area.

At the same time, Japan stepped up her "peace offensive" through propaganda for a new Government for China under Wang Chin-Wei, former Premier of the Chiang Kai-Shek Government of China.

Many observers believe Japan sees in the Western War an opportunity to deal a crushing blow to Chiang's regime and, at the same time, drive the white man from the Orient.

Communiques Issued By Belligerent Nations

Paris, Sept. 25—(AP)—Military dispatches from the Western Front reported today that French artillery had begun a direct bombardment of the main fortifications of the German Westwall.

French batteries, the dispatches said, were dropping large calibre shells on the Westwall casements.

German guns replied to the bombardment, it was said, but failed to make direct hits on advanced French positions.

BRITISH DESTROYER SUNK

Berlin, Sept. 25—(AP)—A German army communique reported today a German submarine had sunk a British destroyer.

The communique gave no details of the sinking.

It claimed eight French warplanes had been shot down on the Western Front and stated "maritime warfare also yielded good results."

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT IN POSITIONS

Paris, Sept. 25—(CP—Havas)—This morning's communique from the French General Staff said:—

"There was local improvement in our positions. Enemy artillery was active in the region southeast of Deux Points (Weibruecken)."

COMPLETE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE

Berlin, Sept. 25—(AP)—The German Army Command issued today the following communiques at 9.45 a.m. (3.45 a.m. EST) :—

"In the East, on Sept. 24, the movement of German troops toward the demarcation line (between German and Russian zones of occupied Poland) continued frictionless everywhere and in perfect unison with Russian units.

"In repeated raids, bombers successfully attacked important military objects in Warsaw.

"At various points in the West, there were reconnoitring and artillery activity on both sides.

"Eight French planes were shot down in an air fight.

"A German submarine sank a British destroyer.

"Maritime warfare also yielded good results."

RUSSIA BARS FOREIGN SHIPS

River Neva Closed and Finnish Ship Included in Order

Moscow, Sept. 25 (AP)—While Russian troops shoved deeper into Poland today, the Soviet Government refused to permit foreign ships on the River Neva, which flows through the outskirts of Leningrad into the Gulf of Finland.

The ban, ordered yesterday, was said to have included Finnish ships. A 1923 agreement between the two countries gave Russia the right to close the strategic waterway to Finnish ships in case of "war danger."

Red troops reported taking many Polish prisoners and arms as they pushed to within 85 miles of Warsaw, occupying much territory formerly held by the withdrawing German army.

The return of wounded Soviet soldiers to Moscow, however, indicated the Poles still were putting up a fight.

Little time is being lost in attempting to Sovietize the newly acquired area. The program, it is said, includes a campaign against landlord and capitalist classes.

Italian Stand May Be Changed Without Notice

Rome, Sept. 23 (CP-Havas)—Premier Mussolini today reiterated Italy's policy of taking "no initiative whatever toward the military operations" in Europe. At the same time he warned the Italian stand might be changed without advance notice.

"Our policy was fixed in the declaration made on Sept. 1," he told a group of Fascist Party chiefs at the Palazzo Venezia. "There is no reason to change it.

"Although Poland has been liquidated Europe is not yet effectively at war. There has not yet been an impact between the main bodies of the armies. This shock may be avoided by taking into account that it is a vain illusion to want to maintain, or better yet to reconstitute, positions which history and dynamism of peoples condemn.

"If I were to appear one day on the balcony and call the whole Italian people to listen, it would not be for the purpose of submitting to an examination of the situation, but to announce to it, as I did on October 2, 1935, and April 9, 1939, decisions of historic import.

(On the former date, Mussolini announced Italy's invasion of Ethiopia. On the latter Italian armed occupation of Albania was announced.)

FRENCH ARTILLERY

Assume Initiative.

Earlier, the French taking advantage of the lull in German thrusts, it was said, assumed the initiative at several points to consolidate positions and thwart German preparations for new attacks.

French dispatches said the action extended from the Warndt Forest on the west to the Bienwald Forest in the east, and that fighting occurred near the German cities of Saarbruecken, Zweibruecken, Pirmasens and Bergzaberg.

Reconnaisance flights were carried out "with success", the French reported.

A morning communique reported "local improvement" in French positions. German artillery was said to have been active in the area southeast of Zweibruecken.

Trying to Learn Secrets.

The French attacking units, informed quarters said, were seeking to learn the secret behind the recent numerous German assaults on advance positions. There was some speculation whether the Germans were putting on a show for the benefit of Fuehrer Hitler, who is reported on the front, or whether the Germans were masking hurried troop displacements and new fortifications ahead of the French forces.

The French said they had "annihilated" several German units which yesterday attempted to dislodge troops from dominating hilltop nests in the Saar, Blies and Lauter river regions.

Dispatches reported the Germans were massing aircraft at strategic frontier points as far south as the Swiss border, indicating aerial operations were likely soon to overshadow the "fortress warfare" on land.

Asked To "Be Patient".

French military writers asked the public to "be patient" because no general offensive has been opened on the western front. Many observers believed French tactics had been designed to lure the Germans into an offensive.

Some French sources asserted the German army was not as powerful as the military machine the Kaiser launched against France in 1914, either in numbers or fighting ability. They conceded, however, that German equipment is excellent, and that there seems to be plenty of it available.

At the same time the French expressed satisfaction with their 75-millimetre field guns, which played such an important part in the last war and which they have been employing effectively to cover advances during the current fighting.

The Germans referred to the "75's" as "devil guns" during the last war, a tribute to their accuracy and the high explosive force of the shells they threw.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, September 26
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN UNCERTAIN day is forecast. There may be many swift-moving events, which may be subject to annoyance and frustration, judging by the lunar figures. With a proper degree of precaution and discretion where there might be pit-falls, plots and other manifestations of duplicity, things may not wind up disastrously. There is the prospect of the helpful intervention of a superior, one high in authority, or just a faithful friend.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a rather routine year, except for some swift-moving episide which may have such aspects of ruthlessness as to make the intervention of those in authority needful. This intervention may save matters from trickery, deceit or some form of sinister entanglement. With this air and circumspect conduct, catastrophe may be averted.

A child born on this day may have a gentle, friendly, sympathetic and humane nature, which may make it an easy prey for schemers and tricksters. It may have artistic, poetic or musical inclinations and talents.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

HER HUSBAND ACCUSED HER FALSELY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a married woman with two small children — 6 and 8 years old. My husband got a divorce by false accusations, saying that I misbehaved while he was away on a business trip, which of course was not true.

I still care a great deal for him and as I don't like to have the children grow up without a father's influence, I should like very much to get him back. My relations and my friends say that I should be glad to be rid of a man who has treated me so cruelly, but in spite of everything I still love him. It was only bad influences and drink that led him away in the first place. Do you know of any way I can get him to return to us? The little boy of 8 talks about him a great deal and we all want him to come home.

Patient

Your signature explains your attitude toward your husband, my dear, and there is nothing more to be said about it. When a woman really wants back a man who has treated her so badly, it's no one's business but her own. You and the children might appeal to him and say that you still love him and would welcome him back. If he hasn't married in the meantime, he may be willing to come back. Weak men, who rush away from wife and children, under the influence of liquor and unscrupulous friends, often discover their mistake and, like the wandering cat, are glad to get back to the fireside again.

His Girl Likes to Spin Yarns

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I'm going with is 18 years old. Although she never refuses me a date she's always bragging about dates she's had with other boys, which I know she's never had, and she acts as if she's doing me a favor in going out with me. If we do meet other boys, she's always nicer to them than to me. Maybe I don't understand her, or do you think she's just the frivolous type of girl?

Wondering

"Would-be-vamp" more nearly expresses her type, than the word "frivolous." A good many young ladies are like this one, and try to paint their innocent young lives more scarlet than their lipsticks. It's just an amiable pose; don't take it too seriously.

Prefers Society of Other Young Men

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 years old and have been going "steady" with a man who is ten years older than I am — a widower with one child. I am very fond of him, and he says he loves me too. But he is continually disappointing me, saying he is busy. From reports that I hear, he is always down at the corner drugstore with the boys.

I haven't seen him for three weeks now. He sees my sister occasionally and asks her every time if I have a new boy friend. I'm tempted to call him up and find out what he means. Would you advise this?

Maisie

If the widower prefers the society of the young men at the corner drugstore, I believe I'd let the matter rest there. A girl of your age is pretty young to accept the responsibility of mothering a small child, and if you did accept, you would want to make a good job of it, wouldn't you.

It seems to me you would be a great deal happier if you married someone with whom you could enjoy your youth, and not begin married life with so many duties right at the beginning. Why try to have an understanding, when he seems content to join the boys of his acquaintance?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

(Copyright 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CARE OF A BABY IN ITS FIRST YEAR—NO. 3

Again and again in this column I have said that it is the duty of every mother to nurse her baby if it is at all possible. Cases where nursing is impossible are very rare, for there are very few reasons why a baby should not be nursed by its mother for at least six months.

There isn't any doubt that mother's milk gives the baby the greatest help in the complicated and difficult business of growing. We know that the milk in a mother's breast is the perfect food for the baby, and that it is the ONLY perfect food for him. Nature intended that food for him.

Bottle fed babies are not as strong or as healthy as breast fed babies, and I don't think any mother has a right to cheat her baby of the slightest degree of his health at this most important period in his life — that is, unless it is necessary for the health of the mother or the baby that he should not be breast fed. For instance, if the mother has tuberculosis it is for the baby's own good that he shouldn't feed at his mother's breast. The mother's condition is a matter for her doctor to determine.

I don't think I need say very much about the mechanics of feeding a baby at the breast. This is so natural a function that it will pretty well take care of itself. However, a satisfactory position is for the mother to turn well on the side on which she is to nurse, with the arm on that side raised above her head. The baby, lying on the bed beside her, can then easily get hold of the nipple, and the mother isn't in a cramped position.

Those in charge of the child and mother naturally will see to it that the first nursing shall not be undertaken by the mother until she has had a good rest. Usually there is no milk in the mother's breast during the first day or so. What generally is there, instead of milk, is a fluid known as colostrum. This clear fluid has a laxative effect and is very valuable to the baby in the first day or so of life.

Since regularity should be the whole theme of the baby's life, and as the whole schedule should revolve around feeding, his meals should be put on a strict schedule by the clock.

Before the first nursing the breasts should be gently but thoroughly washed. If the nipples have been properly attended to during the last two months of pregnancy there will be no dried secretion on them, but if they have not had proper care, this secretion may be present. When it is, it should not be picked off under any circumstances, for this might damage the breast and involve the possibility of infection at this important period. The doctor attending the mother will be able to suggest a solution which, when applied to the breast, will soften the secretion so that it will come off easily. The care of the nipples is most important.

Expert Gives Suggestions For Bread-and Butter Letters

When you write your bread-and-butter letter to your hostess, there are several things to have in mind. First, take your pen in hand very soon after your return home, so that your words will be fresh with the enthusiasm of your visit. Next, remember that you always write the first letter to your hostess, even if you later write other notes of thanks to other members of the family. Most important of all, keep in mind the point of view of your hostess; put yourself in her place and so thank her not only for her hospitality in general, but for special details of her hospitality, special plans that she had for your entertainment. Better a too-long than a too-brief one.

Here's a suggestion

Nancy, my dear,

I loved to come. I loved being with you. I hated to go. And all because you and your delightful family are so welcoming in your hospitality, such perfect hosts. Every minute of my visit was full of happiness, and my heart is full of thanks to you, very special thanks.

And such memories I have for my treasure-chest! The sweet white house on the hill, with its welcoming gate. My charming room, looking out into the peaceful garden. The merry tea-party, with your many interesting and devoted friends. And the luxury of having the opportunity of long talks with you and Jack . . . . I hope that some day soon we can continue the thrilling discussions.

What a privilege it was, to share all this!

Thank you, thank you, and dearest love to you both.

Affectionately,
Betty

Suggestion for a letter to be written by a wife, thanking for both her husband and herself, and including the host in her thanks:

Dear Mary,

All the way back on the train Tom and I talked of the gloriously happy time that we had had with you and Jack. We agreed that we had never had a more delightful week-end, and we made a resolution to try to be, as nearly as we could, the kind of hosts that you and Jack are.

How limitlessly thoughtful you both were for our happiness and comfort! The memory of our wonderful time with you sustains us in this terribly hot city this week.

Very gay and very charming was the Sunday luncheon you gave for us. Every one of your guests was a delight to met. . . and how beautifully devoted they all are to you. No wonder!

Many, many thanks from us both for the happy weekend.

Devotedly,
Sallie

And another suggestion

Dearest Polly,

What a joy it was to be with you and Jim and the children! I need brand-new words to tell you how happy and comfortable you made me, and what inspiration you gave me. Betty told me this morning that I had been "purring" with memories every since I came home 4. . .and that probably best describes what your goodness and thoughtfulness did to me.

Just being with you and your hospitable family would have been enough of a delight, but having added to that pleasure the perfect dinner that you gave for me, the joy of meeting your charming friends, the merry picnic, the excellent swimming . . .how good, how very kind, you were to me.

Deep thanks. And best love to you all.

Affectionately,
Katherine

Hurry and collect that school wardrobe and don't make it all sweaters and skirts. There'll be mornings when you won't have time to get into anything but a one-piece dress, so fastened that you can do your own buttoning and dash wildly out of the dormitory. Such a frock is this feather flannel, aptly named and, to put it mildly, attractively priced. Despite its low cost it has wide seams, a good three-inch hem, smart buttons and all-around pleats.

QUEBEC TO HOLD GENERAL ELECTION

Duplessis Makes Announcement at Three Rivers, Quebec, Sunday

Three Rivers, Que., Sept. 25 (CP)—Quebec's Union Nationale Government, with little more than three years of its five-year term expired, will test its strength at the polls in a Provincial election next month.

Premier Maurice Duplessis announced last night that an election would be held Oct. 25. The Government, he said, "conscious of the rights of the people" has decided to submit to the electorate "questions of the greatest importance, some of which, the most vital ones, have arisen recently."

In a statement announcing the election, the first the Government has faced since it assumed office in 1936, Premier Duplessis indicated that Provincial rights would be one of the main planks in his platform.

"Quebec intends to preserve its full autonomy and to demand from the Federal authority, such as it may be, the integral respect of rights which are guaranteed it by the Constitution," the Premier said.

"The Union Nationale party considers that Provincial autonomy, guaranteed by the Federate Pact, is essential to the best interests of the Province and conforms with its traditions, and is indispensable peregatives."

Alleges Campaign

The Premier said a campaign had been conducted for several years and direct and indirect attempts had been made with a view to lessening considerably "and even to abolishing Provincial autonomy for the purpose of forming but one Government directed by Ottawa."

Quebec, he said, could not and should not lend itself "to manoeuvres which would bring about the ruin of Provincial autonomy and, as a result, the ruin of Canada."

"Invoking the pretext of the war declared by the Federal Government, a campaign of assimilation and centralization, manifest for several years, is accentuating itself in an intolerable manner," he said.

"Ministerial orders have been passed by Ottawa, by virtue of the 'War Measures Act' with the desire and the effect of centralizing at Ottawa, because of the war, all the finances of individuals, municipalities, provinces and the country in general."

All attempts "of which the effect and consequences are to deprive the provinces of revenue which they need and which belongs to them by virtue of the constitution constitute a most reprehensible attack against provincial prerogatives," Mr. Duplessis said.

Liberal Party Routed

In the last election, the Duplessis-led forces gained 76 of the 90 seats in the Legislative Assembly, routing the Liberal party that had held office in Quebec for 38 years.

While not available immediately for comment, it was expected Hon. Adelard Godbout, Mr. Duplessis' predecessor as Premier, would lead the Liberal party that had held office in Quebec for 38 years.

While not available immediately for comment, it was expected Hon. Adelard Godbout, Mr. Dupessis' predecessor as Premier, would lead the Liberal party in next month's voting. Mr. Godbout said in recent addresses throughout the province that his party was prepared for and would welcome an election.

Only 86 seats will be at stake next month. The number of electoral divisions was reduced by four last April.

Mr. Duplessis, announcing that nomination day would be Oct. 18, the week before election, said Quebec's Upper and Lower Houses, the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly respectively, were dissolved Saturday.

DANISH PAPERS PROTEST ATTACKS

German Submarine Attacks in Skagerrak Irritate Denmark

Copenhagen, Sept. 25 (AP)—German submarine attacks in the Skagerrak, an arm of the North Sea between Norway and Jutland, caused sharp newspaper protests in Scandinavian countries today.

In the past two days, two Finnish merchantmen and one Swedish ship have been sunk. The ships were loaded with woodpulp bound for England. (Germany referred to this as cellulose which she said was included in the contraband list.)

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet wrote that the interpretation of contraband which Germany is taking up will practically lead to the fact that there will be nothing outside the contraband list."

"If they are going on in this manner," it said, "it will, in so many words, mean that our exports will be completely stopped. The consequences which this will lead to will be unnecessary to mention."

The Copenhagen newspaper Beringske Tidende in a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent quoted an authoritative source as saying the woodpulp cargoes would have been of great value in the production of munitions and for that reason were pronounced contraband.

1,000 CIVILIANS KILLED IN WARSAW

Radio Staff of Besieged City Stands by Microphone to Bring Latest News

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Budapest, Sept. 25 (AP)—Warsaw's radio staff, for days the Polish capital's last link with the outside world, stood by its microphones again last night to describe a new German bombardment. Announcers said it killed more than 1,000 civilians.

Neither continued shelling nor interference from German stations has been able to silence the broadcasters, who rapidly are assuming a legendary character in the minds of Polish refugees.

Apparently ignoring personal danger, announcers continued to hurl challenges at the besieging Germans and give encouragement to the city's civilian population. From their little studio high up in a modern skyscraper in the heart of the shell-scarred capital, the radio staff chronicled in calm, unhurried voices an hour-by-hour story of Warsaw's defence.

Running With Blood.

With no trace of personal emotion, announcers described streets "running with blood" and littered with mangled bodies. They read long lists of missing women and children, and repeated orders that execution awaits those trying to help friends leave the city.

Frequent instructions were issued directing "able bodied men to obtain shovels and report to headquarters," advising residents to "build barricades in the streets and dig traps for German tanks," and announcing that "Girl Scouts are wanted for first aid work".

There also were frequent appeals to Great Britain and France for help "before it's too late", but with them went word of Warsaw's intention to hold out "to give the world a new proof of Polish heroism".

Plenty of Horse Meat.

The broadcasters told Warsaw residents "there now is plenty of horse meat to eat because of what has happened to Polish cavalry units."

Accounts of German attacks on the city told of incendiary bombs setting fire to crowded hospitals, or air raids wrecking museums and of shells ripping through apartment buildings.

Last night's broadcast said the last few hours had been "the most terrible since the siege began".

"But the spirit of our troops and our citizens is undaunted," the announcer declared.

United Kingdom To Supply Sugar For the Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP)—The Dominion government has concluded an arrangement with the United Kingdom to assure an adequate supply of raw sugar from the West Indies for Canadian refineries, according to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The Board, headed by Hector B. McKinnon, explained that this supply will be augmented in about three weeks by the crop of the Canadian sugar beet industry, which last year produced about 527,000 tons, the equivalent to about 150,000,000 pounds of sugar. It is expected this year's crop will be about the same.

The British sugar controller has agreed to resell raw sugar to the Canadian refineries at cost to meet Canadian requirements. The bulk of this sugar will probably come from the West Indies.

The news was reassuring to Canadian refineries, which had reduced stocks of raw sugar by a rush to produce more than normal supplies of refined sugar to meet unprecedented demand of purchasers in the early days of the war. Under urging of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, the refineries in the first 12 days of September produced 40,000,000 pounds more than in the corresponding period of last year. They complained of raw sugar shortness, as no new supplies were coming into the country.

He was born in 1871 at Whitby and matriculated from Oshawa High School in 1887.

He entered the law office of Messrs. McGee and Jones, remaining there until December of that year when he joined the Dominion Bank at Oshawa as a junior clerk. He served in various branches, including Winnipeg, commencing there when the branch was opened in 1897. In 1899 he was appointed manager of the northend branch which was the first city sub-branch in any Canadian city west of Toronto. In 1902 he returned to Toronto becoming an assistant inspector then to City Hall Branch, Toronto, until 1912 when he become assistant manager at London, England, where he remained until 1925 having succeeded to the managership there in 1918. He retired because of his health in 1926 and returned to Oshawa where he made his home with his sisters in their home on King Street West, into which his father moved in 1873.

HITLER EXPECTED AT STATE FUNERAL

News of Von Fritsch Death Causes Doubt in Mind of Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 25 (CP)—Adolf Hitler generally was expected to come to Berlin tomorrow for the state funeral for Colonel General Baron Werner von Fritsch, former Commander-in-Chief of the German army who was killed in action before Warsaw last Friday.

Von Fritsch's body will be brought to Berlin tonight and taken to the War Ministry building where officers will stand a guard of honor. Funeral services will be held in the square before the memorial to Germany's dead in the last war.

Fate of von Fritsch Mysterious.

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—G. Ward Price, foreign affairs writer of the Daily Mail, today expressed doubt that Colonel-General Werner von Fritsch had been killed in action and suggested that he might have been murdered by the Gestapo (secret police).

"The fate of General von Fritsch is a mysterious event that arouses sinister suspicions," Mr. Ward Price wrote. "They will be shared by all Germans who know the true story of von Fritsch's bitter and justified hostility toward the Nazi regime. The question will have sprung already to their minds: Did von Fritsch fall in action or was he shot by the Gestapo?

"Here was a full general, a former commander-in-chief. Since when have officers of the rank been called upon to expose themselves to enemy fire? In the last great war with all its systematic long range bombardment not a single general of von Fritsch's seniority lost his life.

Formidable to Nazis.

"Killed in action outside Warsaw? Is it at this stage of the Polish war likely that a handful of determined soldiers and civilians defending the ruins of their capital would kill the first general to die in battle for a generation?"

"And if, contrary to the laws of probability, such a casualty occurred, why should the victim be the one commander whose supreme military ability and experience in high office, combined with a sense of outraged honor, made him formidable to the Nazi government?

"A government which accuses Mr. Churchill (First Lord of the Admiralty) of having ordered the sinking of the Athenia and the murder of Calinescu (the Rumanian premier) can hardly wonder that the grim story gives rise to suspicions as to how that end may have come."

RUMANIA, BALTIC NATIONS NEXT?

An expanding Russia, having swallowed a good share of Poland, is expected, by European observers, to reach next for part of Rumania and the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and, possibly, Finland. An invasion of Rumania—the goal being that nation's rich oil fields, would, it is believed, be made in concert with a German force.

BASEBALL'S GREATEST INFIELD READY TO STOP NATIONAL LEAGUE HITS

BABE DAHLGREN — First base

Joe Gordon — Second base

FRANC CROSETTI — Shortstop

RED ROLFE — Third base

When world series time arrives, Cincinnati Reds (or St. Louis Cards) will be faced with the job of getting the ball past the game's greatest infield—some say the greatest of all time. Each player is the best, or close to it, in fielding in the American League, while Gordon and Rolfe carry powerful bats to the plate. Dahlgren, who took over from Lou Gehrig at first, has one of the lowest batting averages ever carried by a regular player at his post, but in the field they speak of him in the same breath with Fred Tenney and Hal Chase. Gordon, in his second year with the team, is already being ranked among the all-time greats. Crosetti is the veteran of the quartette, serving his eighth campaign at short for the champions. He is even weaker at the plate than Dahlgren, but shortstops are not usually carried for their batting ability. Rolfe is having his best year and will probably lead the majors in total hits when the curtain drops. Only Ken Keltner challenges him as the best in his league.

WILLIAM G. BENN CRUSHED AT WORK

Working at Coal Chutes of C.N.R. When Accident Happened

William G. Benn was crushed to death over the winch of a hoist at the Belleville Canadian National Railway coal chutes shortly before midnight last night when he apparently became entangled in the winch rope, used for pulling coal cars into the coal chute, badly mangling his body.

Mr. Benn was employed at the C. N. R. coal chute in the capacity as a ground man assisting in the unloading of coal and the coaling of locomotives and was attending to his duties when it is believed he slipped and grabbed the winch rope to save himself, but was drawn around the hoist drum before he could loosen his hold. Mr. Benn was discovered by Jack Boyd, a fellow employee at the coal chute. The accident happened about 11.20 p.m. last night resulting in apparently instant death, as Mr. Benn was dead upon the arrival of Dr. E. G. Kennedy C. N. R. physician.

Accidental Death

At noon today an inquest was called before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at which time a verdict of accidental death was returned. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., introduced several witnesses, all C. N. R. employees. Albert Jones, C. N. R. Locomotive Engineer and John Boyd, both told of seeing Mr. Benn after he had become entangled in the winch. "Suddenly the hoist slowed up and I looked out the coal chute window to see what the trouble was. I could not see Mr. eBnn, so shut off the engine and went down below where we were unloading a car of coal. I found Mr. Benn's body lying over the winch. I immediately cut the rope to release him and called for help," stated Mr. Boyd.

Dr. Kennedy stated death had been due to internal injuries. There were no eye witnesses. The coroner's jury, impanelled by Sergeant Arthur Harman, tendered a verdict that death came to Wm. Benn on Sept. 24th, as the result of personal injuries received when the body was accidentally drawn into a winch, which he was operating in the course of his employment at the C. N. R. coal chutes.

Born Near Napanee

The late Mr. Benn was born near Napanee 54 years ago being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ezra P. Benn and for the past 27 years has resided in this community being an employee of the Canadian National Railway at the coal chutes. He formerly resided in Tweed and in both communities the deceased had a wide circle of friends, who will sincerely regret his sudden demise. He was a member of the Alliance Tabernacle and surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Jennie Akey, three sons, Sherwood and Vernoon at home, Garfield of Belleville, five daughters, Mrs. John Ketcheson of Belleville, Mildred, Helen, Lena and Myrtle at home, three brothers, Wesley of Cleveland, Ohio, Marshall of Actinolite and Arthur of Belleville, also two sisters, Mrs. Alfred McKnight of North Carolina, and Mrs. John Deline of Actinolite.

The funeral announcement will appear elsewhere in this issue.

Britain Charges Germany With Murder on High Seas

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—Great Britain charged Germany with "murder on the high seas" tonight for sinking the steamship Royal Sceptre, Sept. 6th, with 32 men.

An Information Ministry statement said the sinking directly violated the submarine protocol signed with Germany in 1936 because the crew was cast adrift in boats "without possible hope of reaching land."

NIXON EXPECTS NO ELECTION

Montreal Report Ontario May Follow Quebec is Not Credited

Toronto, Sept. 25.—(CP) — Hon. Harry Nixon, provincial secretary said today that to the best of his knowledge there is no basis for a Montreal report that Ontario might follow Quebec's lead in holding elections shortly.

"We'll have a provincial election sometime all right," he said, "but certainly not this year. To the best of my knowledge, there's absolutely nothing to it."

Legislature officials pointed out that Premier Hepburn need not call an election in Ontario until 1942.

The present Liberal Government was elected on October 6, 1937, and the term is five years. However Mr. Hepburn called the 1937 election less than three years after he was first elected to office on June 19, 1934.

The Premier was not available for comment on the report published by the Montreal Gazette that "a high official of the Union Nationale Party" reported Ontario might have an election.

Attorney General Conant said he had no knowledge of such a development.

SEVERAL SHIPS EXCHANGE FIRE

Inhabitants of Small Island Off Norway Coast Believe Battle Under Way

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 25 (AP)—What apparently was a naval clash took place off the western coast of Norway last night and early today, the Aftenposten's Bergen correspondent reported.

Inhabitants of a small island south of Bergen said several ships of undetermined nationality were steaming northward at full speed last night amid a constant exchange of gunfire.

Bergen, Norway, Sept. 25 (AP)—Inhabitants of Algroi Island reported this afternoon that unidentified ships had been engaged in heavy cannonading off the coast of Norway since 6 a.m. (midnight E.S.T.), leading them to express the belief a naval battle was underway.

The battle—if such it was—apparently was moving closer to the coast, they said. Concussion of large calibre guns shook houses on the Island.

(Cannonading last week in the Kattegatt, a strait between Denmark and Sweden, later proved to be target practice by Swedish batteries.)

Firing stopped temporarily at about 1.45 p.m. (7.45 a.m. E.S.T.) but resumed about half an hour later, the Island inhabitants said.

French Coal Ship Sunk by Submarine

London, Sept. 25—(CP)—A German submarine sank the 2,660-ton French coal ship Phryne in the English Channel yesterday, it was announced here today.

A life boat went out from the British coast and picked up 24 survivors, two of whom were injured.

The site of the sinking was not disclosed, although it was reported seen by persons on shore. Destroyers raced to the scene and circled the site of the attack, but no mention was made by the Government of successful retaliation.

SEEK TO PIERCE SOVIET MYSTERY

Statesmen Hold Meetings Over Future Policy of Russia in Europe

By JEAN ALLARY

(Havas News Agency Staff Writer)

Paris, Sept. 25 (CP-Havas)—Great Britain and France tried today to pierce the mystery of the Soviet Union's future policy in Europe.

Auguste Champetier de Ribes, the French foreign under-secretary, conferred with the Soviet Ambassador, Jacob Suritz. A similar talk was held in London Saturday night between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Ivan Maisky, Soviet envoy in London.

The meetings were held as the Turkish foreign minister, Sukru Saracoclu, went to Moscow to find out as much as he can about the future course of Soviet policy.

Duce's View Not Accepted.

Premier Mussolini in his speech Saturday at Bologna argued that to be logical in their defence of Poland, Britain and France would have to wage war against Russia as well as against the Reich. This viewpoint is not accepted in London and Paris.

Judicially the Franco-British guarantee to Poland is contingent upon Poland's appeal for aid. Poland exercised this prerogative Sept. 1 when Germany invaded her territory but she did not repeat the demand when Russia's troops crossed her frontier.

Militarily speaking, an Anglo-French declaration of war against the U.S.S.R. would not change the situation. The western powers are no more in a position to attack Russia than they were to send troops to Poland to aid the Polish army on its own soil.

Neutrality Declaration.

Politically, such a move might have the effect of throwing Russia definitely into the Nazi camp. The accord between the Nazi and Communist states is considered indisputable here. The economic support by the latter to the former is considered no less so.

But Russia's declaration of neutrality is accepted officially here because it keeps bridges from being burned.

The war envisaged by France and Britain is a war of long duration, a war of blockade. German and Russian arbiters are in conflict over more than one issue. It would be useless, French observers say, to facilitate the fusion into a single bloc of elements who are united for the moment on a tactical basis and by interests which correspond less frequently than they conflict.

'NICK'S LUNCH' GUTTED BY FIRE

Early Morning Fire in Front St. Business Place Causes $7,000 Damage

Fire, believed to have originated in the kitchen raced through the premises of the restaurant operated by Nicholas Chaggares (Nick's Lunch) at 318 Front Street shortly after five o'clock this morning, completely gutting it and causing an estimated loss of $7,000. Smoke driving in dense clouds from the scene of the blaze seeped into second-storey apartments besides doing damage to neighboring stores.

Fire squads fought the stubborn blaze for upwards of two and one-half hours before they succeeded in confining it to the restaurant. ond-storey verandah, immediately above the blazing restaurant kitchen but firemen extinguished it before it got out of control.

The interior of the restaurant and kitchen is a mass of blackened embers. Slicing and grinding machines said by Chaggares to be valued at $700, and the entire equipment, furniture and stock are completely destroyed.

Alarm Rung In

Wakened in his apartment above the restaurant by clouds of thick smoke, Mr. Ben Safe immediately rushed an alarm to fire department headquarters. In the neighboring apartment the family of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Kennedy were roused by a crackling noise and clouds of smoke.

Front Street as far as the corner of Campbell was filled with smoke, and fire squads were driven back by the terrific heat and smoke that poured from the front of the restaurant. Plate glass windows in the front of the place were cracked and shattered by the intense heat.

Stores Filled With Smoke

Smoke poured in the Smith Hardware Store, McCurdy's Jewelry shop, the Uptown Billiard Parlors, Symons Store and Stewart's barber shop, causing damage. Fire squads were forced to tear away the ceiling of the restaurant as the flames secured a foothold in the space between it and the floor of uptairs apartments.

Mr. Chaggares stated this morning that he is at a loss to understand how the fire started. "The restaurant was closed shortly after two o'clock," he said. "Nothing was left on the stove, and the fire was low. No one was in the restaurant at the time."

Toronto Argos Lack Punting In Defeating Balmy Beach, As Football Season Opens

Argos Will Now Play Varsity for City Championship

ROYALS WIN

Ted Reeve Produces Smart Team but Loses Quarterback for a Month

By the Canadian Press

Big Bob Isbister's business transfer from Toronto to Hamilton may prove to be the most momentous thing to happen to the Interprovincial Football Union this year.

In 1937 and 1938 the mighty right foot of the University of Toronto graduate was a major force in Toronto Argonauts' drives to successive Dominion championships. Then this spring Isbister moved back to his home in Hamilton to continue his accountancy career and the bottom fell out of the Argos' kicking division, while Hamilton's Tigers became a threat to overthrow the Toronto club right in the Big Four.

The Tigers used Isbister only sparingly Saturday but he booted the ball high and far enough to play a big part in the Bengals' 12-6 victory at Sarnia over the Imperials.

Punting Quite Weak

Meanwhile the Argos had everything but good punting when they defeated Balmy Beach of the Ontario Union 24-12 in the opener of Toronto's annual city championship series. Earl Selkirk and Annis Stukus tried hard to give the Scullers effective kicking, but if the Argos hadn't had something else they would never have qualified for next Saturday's city final against University of Toronto.

The indication of how much Isbister's transfer will mean was the highlight of a four-game program of exhibitions pointing toward the start of the eastern senior schedules Oct. 7.

At Montreal the Royals of the Big Four, in their first start under coach Ted Reeve, crushed McGill's Intercollegiate champions 19-2. University of Western Ontario seniors walloped Royal Military College Intermediates of Kingston 35-2 at London.

Three Yards Better

Isbister averaged three yards a kick better than Sarnia's Hank Galloway and Mike Meikle. The clubs picked up single points until Sarnia led 3-2 in the second quarter, when a blocked kick gave Dillon Southwick an opportunity to crash over for a Hamilton touchdown. Jimmy Shanks' fumble led the way to the Tigers' other major score after the Imperials had reduced the lead to 7-6 on single points.

Bill Stukus passed for three touchdowns, two of them by fleet Art West, to pace Argos to their success. Their fourth touchdown went to Jimmy Farmer, line-plunger from the University of Western Ontario.

Quarterback Injured

Reeve's pleasure at the spanking success in his first Big Four assignment was tempered by loss of quarterback Leo McCullough, probably for a month, with a broken collarbone. He went out of the game after the Royals, with Gordie Noseworthy's kicking featuring their attack, had pushed McGill around Molson Stadium all afternoon.

Western produced two unknown stars in their already-brilliant backfield, Harry Szluminski from Hamilton and Gordon Risk from Toronto. Risk scored two touchdowns and Szluminski proved to be an all-around back in the display of power that brought the Mustangs 32 of their points in the first half.

FINISHING STRONG

Staging a fine comeback after hitting less than .300 for the first time in his 14-year major league career last year, and not seeing very much action at the beginning of the current season, Paul Waner, ABOVE, Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder, has climbed among the five-leading batsmen in the National league and recently went through 20 straight games with at least one hit in each before being stopped by a couple of Boston rookies.

CONN RISKS TITLE AGAINST BETTINA

Don't Want Promise of Return Bout if He Loses Fight

By GAYLE TALBOT

Associated Press Sports Writer

Pittsburgh, Sept. 25—(AP)— In cautious days likes these, when the average champion demands about everything except a pension and the lemonade concession for risking his crown, the attitude of this town's Billy Conn is refreshing.

Billy is making the first defence of his light-heavyweight title here tonight against swarthy Melio Bettina, the Beacon, N. Y., scrapper from whom he won it only a few months ago, and Billy doesn't even have the promise of a return bout in case he loses!

He didn't want one, he told promoter Miquel Jacobs, who employes a full-time "House" lawyer for the sole purpose of writing water-tight contracts in which champions get all the best of it.

"What do I want with one of those return things?" he asked the flabbergasted Jacobs. "If I can't knock that mug out this time I don't want him doing me any favors. All I want to know is when I fight Joe Louis. I'll fight him and his brother at the same time for the fifty grand Pastor got."

Taking them pound for pound, Billy possibly is the chestiest champ since John L. Sullivan, and if John L. ever had pegged a spittoon at Conn he would have had a fight on his hands.

Though he won from Bettina only by a close decision the last time, the Pittsburgh terror won't talk anything but knockout tonight.

ROCHESTER WINGS DEFEAT NEWARK

Seventh and Deciding Game Won by Wings in the Ninth Frame 2-1

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 25 (AP)—For the fifth time the leader of an International League representative in the Little World Series, Manager Billy Southworth of the pennant-winning clubs here from 1928 through '31, will be at the Red Wing helm tomorrow night when his present playoff champions start against Louisville Colonels here.

Yesterday the Red Wings climaxed a great Governors' Cup series comeback when Herschel Lyons beat Newark Bears in the seventh game of the set 2-1 turning in a seven-hit performance to beat Max Macon. Saturday night they had won a 12-inning thriller 7-6 to gain a 3-3 tie.

Louisville, finishing fourth in the American Association and 31½ games behind Kansas City, eliminated Minneapolis, then ousted Indianapolis, conqueror of Kansas City. The club, piloted by Bill Burwell, veteran Association moundsman, since illness sidetacked Donie Bush, was to arrive from Louisville today.

The 21st series between representatives of the International and the Association, the junior classic pits teams which have four times previously competed in the annual affair.

Tentative starting lineups called for Mike Ryba, Rochester right-hander, to pitch tomorrow against Leroy (Bud) Parmalee, a right-hander, of the Colonels.

HAMILTON TIGERS UNKNOWN FACTOR IN COMING RACE

Jim Palmer Has Rebuilt Grid Squad from Bottom to Top

ISBISTER THE ACE

Attack Built Around Former Argo Star and a Strong Line

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP)—Rebuilt from the top down, entrusted to a young man making his coaching debut, Hamilton Tigers will start as the unknown factor in the 1939 Interprovincial Rugby Football Union. The pre-season gossip has given Tigers a chance for every position from first to last.

But the man who knows their strength best—Jim Palmer—says nothing and makes no claims except that he'll have a hustling, fighting club. Recruited from Toronto Argonauts, with whom he became one of the game's best linemen, Palmer has prepared Tigers with sound tactics auguring well for the future.

Five-Star Special

They were fortunate enough to get a five-star special in Bob Isbister and, naturally enough, the attack has been built around the elongated back who kicked Argos to two successive Dominion championships. Palmer has welded a powerful group of veterans and youngsters around his ace.

The new coach has taken the best of the 1938 Tigers such as lineman Abe Zonkin, Len Wright, Len Onions, Ivan Edwards and George Mountain. He had a fertile field in the Dandas intermediate Red Devils from which to draw new blood. Jack Craig, Eddie Jordan, Bud Donald and George Pawley, all from Dundas, have earned their senior spurs.

Flanking Isbister on the starting backfield probably will be Ted Manorek, Denny Whittaker at quarter, Bill Murmylyk and Johnny Craig. Manorek is a fine plunger, one of the hardest hitters in the game. Whittaker, with this season's supporting cast, may become the east's outstanding quarterback.

Steadying Influence

Such men as Zvonkin, Onions, Mountain and Johnny Mallard assure strength and experience in the line and a steadying influence on the newcomers Palmer undoubtedly will throw at the opposition in his rebuilding campaign. Though the tackling brigade has been weakened by the retirement of Jimmy Simpson and a serious injury to Tommy Bonk, the department is filled capably by Edwards, Wright and Johnny Agnew.

Dillon Southwick has shown enough in pre-season workouts to promise a brilliant gridiron future as a quarter or plunging back.

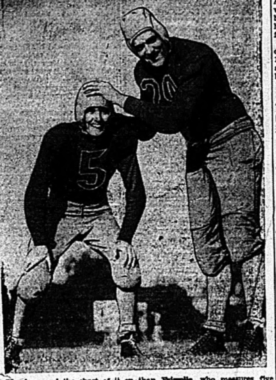
Wartime Regulations Adopted by C. A. H. A.

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)— Players who are moved from one place in Canada to another because of military enlistment this winter may play with more than one Canadian Amateur Hockey Association club.

The C.A.H.A. executive decided at a weekend meeting here to suspend its residence rule in the case of players enlisting for military service of any kind. Furthermore, a National Hockey League player who enlists will be allowed to line-up with an amateur team of the district in which he is stationed.

OPENING FALL SEASON
PRO. WRESTLING
HUME ARENA, FRIDAY, SEPT. 29th., 8.30 p.m.

LONG AND SHORT OF IT



The long and the short of it on the Canadian gridiron. Seen at a workout of Toronto's O.R.F.U. entry, Balmy Beach, are Jack Frizzelle, and Susie Turner, backfielder and linesman respectively. There may be smaller players in the game than Frizzelle, who measures five foot three, but there are probably no more altitudinous ones than Turner, a softball pitcher of renown in Ontario during the summer. Susie looks down on his fellow player from a height of six foot seven.

Crucial Series Between Cards And Reds Opens on Tuesday With Cincinnati Having Edge

Reds Win 16 of Their Last 20 Games to Increase Margin Half a Game

DERRINGER WINS 24th

Brooklyn Dodgers Move Into Third Place by Double Win

By Judson Bailey

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The thermal status of the National League pennant race has passed from the boiling to the exploding point, and when Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals collide tomorrow something is going to blow.

The thermometer gives a little different reading now than at the first of the month, however, because the "heat" is on the challengers as the two teams rush into their four-game series.

A few weeks ago, Cincinnati's critics said the Reds would have to buckle down to stave off St. Louis. They did—winning 16 of their last 20 games and seven straight up to and including yesterday's 11-2 triumph over Pittsburgh.

Drop Half-Game in 2 Weeks

As a result the Cardinals, winning 13 of 15 games and likewise their last seven in a row including a 9-1 crusher against Chicago Cubs. Sunday, actually have dropped half a game further in the last two weeks. They must grab each of their remaining games—four with Cincinnati and three with Chicago—to win the pennant by half a game should the Reds resume their rout of the Pirates.

This is how they stand today:

| Club | Won | Lost | G.B. | G.P. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati | 93 | 54 | .. | 7 |
| St. Louis | 89 | 57 | 3½ | 7x |

x One game with New York cancelled.

Cincinnati's triumph yesterday was the fifth in three days against Pittsburgh and Paul Derringer's 24th of the season. He spaced seven hits while his teammates made good use of 11 passes issued by four pitchers.

Sweep Series

Max Lanier, the Cardinals likely-looking left-handed Rookie, allowed only four hits, and his mates got 16 in completing a sweep of the Chicago series.

Brooklyn Dodgers dragged down their second double-header in two days from the Phillies, 3-1 and 5-3, to move past the Cubs into third place. New York Giants and Boston Bees split two games, New York taking the first, 5-4, and dropping the nightcap, 5-3.

World champion Yankees, eager to pass the mark of 107 victories set by Joe McCarthy's first New York pennant winner in 1932, chalked up No. 104 at the expense of Washington Senators, 3-2. Joe Di Maggio hit his 30th homer in the ninth, and Babe Dahlgreen doubled in the winning run.

Tigers Win Pair

Detroit Tigers toppled Cleveland Indians out of third place in the American League with a pair of victories, 2-1 and 9-1. Hank Greenberg and Rudy York hit successive homers in the sixth to win the first for Tommy Bridges.

Chicago White Sox took another double helping of St. Louis Browns 11-9 and 4-3 and Boston Red Sox scored five runs in the eighth to beat Philadelphia Athletics, 9-4.

Albert College Opens Season With a Victory

Pete Beach's Albert College gridders unofficially pried off the rugby football lid with a 3 to 2 win over Regiopolis College (Kingston) on Saturday afternoon. The game was played under rather trying conditions, as rain fell for the greater part of the tussle.

Coach Beach trotted out his team on the new Albert College gridiron, situated on the campus immediately west of the College proper. New goal posts were in position and the "tri-colors" initiated their new football field with victory.

Hagyaid booted a long placement for three points in the first period, while in the second quarter the visiting Regiopolis squad booted two field goals for one point each. The second half was marked with some exceptionally fine defensive rugby football on the part of both teams. Regiopolis worked the pigskin to Albert's two yard line, but the Beach-coached line held superbly. Regiopolis also held splendidly under reverse conditions.

Hagyaid, Molden, Wooley and Maidens showed promise in the first game of the current pigskin kicking parade in Belleville. The return game will be played at Regiopolis on Wednesday, while Albert open their senior C.O.S.S.A. schedule versus the Belleville Collegiate next week on the home gridiron.

OTTAWA C. I. WINS

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP)—Ottawa Glebe Collegiate captured the Queen's University trophy for the highest aggregate score at the Eastern Ontario Secondary Schools Association track and field meet held here Saturday when athletes from the Ottawa school scored a total of 67 points. It was Glebe's 12th consecutive win.

Only recrd obroken at the meet, which was held under heavy rain, was the senior mile, which Johnny Seymour, covered in 4:52 to clip 1 3-5 seconds off the record established by Alfred Burns, Arnprior high school, in 1935.

SPORTING CONVICTS

London—(CP) —Convicts at the Pentonville prison are dissatisfied with the news service they get from the outside world. They have asked that racing and other sporting results be supplied them.

STUDENT OLYMPICS

Monte Carlo, Monaco—(CP)—Belgium defeated France 3-2 in the soccer match which opened the eighth student Olympiad here. Representing students of 24 nations, 1,200 athletes took the Olympic oath at the opening.

WOMAN'S PRIVILEGE

LONDON, (CP)—If Harry Mizler, former British lightweight boxing champion, lost his fight with Harry Craster, Betty Greenfield said she would not marry him. Mizler lost, but Betty married him anyway.

MAY SET NEW UNDEFEATED RECORD

Back in 1929 when the Yankees were finishing second to Connie Mack's Athletics in the American League, they had a hurler who went through the season undefeated—Tom Zachary. Tom only pitched on rare occasions and by the end of the season had posted 12 wins. This year the Yanks have a young man on the roster, who, like old Tom, takes to the mound infrequently, but he may equal or surpass the 12-0 mark before the season ends. Steve Sundra, ABOVE, has 11 victories to his credit with nothing on the other side of the ledger, and in the remaining games on the schedule will pitch often enough to set a new mark—if he can come through.

Between the Lines

Softball sustained a severe body blow, if not a Joe Louis left hook, over the week end when Johnnie Bawden announced he had accepted a position in Kingston. For some years past, in fact ever since Bawden beat Kingston in 1937, the Limestone City softball moguls have cast covetous eyes towards Bawden and more particularly his good right arm. Not only will Belleville lose Bawden, but we hear he is taking his catcher, Alfie Rowbotham along to Kingston with him and at least one Belleville outfielder is also slated to move eastward. Who the outer gardener is we cannot say at this time, but both Stan Amo and Bill Whalen have been mentioned. Strangely all of the players included in the Kingston raid are members of the Shell "Oilers" the team to eliminate the Kingston Tanners this year. Could it be that the Limestone City softball moguls were unaware of the fact that both the Corbys A.C. and the Point Anne "Cementmen" made matters more interesting for the "Oilers" than did the Kingston nine in the O.A.S.A. playdowns?

The loss of Bawden to Belleville softball will be keenly felt by the patrons of the game, but no doubt cheered by what clubs which might have to be his opposition in years to come. Since entering softball a few years ago Johnnie Bawden boasts of a formidable pitching record. In 1936 he hurled the Belleville "Percivals" to an intermediate "A" championship in the O.A.S.A. In 1937 Bawden was found pitching for the Corbin Locks, winners of the Belleville and District League, but lost to Peterboro. In 1938 he pitched for Point Anne and again he was a top-notch hurler, as the "cementmen" beat Kingston, who had beaten Corbys in a previous series, but Oshawa rubbed the Ox Point lads out of the picture. This season Bawden hurled for the "Oilers" and we do not have to elucidate on his splendid mound efforts during the campaign just passed. Besides being a good pitcher, Bawden can field and is one of the most prolific hitters in softball. In Alfie Rowbotham, Kingston gained an up-and-coming receiver who battles all and sundry without fear or favour and Rowbotham is a part of Bawden these days. The Kingston Tannery is providing employment for the players educated in Belleville.

Bawden is still in his early 20's, while Rowbotham and the suggested outfielder are just up from the junior ranks. Belleville softball fans should be proud of the fact that they are providing material for other centres. Frankly speaking we would like to see more junior ball in Belleville, both baseball and softball. If we can educate the players and be of material assistance to the sport-minded youth of this city in procuring employment elsewhere, then Belleville is at last doing something worthwhile towards establishing the youth of Canada with staple employment. In the migration of two or three softball players from the local ranks it does not necessarily mean softball is going to rack and ruin, because we have saved the best news in the matter until the last. Following on the question of Saturday, regarding the possible moving of the 6100 type engines back to the Belleville C.N.R. roundhouse, we have been told that the C.N.R. may enter the Belleville softball wars in 1940, and who knows what such a move might hold for our own home town fans another season? It has been said—all's well that ends well and the 1940 softball season is still afar.

The Belleville contingent of softball players to migrate to Kingston are scheduled to take up residence in the Limestone City and procure employment at the Kingston Tannery early next month.

Manager Norm Barriage, of the Hume Arena, dropped in over the weekend to say the Montreal wrestling promoters had wired him and assured him of a complete three-bout card for Friday night. "These Quebec promoters seem anxious to show their wrestlers in Ontario and over the long distance telephone the other day the head promoter assured me his wrestlers would give Belleville fans something in the line of grappling they've never seen before. There is a trend to return to the scientific method of wrestling, but the Montreal promoters say they are matching scientific wrestlers along with those of the more pugnacious or brutal type, which gives the fans an opportunity to judge for themselves which style of wrestling is the more appropriate," revealed Mr. Barriage after a conference with the eastern grappling moguls.

The Hamilton Tigers, with Bob Isbister punting steadily, clawed the Sarnia Imperials 16 to 6 to unofficially open the football season Saturday. The Toronto Argos swamped the Balmy Beach squad 24-12 in the first city series game in the Queen City, while down at Montreal the Quebec Big Four Royals beat the McGill Redmen 19-2. Wally Hi[illegible], playing flying wing for Western University, scored a touch down for Mustangs who beat Royal Military College 35 to 2 to round out the weekend rugby exhibitions.

Fading badly in the latter stages of the game, the Trenton Yourex mushballers bowed to Orillia 10 to 6 at home on Saturday. The game was played in a drizzling rain simply because Orillia was 90 minutes late in arriving in Trenton. Yourex took an early-game lead, but saw it dwindle away as the Orillia batters punished the ball in the dying innings to rally and win.

By virtue of winning two double-headers and a single game since Friday, the Cincinnati Reds are 3 1-2 games ahead of the hard-pressing Cardinals. The Reds have ten games to play in seven days and if they can continue to knock off those two bill decisions the Redlegs should just about cop the bunting, but in a race like the Reds and Cards are staging the pennant is not won until the last man is retired. The Yankees extended their games won to 14, but can't afford to lose a single game left if they hope to shatter their 1927 record of games won in one season.

DISCARD SCORES

Derby, England, —(CP)— Derbyshire did not require the services of a 12th man in a game against Nottinghamshire, so the substitute player dashed away to play for a minor team and scored 100 runs and took seven wickets for 25.

VERSATILE PLAYERS

Melbourne—(CP)— Don Bradman, Australian cricket ace, has won the South Australian squash championship, defeating D. P. Turnbull, a Davis Cup tennis player.

JOE McCARTHY HAS THIS SQUAD FROM WHICH TO SELECT HIS PITCHERS

Come world series time and with it the momentous decision to be made by managers of the competing teams as to their choice of pitchers. While Cincinnati Reds will enter the series with Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer and what amount to a lot of guys named Joe, and St. Louis Cards, should they make the grade, are faced with the same prospect only worse, Joe McCarthy, masterminding his fourth straight series, will choose one member of the group shown here with more than a 50-50 chance that he will get a well-pitched game. LEFT to RIGHT, along the back row: Red Ruffing, Oral Hilderbrand, Johnny Murphy, Atley Donald, Steve Sundra and Monte Pearson; and in front, Lefty Gomez, Marius Russo, Spurgeon Chandler and Bump Hadley. Ruffing, Gomez, Murphy, Pearson and Hadley were all on the winning Yankee teams of the past three years.

James D. Coleman Dies While Walking

Well-Known Agricultural Figure in Ontario and Western Canada

Mission City, B.C., Sept. 25 (CP)—James D. Coleman, widely known in agricultural activities in Ontario and Western Canada, died suddenly Sunday while walking from his farm home at Cedar Valley, near here, to Mission City.

Five brothers and one sister also survive, D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal; George T. Coleman, general superintendent of transportation, Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal; Dr. E. H. Coleman, undersecretary of state, Ottawa; Charles E. Coleman, North Bay, Ont.; Fred Coleman, Ottawa; and Mrs. A. H. Garson, Tyvan, Sask.

Mr. Coleman was born in Carleton Place, Ont. He first came west to Maple Creek, Sask., where he imported horses in the heavy immigration years on the prairies before the first Great War, and later farmed at Hurdman, Alta. He went east to farm at Acton, Ont., but came west again.

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

"I cannot imagine what has happened to Elizabeth. I never saw such an alteration in a girl! When she first came to the house I thought she was particularly unaffected and charming, but now—well, I am beginning to hope that after all Roy is not serious in his attentions, because I am sure that she is incapable of making him happy."

She paused hopefully, but her husband did not raise his eyes from the newspaper until she said with a touch of exasperation:

"Well, why don't you say something?"

He looked up then with mild surprise.

"My dear, what do you want me to say? The girl seems all right as far as I can judge. Young people are all a little wild, but they will get over it in time, and settle down as we did."

"As we did!" his wife retorted. "Did I ever rush all over the place in trousers? Did I ever call every stray man 'darling,' without expecting him to take it seriously?"

Mr. Selby chuckled.

"You probably would have done just that—had it been the thing at the time," he answered. "And, as a matter of fact, I consider that trousers are distinctly becoming to Elizabeth."

"Becoming" his wife echoed eloquently.

There was a short silence before she started again.

"Last night—when the Beasleys were here—I suppose you know they were playing The Murder Game until well past midnight! And without the slightest consideration for those unfortunates who were trying to sleep! I spoke to Roy this morning, but he only laughed and asked why I didn't stay up and join in the fun!"

"And why didn't you?" her husband ventured. "They seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely, though I must admit I heard one or two blood-curling screams."

"Such nonsense!" Mrs. Selby protested. "Elizabeth tells me they were looking for Bingo, or whatever absurd name they have christened our alleged ghost."

"And did Bingo obligingly materialise?" her husband asked interestedly.

"Of course not! I don't believe in ghosts, for one thing, and for another, supposing there are such things, is any self-respecting ghost likely to appear with such a pandemonium everywhere?" But, in spite of her matter-of-fact words, Mrs. Selby shivered a little. "If I believed in ghosts I should certainly not continue to live in this house," she added positively.

But Mr. Selby smiled, and with an impatient gesture his wife discarded her embroidery and went out into the garden.

She was not feeling at all happy, although she could not explain why.

She had been quite pleased when Roy and Barbara informed her that Elizabeth was to continue the visit which had been so summarily broken. She liked Elizabeth— or, rather, she had liked her—until a week ago, when a very changed and different Elizabeth suddenly descended upon the household and proceeded to play havoc with its cheerful respectability.

"It must be the effects of Paris" Mrs. Selby decided, as she stood in the sunshine, shading her eyes and trying to see what had become of her family.

"Roy!" she called. "Elizabeth! Barbara!"

A charming voice answered from somewhere.

"Coo-ee! Coo-ee!" And a pair of slim legs in rather baggy, but perfectly cut, trousers suddenly came into view from between the branches of a tree, and Elizabeth's face, framed by leaves and tousled hair, peered down at her.

"Here I am, but don't tell Roy. He thinks I'm somewhere in the orchard."

Mrs. Selby stared up at her.

"How did you get there?" she demanded.

Elizabeth laughed.

"I swarmed up," she admitted. "Barbara tried, too, but she couldn't manage it."

"I should think not, indeed!" Mrs. Selby said firmly. "Barbara has far too much sense to risk breaking her neck."

"Oh, but she'd have liked to!" Elizabeth protested. "Only she couldn't! Still, if you think I ought to come down—" And the slim body dropped gracefully from its precarious position on a swaying branch, and landed at Mrs. Selby's feet.

"Well, really!" the elder woman protested, but she was fully alive to the picture Elizabeth made.

In spite of the dishevelled hair and flushed face—or perhaps because of them—she looked like some graceful nymph.

She pushed back her tumbled hair and glanced apprehensively across the garden for a sign of Roy.

"I think you had better come indoors and have a cool drink," Mrs. Selby said practically, and, against her will, for she was a kind-hearted woman, she remembered the stories she had heard of this girl's upbringing and her mother's history.

Perhaps, after all, there was something in tradition, she thought, and again she hoped that Roy was not really serious in his devotion.

Elizabeth dutifully walked with her towards the house, and Mrs. Selby noticed, with a sense of disquiet, that the small feet peeping from under the baggy trousers were guiltless of stockings. Just sandals! Tied with gaily colored strings!

"Isn't it a heavenly morning?" Elizabeth said suddenly.

"It's certainly very hot," Mrs. Selby agreed. "And I think it's a mistake for you to be bare-haded in the sun—sunstroke can be a very serious matter."

"I love the heat!"

There was a little silence before Mrs. Selby tried again.

"You really ought to take more care of yourself, Elizabeth," she said. "I am sure you are not too strong, and all these late nights and rushing about must undermine your constitution."

Elizabeth laughed.

"You mean, perhaps I may die young?" she enquired, and then with a sigh, "I shan't! It's only people who want to live who die young."

INSTALMENT 22

Mrs. Selby stood still, and now there was real concern in her face.

"You don't mean that you would like to die, surely?" she asked in perplexity.

Elizabeth shrugged slim souldders beneath the silk shirt she was wearing with the baggy trousers which had shocked her hostess but which Mr. Selby had pronounced becoming.

"What would it matter! I probably shouldn't know anything about it," she said flippantly.

"My dear," Mrs. Selby said in a motherly voice, "that almost sounds as if you are not very happy."

The girl's beautiful eyes met her own.

"Do you think anyone is really—very happy?" she asked. It was so terribly disconcerting, and Mrs. Selby felt bewildered as she answered helplessly:

"I like to think most people are reasonably happy. I have had a very happy life myself. I have always been quite contented." But even as she spoke she was asking herself whether it was quite the truth, or whether—had it been possible to alter things—she would have liked them to be a little different.

Of course, one became used to life, as it were. One got into a rut from which it was difficult to escape. Still, it hurt her kind heart to hear this girl, who was still on the threshold of life, talking so cynically.

Perhaps she and Roy had quarreled, she thought in quick relief, and that explained it, for even modern young people sometimes took things very seriously, and with the best intention in the world, she said, with her hand on the girl's shoulder:

"My dear, I am sure he didn't really mean to be unkind."

Elizabeth repeated the last words blankly.

"Mean to be unkind?"

"Roy," Mrs. Selby explained. "I know he is thoughtless sometimes —but you know, without being told, that he is very fond of you, and would never willingly say or do anything which might cause you pain."

"Oh," Elizabeth said, and she bit her lip to check a smile. "I wasn't thinking of Roy," she said gently after a moment. "And he hasn't done anything. It's only—"

And then suddenly she was laughing again. "I'm afraid I talk an awful lot of rubbish sometimes."

Roy came racing up behind them.

"Where have you been?" he demanded breathlessly. "You said the orchard and—"

Elizabeth interrupted coolly.

"I changed my mind. I was up in the oak tree."

"Cheating!" he accused her with boyish approach.

"I like cheating," Elizabeth retorted.

"You wouldn't like it if I cheated when we play games," he said sharply.

A shrug of her shoulders was the only answer, and Mrs. Selby said quickly, with a view to pouring oil on waters which she imagined were growing troubled:

"Well, come and have a nice cool drink. You both look very hot. Where's Barbara?"

"She's just come in," Mr. Selby informed them from the lounge window. "And at the moment she is on the telephone, talking to someone at great length."

"One of her boy friends, I expect," Elizabeth ventured.

Mrs. Selby cast a quizzical glance at Elizabeth's unruffled face.

"She hasn't any heart. That's the real trouble," she decided. "I expect she takes after her poor mother."

Barbara came bounding into the room.

"It was Kim!" she announced in a voice which tried hard to express complete indifference. "He's coming down. He said it was too grilling to stay in town, and could we put him up for a couple of days, so, of course, I said 'Yes.'"

"Without consulting your mother?" Mr. Selby ventured mildly, but his family ignored him.

"About time he did come," Roy grumbled. "He hasn't been here for—well, not since you went to Paris, Elizabeth."

"How tragic!" she said mockingly. "I wonder you have not had a complete nervous breakdown."

"Don't you like Kim Lawless?" Mrs. Selby asked in faint surprise, but Elizabeth did not answer. She had walked again to the wide-open French window and was staring out at the sunshine.

She had not expected that Kim would visit High Chimneys while she was there; or didn't he know? Not that it mattered one way or the other, for she had determinedly shut his memory out of her heart since the day she knew about Penelope.

Married! Oh, well, why worry? But a fierce little look crept into her eye, as she glanced in the direction of the sundial.

"Love makes Time pass away; Time makes Love pass away."

Yes! It was amazing how suddenly her love for Kim Lawless had died. Just at first she had suffered, but now it was over and done with, and if ever he involuntarily crept into her thoughts it was only as Penelope's husband.

Poor Penelope!

"She's becoming quite neurotic," Miss Thornley sometimes said of her elder niece. "I suppose the only thing is to leave her absolutely alone, but really—sometimes I am most apprehensive."

Elizabeth had listened in silence, remembering her sister's tearless agony that morning when the little wedding-ring had betrayed her secret.

Penelope had made her swear never to tell anyone.

"I promised Kim," she said. "And it's all over and done with, and I only want to forget it."

But Elizabeth knew that it could never be forgotten.

And now he was coming to High Chimneys, and she was conscious of a cold curiosity to see how she would be affected by their meeting. Somehow she could not believe that it would make the very slightest difference to her.

And yet her mother had said that you really loved somebody—really loved somebody—it was always the same, no matter what happened, forever and ever!

"It won't be like that with me," she thought, and suddenly it seemed a thing at which to weep.

There were moments when Elizabeth felt as if she was no longer herself; as if someone had taken away the sensitive loving heart which had once been herself, and had given her something much colder and more cynical in its place.

For now nothing seriously mattered. She was never really conscious of acute pain or anger or pity or of any deep emotion; only of being urged on by the feeling that as one had to get through life one might as well do it as quickly and as pleasantly as possible, without allowing other people to become near or dear.

She liked being at High Chimneys. She could sleep well, for one thing and, at first, after she knew about Penelope, her greatest trouble had been that she could not sleep.

Endless wakeful nights, during which restless hands seemed to be tugging at her, refusing to allow her to forget or to find peace.

Often she had walked the room until daylight came. Sometimes she had felt that she must strike her head against the wall or against something hard, in order to find unconsciousness.

But in the end she had won, and now the troubled waves of life had subsided, and she looked out with indifferent eyes over placid waters.

Barbara's voice suddenly broke in upon her thoughts.

"I didn't tell Kim you were here so it will be a pleasant surprise for him. You like Kim, don't you Betty?"

Barbara had abbreviated the longer "Elizabeth" to "Betty."

"It's so much more matey," she had explained cheerfully.

"We all like Kim," Mrs. Selby answered for her. "When did he say we might expect him, dear?"

"To dinner—and I told him not to be late."

INSTALMENT 23

The maid brought a jug of iced drink, but Elizabeth took only a sip from her glass and put it down again.

"Is there any news from Miss Thornley?" Mrs. Selby asked her. "Or of Penelope?"

"I had a letter yesterday," Elizabeth answered, but she did not say that there had been no mention of Penelope.

"That sister of yours wants a good shaking," Roy said breezily. "She ought to be made to go out and knock about the world with other people. It would take her mind off her imaginary ills."

Elizabeth flushed.

"They're not imaginary," she said sharply.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, it's silly to go on moaning about a thing that can't be helped," he submitted apologetically. "It's hard luck, of course—losing her voice like that, but—"

"It's not only the loss of her voice," Elizabeth interrupted tensely.

There was an uncomfortable silence, until Roy, who was always irrepressible in an argument, murmured something about a man having the right to change his mind if he wished to—and if she was referring to Lawless—

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

KIWANIS TO AID IN WAR WORK

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP) — District Governor Reginald V. Harris of Halifax last night urged the opening meeting of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritimes convention of Kiwanis to prepare to give all the aid Kiwanis can extend to this country in time of war.

Donald Henshaw, Toronto, told the meeting that Kiwanians should continue social work, particularly among children, so as to build better citizens. Everything possible should be done, he said, to make the ambitious dreams of boys and girls come true in later life.

SUBS CANNOT CONTROL SEAS

U. S. Naval Experts Says Warship Could Stand Five or Six Torpedoes

By E. C. DANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 25 (AP)—Submarines may harass and challenge shipping, but United States naval experts here believe they never could win control of the seas by themselves.

Elusive and often extremely destructive, the U-boat nevertheless has serious disadvantages when matched against surface warcraft, experts contend. Here are some of the reasons:

The submarine cannot be submerged indefinitely. Cruising ranges under water are from 75 to 250 miles. It must come to the surface to replenish air and power. Above water it is vulnerable to a single well-placed shot. Its vision, too, is limited. Wear and tear on machinery and men are extraordinarily great. One expert estimated that only one third of the German sub fleet in the last war could be kept wholly active at any given time.

Subs Cannot Pursue.

In attacks on isolated units, the U-boats have great advantages. Nevertheless, they must be stationed roughly in advance of any warship in order to intercept and attack. They cannot pursue. Anything from a destroyer to a battleship can outrun a sub, which travels at an average of only 20 knots on the surface and 10 undersea.

Sinking of the British aircraft carrier Courageous was considered as something of a fluke in the United States naval circles. There are indications that the Courageous was taking aboard airplanes when she was torpedoed.

Whereas one torpedo usually will dispatch a merchant ship, an armored warship with its hull divided into watertight compartments would take five or six before foundering.

Germany's biggest known U-boat, weighing 712 tons, has six torpedo tubes, and probably carried twelve torpedoes. It might use all in a single set-to. Then, virtually disarmed except for a 3.5-inch cannon and a one-pound anti-aircraft gun, perhaps, it might be at the mercy of its natural enemy, the swift and agile destroyer.

Of the 55 German submarines operating last year, 10 were in the 700-ton class, 21 in the 500-ton class and 24 were of the 250-ton coastal type with three tubes. More than a score of others were being built or were planned.

DEATH CANCELS LAST ASSIGNMENT

Floyd Gibbons, War Correspondent, Stricken With Heart Attack at Home in Pennsylvania

Stroudsburg, Pa., Sept. 25 (AP)—Death has cancelled the last reporter's assignment of Floyd Gibbons, 52, war correspondent.

In the midst of plans to go abroad, the noted newspaper reporter died last night after a heart attack at his farm home near here.

Gibbons personified to the public the romantic aspects of foreign news reporting. This impression was heightened by a white cloth patch the correspondent wore over his left eye, shot out at Belleau Wood during the last war when Gibbons leaped up to pull a wounded soldier, Major Ben Berry, to safety.

Gibbons, wounded also in the shoulder and elbow by machine-gun fire, was awarded the Croix de Guerre and made a Chevalier in the French Legion of Honor for this exploit.

Many News Beats Scored.

Among notable news beats scored by Gibbons during a career that sent him across four continents was an interview with Joseph Stalin and a 4,000-word cabled account of the torpedoing in September, 1917, of the liner Laconia, in which he was a passenger.

He also was the first foreign newspaperman to enter Soviet Russia and send a first-hand account of the Great famine of 1921, an experience he called the most tragic of his career.

Gibbons won his first recognition as a special correspondent for the Chicago Tribune. In later years he roved the world for the Hearst newspapers and International News Service.

Started At $9.00 a Week.

He began newspaper work on the Minneapolis Daily News in 1907 at $9.00 a week. He rode with Pancho Villa as a correspondent in 1916 and a year later covered General John Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico before going to London for the Chicago Tribune.

After the war he covered the Irish trouble, the Spanish riff campaign, the Japanese landings in Shanghai in 1931-32, the Italian campaign in Ethiopia until his health failed, and the Spanish civil war.

Since 1929, Gibbons had appeared in scores of radio and movie sketches as a news commentator and "headline hunter" who depicted his own adventures and those of others.

He wrote innumerable magazine articles and several books, including "The Red Napoleon" and the "Red Knight of Germany".

Once, weary of travelling, he built a home in Florida to retire to—and lived in it ten minutes.

ACTION DELAYED UNTIL THURSDAY

New Neutrality Legislation Will be Debated in Senate at That Time

Washington, Sept. 25—(AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee delayed action until Thursday today on the Government's new neutrality legislation.

The delay was agreed to at the request of Senator William Borah (Rep-Idaho), ranking minority committeeman and opponent of President Roosevelt's proposal to repeal the arms embargo.

A draft of the administration measure, written over the week end by committee Democrats, was submitted by Chairman Key Pittman (Dem-Nevada) when the group met this morning.

Borah said opposition forces had no disposition to lock the bill up in committee, but added:—

"I have always had a prejudice against voting on a bill before I have read it."

The bill carries out President Roosevelt's recommendation for repeal of the arms embargo but provides powerful Congressional checks on executive discretion.

Members said there was no objection to Borah's request for delay. It was expected the legislation would be reported to the Senate by the end of the week.

Borah said he thought the issue before the Foreign Affairs Committee "boils down to two points—whether the arms embargo should be repealed and how much discretion should be allowed the President in administering the law."

200 MENU ITEMS AS NEGRO DINES

Father Divine Attends Feast With at Least 24 Hour Service as Feature

New York, Sept. 25 (CP)—To the long list of feasts he has arranged regularly for his Harlem followers, Father Divine, negro cult leader, added last night a super-banquet—a meal with a menu of at least 200 items and continuous service for at least 24 hours.

It began at midnight Saturday in Rockland Palace, a high-ceilinged hall. The long white clothed u-shaped table was set for 300 coworkers and invited guests of the evangelist. Other lesser followers enjoyed watermelon at outdoor tables rimming the building.

A rose was pinned to the scarlet and purple menu, which began with "hor d'oeuvres, fruit cup and soup." Then followed "hot drinks".

There were 45 vegetables"—including "brocalli," "kohl rabi," banana fritters, mustard greens, black-eyed peas, plaintains and "ford hooks." John Lamb, Father Divine's secretary, said they were melons, or a "sort of squash."

"Meats" ran from bologna through pig feet pig tails, pig snouts, hog maw, pig ears, pork chops, roast pork and French pig knucklee, each a separate dish among the 56 listed for the category. Turkey was No. 55 and dumplings No. 50.

For those who were still hungry there were 17 kinds of bread; seven "sauces" under which salt and sweet butter were listed; 14 "relishes," which took in salt and pepper; seven cold drinks, including water, and 10 salads, including "stuffed angel eggs."

NOT AVAILABLE FOR COMMENT

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—Premier Hepburn was not available for comment this morning on the report carried by a Montreal newspaper (Gazette) that Ontario might be expected to follow the lead of Quebec and call provincial elections.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant said he had no knowledge of such a development.

The Montreal newspaper gave "a high official of the Union Nationale Party" as the source of its report.

ILL FOR THREE YEARS, DIES

Ottawa, Sept. 25—(CP)—Duncan Henry Christie, 46, former employee of the Mines and Resources Department and brother of Kenneth A. Christie, vice-chairman of the Toronto Hydro Electric Commission, died in hospital here today.

"I'm not worried about inflation because I don't see any in sight."—Henry C. Morgenthau.

FRENCH GAINS REMAIN INTACT

French Forces Carry Out New Reconnaissance Operations

(Editor's Note: The following article was written for Havas News Agency by Lucien Romier, director of the Paris newspaper Le Figaro. He was a correspondent during the last war and is a well known war historian.)

Paris, Sept. 25 (CP-Havas) — The strategic salients carved out by French troops before the German westwall remained undented last night despite repeated German artillery and infantry attacks.

The Germans used only small contingents in each of the onslaughts which were designed to feel out the strength of the French positions or recover dominating or well-sheltered points. The attacks, which were particularly brisk in the small Blies valley, south of Zweibruecken, failed to make a single breach despite artillery preparation described as the most violent experienced by the French thus far.

At this time it is difficult to speculate on whether these onslaughts are a prelude to any large-scale offensive by the enemy in the western zone.

Latest communiques of the French high command indicated that the French had carried a number of new reconnaissance operations in many sectors while their airmen scored successes against Nazi craft.

Warsaw Harries Germans.

At the same time the Polish resistance at Warsaw and in its environs continued to harry the Germans on the eastern front.

German official dispatches admit that neither the heavily-bombed suburb of Paga, the Modlin fortress, northwest of Warsaw, nor the capital have yet surrendered.

Despite contradictory dispatches, it has been confirmed that Polish cavalry contingents which participated in the big battle of Kutno, west of Warsaw, succeeded in cutting their way through the enemy and rejoined the capital's defenders, bolstering the defence.

Dispatches from Hungary announced that Soviet troops were moving up through the upper Prut valley toward the Carpathians. Apparently the Soviet forces are still at some distance from the Galician oil fields which German dispatches during recent days claimed had been conquered by the Hitler troops.

South-East Problems.

The closeness of Russian troops will constitute a grave risk for Hungary, especially since Soviet propaganda might find a fertile field among the Ruthenian population near the border. The same danger exists in regard to Rumanian populations close to the border.

Some observers believed it possible that Germany, obliged to cede a large part of Poland to Russia, hopes in return that the Danubian States will draw closer to Germany with greater willingness to shield themselves against the Soviet "menace".

In this event the Germans, pushed back from the Dniester River valley, might attempt to renew their penetration toward the Black Sea via the Danube volley. The many German trade and land-owning colonies between the Danube and the Dniester have absolutely no liking for Communism.

LABOR CONGRESS HEAD RETIRING

Trade Unionism Warned Against Any Tendency to Radicalism

London, Ont., Sept. 25.—(CP)—President P. M. (Paddy) Draper, ill at his home in Ottawa, informed the 55th convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada by letter today that he is retiring from office and will not be in the running for any executive post at the present session.

He is forced to withdraw from active labor circles on the advice of his doctors, Mr. Draper wrote, and he praised the "unfailing loyalty" of his executives and union representatives in his many years of service. Mr. Draper has held high office in the Congress at various periods during the past 48 years.

R. A. Riggs of the Federal Department of Labor represented the new Minister Hon. Norman McLarty, who was unable to be present on account of war pressure business of the Cabinet.

Warns Against Radicalism

Warning Trades Unionism against radicalism, Mr. Rigg said: "Fundamentally the great mission of labor is steady progress in the condition of life that makes for the happiness and the well being of human kind.

"No matter in what direction some tendencies may tempt you, stick to the main highway of your historic principles."

Dr. A. S. Duncan, Liberal member of the Legislature for London, urged "Let us unite to stamp out that menace which is rampant in the world today, otherwise we may find ourselves living in a country where there will be no freedom and no right to organize".

Mr. Hessel expressed the hope for unity in Labor in Canada, but not unity at any price. "But" he said, "labor is divided into six separate camps in the Dominion and the out look for unity is not very bright".

U.S. Helpless If Germans Win Says Gen. Tuthill

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 25—(AP)—Major-General A. M. Tuthill, Adjutant General of Arizona, asserts victory for Germany in the war would render the United States "virtually helpless, economically and militaristically.

He told the Arizona National Guard "I believe we will" enter the war and added:—

"If Germany wins and takes over the fleets of France and Great Britain, it would have complete control of the sea and its air force would outnumber us 1 to 51. Where will we be? What becomes of our overseas trade?"

POLICE COURT

Ernest Colborne, Belleville, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's city police court charged with assaulting Jack Sharland, also of Belleville. Upon his own admission when Colbourne admitted striking Sharland following an argument over the payment of an account in the Upper Canada News Company stand, Bridge St., Colbourne was convicted and given a suspended sentence upon the payment of costs amounting to $15.50. The original argument was over a small sum, said to have been $1.94.

Stewart Elliott, alias A. W. McKenzie, appeared today charged with obtaining clothes and cash from a local haberdashery by fraud to wit the issuance of a worthless cheque. Elliott pleaded guilty and was remanded in custody pending sentence. He was also convicted of failing to pay a hotel bill incurred by him.

Cecil Genereaux, former Stoco resident now residing at Sudbury, appeared charged that he did unlawfully and falsely represent himself as a police officer. Genereaux pleaded guilty and was fined ten dollars and costs, amounting to $41.50 in all. The crime was committed last May when Genereaux stopped two motor cars on the 7th concession of Tyendinaga one evening and represented himself as a police constable in searching the vehicles.

"This man came back from Sudbury voluntarily and did not give the investigating police any undue trouble in their investigations," revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"This young man was only trying a practical joke and really had no serious intentions. He also bears a good reputation in and around his native Stoco," pleaded Frank Cushing, local barrister, who appeared for the accused.

Three citizens appeared charged with harboring dogs without obtaining a dog licence, under the city ordinance laws. The accused were assessed 75c costs, after they had procured their licences.

KIWANIANS MEET IN CONVENTION

Delegates at Ottawa Vote to Put Entire Strength of Kiwanis Into Conflict

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP)—The whole weight and strength of Canada must be mobilized in the war against Nazi Germany, Reginald V. Harris of Halifax, Governor of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime District of International Kiwanis, said at the annual district convention here today.

"Canada marches with Britain and the whole weight and strength of this country must be mobilized against the abominable thing that has turned Europe into a madhouse," he said.

"The task now is not only to destroy that system, but keep it destroyed."

Col. Walter Peacock, Toronto Salvation Army officer, said the present conflict is a war of principles. "Our hands are clean and may we be clean, when we are finished. There must be no hate or bitterness. Let us avoid that. We are not fighting a people but a principle."

The district convention re-dedicated the district convention re-dedicated itself to the task "of acquiring through Eastern Canada a general appreciation of citizenship in democracy."

The resolution also urged that a special war service committee be appointed to co-operate with other agencies in each Kiwanis Club and that district, clubs and individual members pledge themselves to assist the Government during the war.

THURLOW FISH HATCHERY CLOSED

All Equipment Transferred to the Glenora Hatchery Near Picton

Following its use for the past fourteen years in the service of the Department of Game and Fisheries, the Thurlow Fish Hatchery was officially closed by the Department last week, Inspector of Game and Fisheries Herbert McCabe announced today.

All equipment of the hatchery will be transferred to the Glenora Hatchery, while Mr. Gladstone Manore, superintendent, has been transferred to the Port Arthur branch.

The Thurlow hatchery was taken over from the Federal Department of Marine and Fisheries in 1925, by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries which assumed control at that time of all Provincial hatcheries, when the Federal Department discontinued the culture of fish.

The Glenora hatchery is better equipped to handle the large number of fish fry necessary to stock Ontario's lakes and streams every year, Inspector McCabe stated. It will take care of all eggs that formerly went to the Thurlow hatchery. Due to the freshness, clearness and other outstanding qualities of the water of the Lake-of-the-Mountain, which is used at the Glenora hatchery, the percentage of fish surviving the rigors of life in their early stages is much higher than those that were developed at Thurlow.

The closing of the building will not decrease the output of fry to the lakes and streams of the province, Inspector McCabe stated.

2 NEW POLIO CASES

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 25—(CP)—Two new cases of Polio-myelitis were reported today to medical health officials here, bringing the season's total to 31. Of these six have been recent cases.

Why The Weather?

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Air and sea temperatures! Sometimes when sailors jump overboard for a swim, they find the sea water colder than the air, and at other times warmer. In the Atlantic Ocean, north of the tropics, in the winter months, the sea is warmer than the air, and this is most pronounced in the waters east of the continent, the greatest difference being about 8 degrees. In the summer months, however, the reverse is generally true, the sea being colder than the air; but the differences are not so large the greatest being only about 3 degrees in places adjacent to Newfoundland, east of the British Isles, and northwest of Africa.

MONKS ALSO UNDERGO A.R.P. DRILL

England's air raid precautions drills include each and every member of the population, and this scene in Buckfast, Devonshire, shows Benedictine monks out for a drill in their customary attire, only augumented by the addition of the all-important gas masks.

SUBMARINE VICTIM THANKS AERIAL RESCUERS

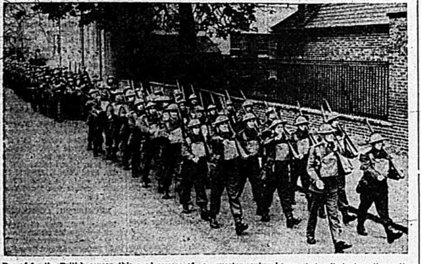
Captain Schofield, RIGHT, skipper of the torpedoed British freighter Kensington Court, is shown here as he expressed his gratitude to the two British Royal Air Force pilots who rescued him and his crew of 33 after their ship had been sunk off the English coast. The fliers brought their flying boats down on the sea and picked up the crew. Names of the officers were withheld by the British censor. This was the first case of an aerial rescue in the war.

TOMMY ATKINS MARCHES TO WAR IN NEW UNIFORM



Passed by the British censor, this picture shows a line of "Tommies," 1939 vintage, swing along an English road, just as so many of their predecessors of a quarter-century ago did, off to the scene of conflict on the continent. The men are in fighting kit, wearing the "ski suit" dress that eliminates the puttees that proved such a problem to beginners in the last Great War.

TRADITIONALLY NEUTRAL, HOLLAND PREPARES TO REPULSE INVASION

One of the world's most peaceful countries, Holland, has been forced by threat of German invasion to take measures to safeguard her territorial integrity. To meet the threat of a Nazi invasion, dykes have been opened, borders lined with pill boxes and anti-aircraft stations have been set up at strategic points. Reports from France indicate that the area around Utrecht has already been inundated. An anti-aircraft gun crew is seen in action, UPPER LEFT, while General Baron Voorst, commander-in-chief of Holland's armed forces, LEFT, observes border defence preparations, UPPER RIGHT. With him is General Snyder. The Dutch frontier is dotted with innumerable pill boxes containing machine-guns and anti-tank guns. LOWER LEFT. The second year for a major league ball player is supposed to be the testing time, proving they either belong or that their first season was a "morning glory" effort. Two of last year's best rookies in the National league were Johnny Rizzo, Pittsburgh outfielder and Frank McCormick, Cincinnati first baseman. Rizzo, third in the league in batting in runs last year, has been erratic and played only irregularly this season, while McCormick has even improved on his 1938 achievements, when he made the most hits and was fourth in driving in runs, as well as taking part in all his team's games. This year he is headed for leadership in both hits and R.B.I., and has yet to miss a game.

British Convoy System is Now in Full Swing, First Lord of Admiralty Tells Commons — Empire Merchant Marine Will Soon All be Armed

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 26 (CP Cable) — British merchant shipping, guarded by a three-fold defensive plan by the Royal Navy, is bringing to the United Kingdom materials from the Dominions "in ever increasing volume for the common cause".

This was announced in the House of Commons today by Prime Minister Chamberlain who said that "from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply".

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House that the British navy's convoy system for out-going and incoming merchant shipping now is in full operation and predicted the terror of German U-boat attacks would be diminished rapidly.

German Merchandise Seized.

Demonstrating Britain's mastery of the seas, Mr. Churchill said that in the first two weeks of war the navy has seized 67,000 tons more of German merchandise [illegible] had sunk in British ships.

"At that rate it will take them a long time to starve us out," the First Lord added. The House cheered his announcement.

Mr. Churchill's report followed a general review of the war situation by the Prime Minister in which he said Britain and France had reached an agreement "on the procedure for

Why The Weather?

Frost! Light frost has already occurred in the North in exposed places. Frost is deposited under the same atmospheric conditions as dew, except that the objects frosted have a temperature of freezing or below. There may be "light frost" or "heavy frost" according to the amount of the snowy deposit, and "killing frost" when all the staple vegetation of a place is killed. When the killing occurs without the snowy deposit, it is called a "b[illegible] frost". "Frost" is also used in another sense as when people say they had five degrees of frost, meaning the thermometer registered five degrees below freezing or 27 degrees Fahrenheit. Tender vegetation like potted plants may be protected from light frost by coverings of paper or cloth.

NAVAL FIRING HEARD OFF OSLO, WARSHIPS SEEN

Merchant Ships Hasten to Shore During 'Engagement' Early Today

REPORTS DISCOUNTED

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 26—(AP) — Dispatches from Farsund, southwestern Norway, reported that a naval engagement occurred today just west of Norway's southern extremity, beginning about noon (6 a.m. EST) and ending at 1:40 p.m.

Watchers from the shore said they saw three large warships, two submarines and many small craft taking part in the action and airplanes manoeuvring overhead. They estimated that between 30 and 40 shots were fired.

First reports did not identify the ships—which shortly disappeared over the horizon—or estimate any damage caused.

Three Norwegian airplanes watched the encounter to see that Norwegian territorial waters were not violated.

GOERING DISPUTES WITH ADMIRAL

Field Marshal Said to be 'Furious' Over Sinking of Swedish Ships

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—The Daily Express in a dispatch from Copenhagen today reported a dispute had broken out between Field Marshal Hermann Goering and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, Commander-in-Chief of the German navy, over the German navy's submarine warfare.

The sinking of two Swedish and two Finnish freighters during the last three days has compromised the Reich's source of raw materials in the Scandinavian countries and added additional difficulties to Goering's job of economic dictator, it was said.

The sinking of the Swedish freighter Silesia and Gertrud Bratt has provoked protests throughout Sweden and resulted in threats that the Stockholm government would cut off the all-important supply of high grade iron ore it has been shipping to the Reich, the Daily Express said.

Goering was described as being "furious" over the sinking of the Swedish ships because the Reich imports an average of 6,000,000 tons of Swedish iron ore annually and this supply is considered absolutely essential for the Reich's wartime production.

Merchant Ships in Large Numbers Leave Shores of Britain Armed Against Submarines and Airplanes

MEET U-BOAT MENACE

Guns and Equipment Ready at Various Stations With Trained Gunners to Man Them and Instruct Seamen

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that Great Britain's naval convoy system now is in full operation and that "large numbers of merchant ships are now leaving these shores defensively armed against submarines and airplanes."

Speaking immediately after Prime Minister Chamberlain had made his fourth "war report" to members, the First Lord delivered a full statement of what Britain is doing to crush the U-boat menace.

"In a short time the immense mercantile marine of the British Empire will be armed," he said. "All guns and equipment are ready at various stations together with trained gunners to man them and instruct seamen.

Many More Attacks on Subs

"Our attacks on submarines have been five or six times as numerous as in any equal period in the last war."

Mr Churchill said Great Britain had replied in three ways to the U-boat menace:—

Federation of Mankind Advocated By H. G. Wells in Letter to Times

London, Sept. 26—(CP Cable) — A Federation of Mankind to bring peace and plenty to the world of tomorrow was advocated today by H. G. Wells in a letter to The Times discussing Britain's war aims.

"Cannot our western world in its quite inevitable march toward world collectivism face its changes in the light and in the atmosphere of extreme candor and mutual toleration?" the author asked.

"The thing I am most terrified by today is the manifest threat of a new weak put-off of our aspirations for a new world by some repetition of the Geneva simulacrum.

"The last time it was the League of Nations; this time the magic work to do the trick is federation. A real League of Nations might have turned the world into a new course in 1918-1919; a real Federation of Mankind might do as much tomorrow.

Wants Genuine Attempt

"But if it is to be a real effective Federation of Mankind, a genuine attempt to realize that phase of worldwide plenty and safety we have every reason to suppose to be attainable, then we have to discuss simply and sincerely and work out plans for polite mediatization of monarchies and competent pooling and socialization of natural resources and staple industries, world revision of extension universities and other knowledge organizations, and establishment of a worldwide rising level of common education.

"These are the main aspects of the task obviously before us. It is a quite hopeless task unless it is undertaken in the blaze of light. To suppress open discussion, even discussion of reason or revolution, for some slight or fancied strategic advantage, is to sacrifice our end to our means.

Can See No Hope

"War under the auspices of the A.R.P. (Air Raids Precautions) is darkening everything. Are we now in as much light as that in the streets of the world? If not; if we are to go on with the present regime of vague insincerities, mutual distrust and sabotage, I for one can see no hope for mankind. More of this sort of thing and worse to final extinction."

Mr. Wells says that if this world revolution is to be brought off successfully, giving a renewed lease to human happiness and effort, it

GEN. VON FRITSCH BURIED AT BERLIN

Hitler Sends Large Laurel and Chrysanthemum Wreath

Berlin, Sept. 26. — (AP)— The body of Colonel-General Baron Werner von Fritsch, one-time commander-in-chief of the German army, was buried today with full military honors. He fell before Warsaw last Friday.

The General's aged mother and Field Marshal Hermann Goering stood in a cold rain for the state funeral ceremony at Berlin's memorial to German soldiers who fell in the last war.

Speaking at the bier, Colonel-General Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of the Army Staff, eulogized von Fritsch as an officer of "crystal clear thinking and a man of deeds".

Fuehrer Hitler, through Goering, sent a large laurel and chrysanthemum wreath.

Paris, Sept. 26—(AP)— Premier Daladier's War Cabinet today decreed the dissolution of the Communist Party in France as reprisal for Soviet Russia's non-aggression pact with Germany and her invasion of Poland, France's eastern ally.

Dissolution of the party was officially announced tonight following a meeting of the Cabinet, sitting as a Ministerial Council under President Albert Lebrun.

The party has more than 70 members in the Chamber of Deputies.

Humane Sub Captain Now in Kindly Hands

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that some German U-boat commanders had tried hard to behave with humanity in attacking merchant ships.

He told the House this story:

"One German captain signalled to me, personally, the position of a British ship which he had just sunk and urged that rescuers should be sent. I was in some doubt at the time as to which address a reply might be sent. However, he is now in our hands and is treated with all consideration."

The steamship concerned was the Firby, sunk off the Scottish coast Sept. 11. The chief officer, James Woodruff, later told how the submarine commander gave him a "stiff drink" and bread and bandages for four crewmen wounded by shells. The Firby's crew of more than 40 spent 13 hours in lifeboats.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Germany's known desire for a speedy victory over Great Britain and France causes concern to the governments of Holland and Belgium.

In Poland, lightning war was waged with success and any move which offers the prospect of applying the same principles on the Western Front must be tempting from the German point of view. Against the Maginot Line and a well-equipped French army, supported by increasing British forces there appears little hope of a speedy push.

The German thrust through Belgium in 1914 failed to bring victory and reptition of that move, which was primarily directed at France, might encounter stronger resistance this time. On the other hand a dash through Holland would be directed at Great Britain, now officially designed as Germany's main enemy.

Repeated official assurances that Germany has no designs on France and propaganda efforts, apparently directed at weaning the French away from the British alliance, may be a prelude to a more direct move against Great Britain.

Several Advantages

A push through Holland would offer several advantages. In the first place in the initial stages the only opposition would come from Dutch forces. France could not aid Holland without crossing Belgium and British aid would have to come by sea. German aircraft could harry British attempts at crossing the Channel and landing on Dutch soil while the mechanized German army rushed towards the coast.

Control of the Dutch coast would permit establishment of German air bases 100 miles and submarine bases 200 miles closer to England than is now possible. British naval control of the North Sea might be challenged and bombing attacks on English key centres would become more of a menace.

Missing Plane Found, Men Trekking Back

Montreal, Sept 26—(CP)—Word of the finding of an airplane in which two men disappeared on a Quebec hinterland flight last July 3, was received today at the office of Dominion Skyways Limited.

The Company received a message from the pilot who said he discovered the plane in the bushlands on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River, about opposite the west end of Anticosti Island.

The plane, the report said, was intact and a note had been left to say pilot Clifford Frechette of Quebec and his 23-year-old radio operator, Edward Gaynor of Montreal, had started a bushland trek down to the river shore in the hope of reaching civilization. The note, dated Aug. 4, indicated the two men had remained by the machine for a month before starting out in search of help.

Twenty Warplanes Draw German Fire

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 26 — (AP)—A squadron of 20 warplanes believed to be French appeared high in the sky over the Rhine today, drawing fire from anti-aircraft batteries on the German shore.

The planes were seen clearly from Basel and citizens rushed to streets and rooftops of the barricaded Swiss city to watch what promised to be an air battle over the zone where the frontiers of Switzerland, France and Germany meet.

Appearance of the planes drew the first bursts of fire from the nearby Rhine batteries since the war began.

Revision of U. S. Neutrality Act Would Permit Trade Over International Boundary

Washington, Sept. 26 (CP)—Loring Christie took up his duties as Canadian Minister to the United States today as Congress neared consideration of the administration's proposal to repeal the arms export embargo.

The legislation before Congress, it was revealed, would give Canada trade advantages not enjoyed by other belligerents. The measure would allow shipments of war goods in United States vessels on inland lakes and waters and shipments of war goods over the Canadian border by airplane, truck or railroad. Payment before delivery would apply to these sales.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys interpreted these clauses of the proposed measure as possibly enabling Canada to become a sort of purchasing agent for the Allies in respect to the United States.

Purpose of French, British Raids To Stunt German Air Power Growth

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—British newspapers today displayed prominently reports of the bombing of the German airplane works on Lake Constance and of the extension of operations on the Western Front.

Congratulating the French Air Force on its exploit at Friedrichshafen, The Daily Sketch said the raid "was no mere demonstration of strength."

"Its purpose, successfully achieved, was to stunt the growth of German air power by destroying factories where planes are built.

"By this method, firmly but cautiously extended, we shall be able to paralyze the enemy's efforts and reduce him to a condition in which he has no alternative but to sue for peace."

Reaping First Fruit

The military correspondent of the Daily Herald said reports of artillery action on the Franco-German frontier suggested that General Maurice Gamelin is about to reap the first fruits of his careful preparation. "From the point where the Rhine becomes the Franco-German frontier to the point where both states meet Switzerland, French heavy artillery has been pounding German defences," the paper said.

"The Siegfried position here is not deep. It is because the natural defences are here so strong that artificial defences have been least developed. The probability seems to be that the French commanders aim to force the Germans to increase the density of troops holding it. Thus they will not only ease their task farther north, but prevent the Germans from embarking on new adventures in other places before we are ready to counter them."

Must Finish War Quickly

Copenhagen, Sept. 26—(AP)—Sweden, holding as a basis for argument ore products desired by Germany, was expected by informed Danish circles today to take prompt steps to settle with Berlin the future of her sea trade.

German submarines are reported to have sunk two Swedish and two Finnish ships in less than a week. The captain of the Silesia, Swedish freighter sunk yesterday, said the submarine which torpedoed his ship apparently was directed by planes. Crewmen were given 20 minutes to take to lifeboats. ## MOSCOW INVITES VON RIBBENTROP

German Foreign Minister to Discuss Developments in Poland

By WITT HANCOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 26 (AP)—Tass, the Russian news agency, announced today that Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, would arrive in Moscow tomorrow "to discuss with the government of the Soviet Union problems connected with developments in Poland."

The agency said von Ribbentrop was coming on the invitation of the Russian government.

Von Ribbentrop made the first trip here by a Nazi official Aug. 23 when Germany and the Soviet signed their non-aggression pact. Many observers have expressed belief an agreement on the division of Poland was reached at that time.

Diplomatic quarters still were speculating today on the possibility of the creation of a small buffer "Polish state" between Germany and Russia.

Russia and Rumania.

Russian intentions toward Rumanian Bessarabia, taken from the Soviet after the last war, and toward Estonia on the Gulf of Finland aroused speculation in foreign quarters.

It was understood a number of Soviet troops were marching toward the recently increased frontier with Rumania which resulted from the German-Russian division of Poland.

The Rumanian legation denied this border was closed, as reported in unofficial advices last night. Intourist, the Soviet travel agency, said trains were running from Moscow direct to Bucharest.

Intourist also denied reports the Russian Black Sea port of Odessa had been closed and offered to sell steamship tickets from Odessa to Istanbul, Turkey.

The best unofficial estimates set the Russian army strength in the Rumanian sector at about 40 divisions, either near the frontier or on the way.

FIREMEN ABLE TO RETURN TO DUTY

Firemen Charles Greatrix and Charles Weaver, temporarily incapacitated while on duty at the "Nick's Lunch" blaze that gutted the Front Street restaurant early yesterday morning, were back on duty today after being under a physician's care since the accidents.

Greatrix was chopping away a partition in the kitchen in order to localize a blaze when a pipe carrying illuminating gas suddenly burst. The full force of the escaping gas struck him in the face rendering him nearly unconscious before colleagues could rush him to the outside of the building. He was taken to the office of Dr. Cronk, M.O.H. where he was given restoratives.

FIREMEN DECIDE NOT TO HOLD ANNUAL BALL

For the first time since its inception nine years ago, the annual ball and euchre, sponsored by the Belleville Fire Department to provide money for the Poor Family and Children's Christmas Fund, will not take place this year, Fire Chief William Lynch announced today.

Decision to cancel the annual event was made at a meeting of the firemen a few days ago. It was felt that in view of the country being at war, and the probability of employment conditions being much improved over those of a year ago, that any efforts for charity would be toward patriotic organizations.

While nothing definite regarding future efforts of the Fire Department along these lines, was done, members felt that in all likelihood a function would be held with benefits going to the Red Cross or some other wartime organization.

"We will not be able to secure the Armouries this year for the ball, and as other spaces are limited, and employment conditions will be better, we decided to call off the annual ball" Chief Lynch stated. "However, if we do function it will not be for the Christmas Fund but for some patriotic society."

TWO SENTENCED TO PRISON TERMS

Frank LeBlanc and Albert Gauthier of Montreal Convicted in Police Court

Convicted of breaking and entering and attempting to rob the general store at Bonarlaw, Frank LeBlanc, Montreal, was sentenced to serve three years and three months in the Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court held at Marmora yesterday. Albert Gauthier, also of Montreal and alleged accomplice of LeBlanc's, was sentenced to serve three years in the penitentiary after being convicted of the same crime. Both men had been convicted of similar crimes on previous occasions and also held long prison records, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated before sentence was passed.

"Although these two men were together at the time of the crime, I intend to try and break up this combination and their association, which apparently leads to crime whenever these two men become associated," revealed Magistrate Lloyd as he gave LeBlanc the additional three months in order to assure severing of their connections when released.

LeBlanc and Gauthier were apprehended inside of a general store, operated by Messrs. Bell and Barlow, at Bonarlaw one week ago, Mr. Jesse Barlow, one of the proprietors apprehending the men, along with a man named Sopha of Marmora. They were held until Provincial Police arrived.

Two other men, Cyril Hutt, Lakefield, and Kenneth Mitchell, Peterborough, who were arrested the same day by Provincial Constable A. Dymond in Peterborough following a hectic chase over Highway No. 7, were today turned over to the Peterborough police by the O.P.P. Hutt and Mitchell are wanted in Peterborough and Stouffville on charges of the theft of merchandise and motor cars, Sergeant H. E. Thompson, O.P.P., revealed as the prisoners were escorted to Peterborough.

Fall of Snow Covers District Following Thunder Storm

Following in the wake of a brief but severe electrical storm that swept the city and district last night, to the accompaniment of intermittent heavy showers of rain, the first snow of the season covered the district in a temporary blanket early today.

Approximately one half inch of snow fell after rapidly cooling winds veered around to the northwest shortly before five o'clock this morning. The snow, however, did not linger long, and shortly after its appearance changed to greyish slush before disappearing entirely.

Farmers of the surrounding district at the city market today reported a similar fall. In Sidney nearly one inch of the white flakes fluttered from sullen clouds that swept that part of the county.

"There was almost an inch of snow on top of my car when I arose this morning," one Sidney farmer stated.

No damage, however, was reported from various sections. Temperatures this morning were hovering about the 34 mark, two degrees above freezing, according to figures released by the city filtration plant. This low apparently was general as no reports of frost damage were available.

Deluging rain that fell shortly after eleven o'clock last night, accompanied by severe lightning heralded the approach of the snow. City lights flickered and went out in some sections of the city when the storm was at its height. No damage to buildings was reported.

Whole Province Cool

Eastern Ontario saw an unusually early snowfall today while the rest of the province awoke to chill autumn weather.

At Cornwall, children were able to scrape up snowballs on the way to school, and at Brockville the oldest inhabitants could not recall such an early appearance of snow.

Central and Eastern Ontario received overnight rains. Throughout the province there was a sharp drop in temperatures. At London late yesterday the drop was almost 25 degrees in three hours.

At Hamilton, residents could see their breath condensed by the cold.

Timmins reported below freezing temperatures with the ground at daybreak covered by a white, hard frost.

Other sections of the province escaped frost damage to crops due to cloudy skies.

MARMORA COUPLE WEDDED 50 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Narrie Quietly Celebrate Their Golden Wedding Anniversary

Marmora, Sept. 26 (Special) — Residents of Marmora for almost half a century, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Narrie quietly celebrated their golden wedding at their home on Haye Street, Marmora, on Monday. The ceremony to which their memories were reawakened took place on September 25, 1889 in the township of Christie near Parry Sound and the officiating minister was Rev. D. D. Franks, resident Methodist minister at McKellar village.

Following a short residency in Parry Sound and another short residency in Rawdon township (of which the groom was a native) Mr. and Mrs. Narrie came to live in Marmora on St. Patrick's Day 1891. Mr. Narrie being a shoemaker by trade and his wife his able assistant. Mr. Narrie at the age of seventy-seven is remarkably active but Mrs. Narrie who is three years his junior, has not been in good health for the past few years but is able to do most of her household duties. Mr. Narrie is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Narrie of Rawdon township and his birthplace is about five miles from the village of Stirling. Mrs. Narrie's maiden name was Nancy Culp and she was born at Cayuga, Welland county, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Culp. Besides being the oldest shoemaker of Marmora district Mr. Narrie was for some years an employee of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company. He has always been fond of music and somewhat regrets that he did not take enough time off to master an excellent violin which was once his property. He is to be numbered among the best step dancers the district has known. Mrs. Narrie has turned her attention to church activities until recent illnesses caused a halt. For many years she attended the Marmora Methodist, later the United Church. Deeply interested in Sunday school work she was a teacher for many years—she finds it difficult to count the number now—and in more recent years attended the Adult Bible Class. She was an active member of the former Ladies' Aid for a long period. She has held several offices including that of chief councillor in the Marmora Council No. 279, Canadian Order of Chosen Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Narrie have two adopted children, Mrs. Dorcas Davidson of Bluesky, Alberta, and Mr. Ernest Narrie of Syracuse, N.Y. who have been recipients of their devoted care. Congratulations are being extended Mr. and Mrs. Narrie on attaining their golden wedding anniversary together with the hope that they will see many other anniversaries of their wedding day.

Police Blotter

Miller was lodged in the Belleville jail last evening, but admitted to bail this morning, Provincial Police authorities today revealed. The matter will be heard in a Napanee court.

While driving southerly on Front St. last night, an automobile driven by Chancey Ashley, 153 Bridge St., crashed through a guard barrier surrounding a Front St. excavation. The right rear wheel of Mr. Ashley's automobile became lodged in the excavation, necessitating the employment of a tow truck and hoist to release the vehicle.

Mr. Ashley informed city police he did not observe the barrier and red lighted lanterns, one of which was broken during the accident.

Provincial Constable Shannon, a native of Brighton, but who has been stationed at Provincial Police Headquarters at Toronto for some time, reported for duty at the Belleville detachment of the O.P.P. yesterday, Inspector Frank Gardner announced today.

Benefits of Medical Science To Civilization Told Rotary

Dr. Geo. H. Stobie Heard in Highly Informative Address at Weekly Luncheon

PUBLIC EDUCATED

Education and enlightenment of the general public as to how the monies collected in taxation and applied to the free medical services, medicine, clinic, hospitalization etc., are spent was advocated by Dr. George H. Stobie, prominent Belleville surgeon, in a highly informative address given to the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday.

"If this is done, the public would better know what it wanted, and be in a better position to state its demand. Not that I think it would want to revert to conditions prior to free state medicine, as that would mean that money now spent in taxation would be used to pay hospital and doctor's fees" he declared.

The speaker pointed out the tremendous strides made by medical science during the past fifty years, using as an illustration conditions in an average city of that time as compared to modern conditions. "If it were not for sanitation and other remarkable scientific strides made by medical science, civilization would have been halted years ago, Dr. Stobie told the clubmen.

This is proved in civilized countries where during the past fifty years the death-rate from disease has been cut down by a large percentage.

Spent 95 Millions

"The American Medical Association spent 95 millions of dollars to educate the public in early diagnosis of cancer," he said. They learned enough about early diagnosis to recognize early symptoms and educated the public to cooperate with them by recognizing and reporting these early conditions."

Of one hundred million dollars collected in taxes in Ontario over the period of a year, 8 per cent goes to providing state medicine," the speaker asserted. "The care of the mentally ill is the greatest item, seven million dollars being expended over the twelve months."

He warned the clubmen that "mental illness is increasing at such a rate that it is rapidly becoming a national menace, not only in Canada but in other civilized countries as well. At the present rate of increase, a well-known American has prophesied that within seventy five years one half of the population of the United States will be in institutions and the other half working to support them."

"There is no solution to this increase. No one has advanced an explanation as to why it should be. I believe something must be done to start work at the earliest stages with these unfortunate people."

Tuberculosis is something from which taxpayer can see returns from his money, he said. The death-rate in Ontario over a period of 50 years has dropped from 393 to 35 and is steadily dropping. The state has provided during the past ten years, clinics which travel through the country giving treatment, medicines and advice free. In Quebec there are no such clinics. That is why the death rate in that province dropped only 117 to 88 as compared to that of Ontario.

State Responsibility

The state also holds itself responsible for the treatment of infectious diseases. Laboratories in various Ontario centres are providing free equipment, toxoids, serums, all of which the doctor can get for the asking. Sanitation is another important factor which the state takes care of. This is seen in the pure water, foods, sewage disposal and other forms of sanitation, and all of which is a tremendous change to conditions that existed 50 years ago, the speaker declared. "Death-rates have dropped amazingly in all diseases with the exception of cancer."

He drew a verbal picture of the cities of that period with their appalling sanitary conditions to those of the present day. The average length of life of people has increased over that period of time from 43 to 57 years," he said.

That civilization would have stopped if it had not been for the strides made by medical science is exemplified in other countries such as India, Africa, China, where the average length of life is 23 years, the same as it was 400 years ago".

The speaker was fittingly introduced by Rotarian Mack Robertson while the thanks of the clubs was expressed by Rotarian Charles Dolan. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of President Howard Clarke with the ever-popular Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs supplying the background for the community singing.

During the meeting, appreciation of the local branch of the Red Cross of the club's stand last week in promising their support was expressed by President Irvine Hefkey of the local Red Cross Branch. He suggested the "Rotary Annes" form a Red Cross auxiliary and aid the Rotary in its work for the patriotic organization.

ESTATE IS LEFT TO THE CHURCH

Stepson of Mrs. Templeton Says Woman "Not Normal" in Giving Testimony

London, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)—Trial of Mrs George Taylor of London, 50-year-old mother of 11 children who is charged with the murder of her friend, Mrs Annie Templeton, 67, continued today with Crown witnesses occupying the session. The case opened yesterday with Mrs. Taylor believed to be the second woman in more than 100 years to face a murder charge here.

Body of Mrs. Templeton, a widow who formerly resided in Stratford, was found last March 28 on the roadway near the Taylor residence. Mrs. Taylor, with whom Mrs. Templeton sometimes boarded, was taken into custody a few hours later.

Crown Prosecutor W. B. Common said the Prosecution's theory is that Mrs. Taylor killed Mrs. Templeton expecting to benefit under a will and that the body was placed on the roadway to create the impression Mrs. Templeton was struck by an automobile.

Mr. Common said the widow's estate of approximately $1,300 was left to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stratford. H. G. Fraser, London lawyer, testified that before the death of Mrs. Templeton, Mrs. Taylor told him the widow was leaving everything to her.

Left All to Church

Later, he said, Mrs. Templeton came to his office and made out a will leaving everything to the church. He added that as far as he knew, Mrs. Taylor did not know the contents of the will.

Mr. Fraser testified that approximately three days before Mrs. Templeton's body was found, Mrs. Taylor telephoned him asking him if Mrs. Templeton had made a new will. He said he refused to discuss the matter.

Police Constable Alec Templeton of Stratford, stepson of Mrs. Templeton, testified that her mental condition was "not normal." He said she was given over to restless moods and said that while living at his home she barricaded her bedroom door and slept with a stick beneath her mattress.

He said she was a friend of his father's family in Ireland and she and his father were married following the death of his mother. He added that his stepmother received $1,000 insurance on the death of his father in January, 1938, and received a pension of $60 a month since that time.

The jury was placed in overnight custody at the request of Mr. Justice J. C. Makins, who is presiding.

The Canadian Press Provides CBC With News Bulletins

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—The Canadian Press, Co-operative News Association of Canada's daily newspapers, Monday began providing to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation four 15-minute news bulletins daily for each of five regions across Canada. The bulletins are put on the air morning, noon, mid-evening and at night.

The day-and-night service marks the final development in Canadian Press news on the air from the time when a national night bulletin was first made available to the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission in July, 1933. It replaces the daytime bulletins provided to the telegraph companies for the last three years for distribution to individual radio stations as a stop-gap arrangement until CBC went on the air in daytime hours.

Available Without Charge

The news bulletin service is made available to the CBC without charge, as in the national interest, as were the stop-gap daytime bulletins provided to the telegraph companies. By agreement, the CBC reimburses The Canadian Press for the expenses of compilation, which is done at Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The bulletins are available to all CBC network stations. To other Canadian stations, the bulletins are available at cost only of the cut-in on the CBC network or the extension of the network to the individual station from the closest CBC station.

During the evening President Vaughan presented Y'sman Robt. Pringle with a beautifully hand-burned smoking set designed, and made by the donor. The set was given to Mr. Pringle for bringing into the club the largest number of members during the 1938-39 semester. ### Lucien Rochon of Ottawa Killed and Several Suffer Minor Injuries

Bell's Corners, Ont., Spet. 26 — (CP)—Lucien Rochon, 29, of Ottawa, was killed last night when a Canadian National Railways North Bay-bound extra freight struck a gasoline speeder on which 14 railway employees were riding at Sullivan's Cut, three miles west of here. ## NATIONS' EFFORTS UNITED

The world has never seen such fine coordination as exists between Britain and France in their efforts to down Hitlerism and save the world for democracy and liberty. And if there is cooperation between the two countries, all phases of the national life in these two lands too are welded together. One thought dominates all — successful prosecution of war to remove the menace to the liberty, security and peace which they so much desire, and which the smaller nations of Europe also so greatly hope for.

One of the signs of this fine unity of thought and effort is the secrecy with which have been clothed the growth of the British army and the steady coordination of resources and military forces during the weeks when war seemed inevitable. Nothing was allowed to interfere with the smoothness of the machinery of munition production and the development and the organization of the armies of defence by the two Western Powers

The movement of the British armies to the Continent to stand by the side of the French forces is one of the miracles of modern mass movements of men. No one yet knows details.

Today that British force in France and the troops at home in England are ready to perform their great part in the campaign which lies before.

France has perfect coordination of her national life. The mobilization of her armies was a great event. She was not caught napping. The two air forces and the two navies move silently in that perfect mechanism of coordinated policy. These make the Allied forces most powerful striking units, on land, on sea and in the air.

Everything indicates the determination and confidence of the two peoples that they will at last crush Nazism which has been the scourge of Europe. As has been remarked there is a grim determination to see this gigantic task which may last years through to that finish which will bring a new era wherein such manifestations as Europe has had to put up with during the past five or six years will disappear.

HITLER AS SHOWN IN BLUE BOOK

Commenting on British Blue Book, New York Times says that "the sole responsibility of Hitler for provoking the war was already put beyond doubt by every record hitherto available but the present documents fill in many details hitherto lacking and throw a brilliant light on the personality of the German leaders.

The Times goes on to say—'The spectacle of Foreign Minister Ribbentrop reading at 'top speed' and 'aping Herr Hitler at his worst'; of Field Marshal Goering blandly telling the British Ambassador that he knew nothing of the decision to seize the Czech provinces before it was taken, and that he would not have gone to Italy on vacation if he had; or admitting to the Polish Ambassador that he no longer had much influence on the German policy toward Poland; or insisting on showing the British Ambassador the great alterations he was making in his house, "which include a new dining room to hold an incredible number of guests and to be all marble and hung with tapestries"; and finally the portraits of Hitler himself, with his apparent unwillingness or incapacity to listen to any reply that is not a flat acceptance of some demand, his alternating moods of calm and fury, his denunciations of the British in one moment and protestations of friendship in the next—on Aug. 28, two days before he attacked Poland, he even asked the British Ambassador whether England would be willing to accept an alliance with Germany! — his declaration that he was by nature an artist, not a politician, and once the Polish question had been settled he would end his life as an artist—all these will be unforgettable fragments of the tremendous drama which these official documents hold.

"The events and motives that led up to the war cannot be separated from Hitler's enigmatic personality. That he will break his most solemn word the instant it suits him to do so, that he will make any statement or tell any lie necessary to gain his immediate end, has been shown again and again, and even explicity announced by him as a policy; yet, either because the man is a great actor, or because he has some amazing capacity for temporarily convincing himself of the truth of any statement which he finds convenient to press upon his listener, he almost never gives the impression of plain cynicism. Throughout these papers Hitler's reported protestations of desire for friendship with the British seem sincere — provided, of course, that he could gain this friendship on his own terms. If the excuse that Germany had to act instantly in Poland because of 'atrocities' of Poles against Germans was devised merely for propogandistic purposes, then it is striking that Hitler felt it necessary to carry this propaganda even into private conversations with the British Ambassador. Judging by Hitler's emphasis and anger, real or feigned, in his talks with Henderson, one would almost gather that his whole attack on Poland was precipitated by injuries to a mere handful of Germans, and that Danzig and the Corridor were only incidental questions. He even implied in an aggrieved tone that the British guarantee to Poland 'forced' him into the agreement with Russia.

"Though many puzzles remain, one thing is clear. This time the British left no doubt of their attitude. Publicly and privately they insisted again and again that if the Poles were attacked they would fight. And Hitler, at the very end, even though he plunged ahead, seems at last to have believed them."

THE LAST STRAW OF SUMMER

On Saturday, September twenty-third, at ten to six,
Autumn officially begins in town, and in the sticks,
Let's punch the time clock in the nose, and celebrate the season!
Good by, dog days . . . It won't be long before we put our skis on.
Straw hats are in the attic; silver fox is on parade;
And up in Central Park the bowling greens begin to fade.

MERCHANDISING IN THIS DAY AND AGE REQUIRES EXCEPTIONAL ABILITY, much study and knowledge of materials and market trends. At no time, however, is the ability of the merchant, retailer and wholesaler tested as in war time when all markets and prices are more or less dislocated. Retailers have been having a hard time since the outbreak of hostilities trying to judge the normal rise and fall in prices of the commodities in which they deal, and the abnormal or war prices under fire from the various government price stabilization boards, the pressure of supply and demand, and various conditions which can not help but affect prices from day to day. One thing they do know is that prices will go up before they come down, and in fact have been steadily rising. Sugar was the first commodity affected in any large way and the consumers were largely to blame for that with the spectre of preserving time and a possible shortage of sugar. Arrangements have been made for a plentiful supply of sugar, the British Government taking over all stocks of raw sugar available and guaranteeing the refiners a plentiful and constant supply. That appears to lay the sugar spectre, but merchants in every line have their own troubles, and just have to carry on from day to day until things adjust themselves to wartime conditions. Merchants report that business is on the up trend with prices uncertain from day to day but bound to be on the up grade.

NEW YORK CITY IS FEELING THE PINCH OF WAR in a shortage of Scotch Whisky. A shipment of 40,000 cases from Scotland recently arrived in New York short, only 6,221 cases being available. Reasons for the small shipment were advanced including a labor shortage in Scotland, man power being diverted to military purposes. Trucks are also being diverted to military use. New export permits are required and inspectors are required to carefully inspect every shipment while on the piers. New Yorkers deprived of their Scotch are apt to turn Sour.

"BUY BRITISH" IS THE BATTLE CRY of A. M. Wiseman, senior British Trade Commissioner in Canada. Says he:

> We, (Great Britain) shall need to buy a lot from you. I only hope you will help to make that easy by buying as much as possible from us. I know that in the early stages of the war you may feel that you are taking rather a chance, but I am sure that you will take that chance gladly when you realize how much you will be helping us to carry on. Already I have received very many enquiries at my office from business men anxious to place their services at the disposal of the United Kingdom. Here is a way in which all can render the most practical assistance possible.

Britain's purchases from Canada will be very heavy and Canadians can help all round if they buy imported articles from Great Britain wherever possible. There is more to a war apparently than joining in singing The National Anthem.

Another Pact?

If a Russian pact with Britain's good friend Turkey develops over the weekend nobody will be surprised. In fact, we are unable to think of anything in diplomacy now that could surprise anyone, especially where Russia is concerned. And anyway there are worse things that could happen than a Russo-Turkish pact.

There are also, of course, a number of better things that could happen than a Russo-Turkish pact. One of them would be for Turkey to tell Russia to go to blazes, march into one of the two conspicuously pro-Nazi countries in the Balkans, and thus swing all the other Balkan countries into the Allied fighting line. This would give the Allies another and less impregnable front on which to attack Germany and it would be a strong suggestion to Italy that her advantage lies not in merely remaining neutral but in joining the Allies. Meanwhile, a Russo-Turkish pact is possibly the next best thing. Its primary effect will probably be a tendency toward stabilization and pacification of the Balkans, a condition which will not be to the disadvantage of British economic warfare in that area. There is no doubt that Turkey's desire to be on good terms with both Britain and Russia is very great and there is also no doubt that her influence on Russia is considerable, perhaps more than Germany's. If the pact is signed it would not be unexpected if it acts more as a limitation on Germany's ambitions than otherwise. In any case, what is a pact with Russia worth?—Peterborough Examiner.

Sir Gilbert Parker

Dr. Lorne Pierce has been responsible for printing an essay by the late Sir Andrew Macphail which is entitled Sir Gilbert Parker: an Appraisal. The essay was written as an introduction to a volume intended to be one of the series, Master Works of Canadian Authors, of which four volumes were issued under the editorship of the late John Garvin. This introduction was to preface Parker's Pierre and His People.

Sir Andrew cannot well be regarded as a sympathetic writer, but he gives a sufficiently just estimate of Parker to satisfy all but an over-bigoted friendship. He draws a picture of Parker, too, which may serve as one of a typical Canadian youth in search of destiny. "He began his career in the most unpromising circumstances; he was born in a small Canadian town of parents without riches, of no especial family affiliation, without political or ecclesiastical influence, lacking any tradition of scholarship. Relying upon his own inherent nature, he cast himself adrift." Could there be anything better in the way of a model beginning for a Canadian democrat? He set out to make himself familiar with the world "to its very ends." His only weapon was his pen.

From an obscure Canadian town, says Sir Andrew, Parker progressed to Portman Square, from the village school to the Athenoeum, the Carlton, the Garrick, and onward to become Sir Gilbert Parker, knight, baronet, and Privy Councillor, the Right Honourable. He also acquired the degrees of LL.D., D.C.L., and D.Litt. For eighteen years he represented Gravesend in Parliament.

Gilbert Parker will live if at all by his books. Pierre and His People sold seven editions in twenty years and is still going strong. The Canadian who has not read it has a duty to perform which will become a pleasure when he does it.

"The essential merit of these stories," says our essayist, "is that the personages are redolent of the place, they breathe the atmosphere in which they live; and yet they find themselves at home in the world at large. The author has created them from the material at his hand as a pioneer would build a house of logs, which is a thing of beauty because it fits with the landscape."

Another book which people will love to read is The Lane That Has No Turning. After this the reader will not neglect Parker's other books. Sir Andrew is nothing if not hypercritical, but he does not altogether slay Sir Gilbert, even with an allusion to his "adscititious effects." And Dr. Pierce does us all a favor by presenting us with the essay.—Hamilton Spectator.

Why Not?

In the last war, the aid of the dominions was a mighty factor in Britain's strength. There is every reason to believe it will again be. These great units of empire are stronger in arms, more populous and richer today than they were a quarter century ago and they seem to be as determined now as they were then to aid their mother country in her struggle against the same foe.—Baltimore Sun.

TRAVELLER DIES SUDDENLY

London, Ont., Sept. 25—(CP) — Ralph James McKay, 56, prominent Western Ontario commercial traveller, died suddenly at his home today. He suffered a heart attack.

He was born in London, son of the late Hugh McKay, a prominent cigar manufacturer. He was traveller for a hardware firm for 26 years but lately he worked for a wholesale grocery firm.

Mrs. Robert Bartlett, Kingston, Ont., is a sister.

DALADIER CALLS CABINET

Paris, Sept. 25—(AP)— Premier Daladier today caleld a cabinet meeting for 5 p.m. (11 a.m. EST) tomorrow at Elysee Palace to review the war. President Albert Lebrun will preside.

A New Weapon?

What did Hitler have in mind when at Danzig he cryptically threatened that "the moment could come very suddenly when we could use a weapon with which we could not be attacked." Presumably some new military invention, some new chemical discovery. If so, it is not likely that the intelligence offices of his enemies have overlooked it. The major technological surprise of the last World War were the huge gun with which the Germans bombarded Paris, the use of gas and the introduction of tanks. Of the gun, nothing can be said than that it was a freak, merely bigger than known guns of smaller calibre. On the other hand, gas or tanks were introduced after the war was well under way. Machine-guns firing through the propellers of airplanes were known before 1914, though they had not actually been generally adopted by any army.

It would be remarkable indeed, if the present war did not furnish its military surprises, but if technical history is any guide, they are more likely to come from gentle and ingenious civilians than from swashbucklers. Moreover, the civilians will find it hard to overcome the resistance of the professionals. From the days when the Chevalier Bayard received captive knights and bowmen almost as guests, but cut off the hands of musketeers who had been guilty of using the newfangled gunpowder, to the days when the German general staff opposed Fritz Haber and his gas and the British general staff adopted tanks only because of Winston Churchill's persistence, officers have not looked with favor on innovations in death-dealing. The reason is not that such civilians as Gatling and Maxim, who gave us the machine gun, or Fulton, the artist, who spent much time in devising a submarine, are more bloodthirsty than professional soldiers, but that an army, a highly standardized organization drilled in the use of known and tried weapons and tactics, cannot easily switch to new ways, however effective they may be on paper.—N. Y. Times.

FRENCH CAPTURE

The French themselves, the dispatches added, suffered losses during the night in the sector between the Saar River and Blies Creek, where they were reported attempting to hold newly-won positions under machine-gun fire and a bombardment from the Westwall fortifications.

The reports said the French had captured and were holding a 4 1-2 mile stretch of the main highway between Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken.

Centre of Line

(Saarbruecken is approximately in the centre of the 100-mile front between the Moselle and Rhine Rivers, where the heaviest fighting has been centred. Zweibruecken is about 15 miles east of Saarbruecken on the outer edge of the German Westwall defences.)

The French advance along the road leading to Zweibruecken was said to have passed beyond the hamlet of Althernbach. Farther east the French were reported to have almost surrounded German forts at Fischbach and Ludwigswinkel. This was accomplished, dispatches said, by a single attack through thick woods from the ruins of the 14th century Palatinate Castles, which the French have turned into bases.

One of the first positions the French captured at the outbreak of the war was a high hill in the southern Palatinate Forests. Atop it are ruins of Wegelnbourg Castle, destroyed by French guns.

Cut Secondary Rail Line

A column of troops from Wegelnbourg Castle was reported to have cut a secondary rail line and road between Fischbach and Blundenthal on the west, reaching the Sauer watershed north of Fischbach. A German force estimated at several thousand was said however, to have remained in the vicinity of Fischbach, still linked with the rear by a secondary forest highway.

The French advance through forest areas famed for their weird sandstone rock formations was delayed frequently by minefields and barbed wire, but defended only by a few patrols of German troops.

Neither side has given official or semi-official estimates of losses during the last two days, but reports reaching Basel said French dead and wounded numbered more than 1,000 for the period beginning Sunday and ending at noon Monday. Military observers here said this figure was low for forces attacking on such a wide front.

Artillery Prominent

Until today's counterattack south of Zweibruecken, the German losses were reported low. French artillery was said to have taken a heavy toll during Monday's barrage, which continued today in some sectors.

Despite frequent reports of air battles, including a raid Sunday on German airplane factories at Friederichshafen, neither side seemed anxious to make extensive use of the air arm. The Germans were reported reserving the bulk of their bombers and fighting planes for concentrated action against French and British land troops in the event of a mass attack on the main fortifications of the west wall.

SMITH'S FALLS LEAD

Smith's Falls, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP) —Smith's Falls last night held Ottawa Lakeside Pros to a 3-3 tie here for a 2-1 lead in their four-of-seven game Eastern Ontario Baseball Association final series. Next game will be played here Wednesday.

LABOR CONGRESS WARNS AGAINST PROFITEERING

'Unwavering Support' Extended to Great Britain and France in War Efforts

LAY FOUNDATION

London, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)—Labor extended its "unwavering support" today in the war efforts of Canada and Great Britain coupled with a warning against "profiteering and greed."

The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada voted as its 55th convention began yesterday in favor of a resolution calling for labor's full contribution to the tasks of war. At the same time the Dominion government was asked to mobilize wealth "to serve the country's interest instead of individuals and corporations."

The resolution, summing up resolutions that poured into the Congress from affiliates in all parts of Canada, was proposed by Carl E. Berg of Edmonton, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, and was read in French by Gustav Francq of Montreal.

It declared that "in the Fascist and Nazi nations the free trade union movement has been outlawed, its property and funds confiscated, its leaders persecuted, in many instances ruthlessly murdered—which action constitutes a complete destruction of democracy—and it has become necessary to resort to arms in order to prevent the aggressive action of Germany and her Allies from destroying the independence of Poland and other nations where democratic government still exists."

Inference Put In

Oscar Kitching of Windsor asked if Russia were "embodied with Nazilsm and Facism," in the resolution.

"No, but the inference is there," replied Secretary-Treasurer R. J. Tallon, presiding as chairman because of the illness of the retiring President, P. H. Draper of Ottawa.

"We should lay the foundation now to ensure that the unemployed at the end of this war will be cared for," urged J. W. Buckley of Toronto. "We should look to the aftermath of the war and not to the beginning."

Alfred Matthews of Montreal maintained that Canada could not play its proper role in the war "unless the welfare of the worker is protected."

"This war must not be a war of grafting and stealing, in which monopolies grow rich through war contracts," Fred Collins of Toronto asserted. "Labor should make a very definite pronouncement in this regard."

GOV'T TO HELP APPLE INDUSTRY

500,000 Boxes of B.C. Apples Will be Bought at Basic Price of $1.05 a Box

Ottawa, Sept. 26—(CP)— Canada's harassed apple industry, faced with wartime disruption of its United Kingdom market, today was relieved by assurance of sufficient government aid to help the industry over "a difficult period."

A broad scheme of government purchasing and processing of the surplus apple crop, combined with closer regulation and zoning of the domestic apple market, was announced by the government last night after a four-hour Cabinet session.

The new policy, which provides different programs for the Maritime, central and western zones, resulted from a series of conferences here between the industry and government officials two weeks ago and later extensive consideration by the Agricultural Supplies Committee headed by A. M. Shaw, director of marketing.

The industry stressed the grave difficulties caused by war when almost half the country's apple production normally is sold in Britain. About half the British Columbia crop and more than 80 per cent of the Nova Scotia crop are exported.

Will Buy 500,000 Boxes

To meet this situation, the government proposes to buy up to 500,000 boxes of British Columbia apples of export variety at a basic price of $1.05 a box. The agreement to be made with the industry in Nova Scotia will provide for canning or drying of 1,500,000 barrels of apples, for whoich growers will be paid $1.47 for No. 1 large; $1.29 for No. 1 small; $1.02 for domestic large; and 81 cents for domestic small. A central agency will be set up in Nova Scotia.

British Columbia apples will be marketed as far east as Manitoba, Nova Scotia apples within the Martimes, while Ontario and Quebec will retain their own rich home market, subject to modifications as varieties or supplies are reduced in the central zone.

In addition, the government is stiffening grading regulations and will undertake a comprehensive nation-wide advertising campaign to promote apple consumption at home.

The Stars Say—

..For Wednesday, September 27

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A SUDDEN and surprising turn of events may make this an interesting and memorable day, according to an intriguing array of planetary configurations. A particular incident may be concerned with public relations, in which there will be contact with authorities or those of influence and power. Some of these will be found kindly disposed, but tact, diplomacy or perhaps "wire-pulling" may be required to win the favor of others.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of surprising and unprecedented events, possibly in connection with a public office or an assignment of importance. This may be engineered by the good offices of those of prestige and popularity, whose immediate co-operation is vital since hostile factions may arise. These may be placated by finesse or tact rather than direct approach. In all be vigilant, alert to treachery and subtlety. Much happiness is seen.

A child born on this day may be endowed with outstanding gifts of mind and traits of character to fit it for place and power in public standing, either in politics, diplomacy, science, education, philanthropy or religion. Its qualities assure it success and high esteem.

SWEDEN TO HALT

Loaded With Pulp

(Three of the four sunken ships were loaded with woodpulp bound for Great Britain, shippers said. The nature of the Silesia's cargo was not disclosed. Germany has referred to the cargoes as cellulose, which she said was included in the contraband list.)

Following the sinking of the Silesia, the Stockholm Foreign Office consulted various trade organizations, and observers said it was possible all exporting would be halted until negotiations with Germany could be completed.

Based on Normal Trade

Germany, importing some 70 per cent of her ore requirements from Sweden, was said to have received a Swedish promise to maintain ore exportation when war started. Informed sources believed Sweden based this on the maintenance of normal trade connections.

The U-boats shared attention with what many believed to be a naval battle off the Norwegian coast yesterday. The supposed battle started early in the morning when a pillar of flame was seen far out at sea. Heavy cannonading began early in the day, and Norwegians reported it was so violent at times that windows on the island of Sotra, off Bergen, trembled and cracked. The fading and revival of the noise led to the conclusion a wide area was included in the action. The cannonading stopped at nightfall.

(The British Admiralty said last night it had received no report of a naval engagement off the Norwegian coast, "as would have been the case had one taken place.")

CANADA GIVEN

Presents Credentials

The new Canadian Minister, who succeeds Sir Herbert Marler, resigned on account of ill health, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt yesterday, declaring:

"It is my lot to assume office at a moment when, in consequence of the tragic events now afflicting Europe, my country has just become engaged in war.

"People of good will cannot confront this revolutionary period in the affairs of mankind with lightness of heart; but the people of Canada, in thus taking up the cause of freedom and justice and standing for orderly democratic processes against processes of force, find an immense reassurance in their constant knowledge that these same causes are never in issue between nations in this region of the earth."

President Roosevelt replied: "In like manner, we share the view that processes of force can never become an issue between nations in this region of the earth."

Advised to Keep "Hands Off"

Senate leaders were reported authoritatively to have advised the White House and the State Department to continue their "hands off" attitude in the congressional fight over neutrality.

Those in charge of the legislation, it was learned, have argued they would have a better chance of obtaining its enactment if there was no attempt by the executive branch to influence Congress.

This is in line with the position taken by President Roosevelt, who said last Thursday that Congress should make its own choice of the method of safeguarding United States neutrality.

(The Senate Foreign Relations Committee agreed yesterday to delay consideration of the measure until Thursday in order to give opposition Senators time to study it. The committee is expected to approve the bill late this week, and Senate debate probably will start Monday or Tuesday.

It was learned that Democratic leader Alben Barkley and Republican leader Charles McNary have entered into a "gentleman's agreement" under which the opposition will engage in no filibustering tactics and the administration forces will not utilize their power to force lengthy sessions or bring other "pressure on the Senate."

A Great Advantage

Ottawa, Sept. 26 (CP)—Flow of war materials from the United States to Canada by rail, by inland shipping and by road and air would greatly further Canada's organization for war, authoritative sources here said last night.

The draft of the administration's neutrality law revision proposals, made public in Washington last night, would give Canada a great advantage over other belligerents in purchase of war goods from the United States by permitting normal trade movements over the International boundary which stretches for 3,000 miles from Atlantic to Pacific.

Movement of Canada's war purchases across the border by the canals and Great Lakes as well as by rail and by highway would remove the danger of enemy interception, it was agreed. The second stage of transport of munitions and war equipment, from factory to firing line across the Atlantic, would still remain, but it was pointed out that convoys could be more easily organized in Canadian waters and Canadian ports than in United States harbors with enemy submarines lurking outside.

ARABS TO CO-OPERATE

Beirut, Syria, Sept. 26 (CP-Havas) Members of the Arab Higher Committee have appointed delegates to confer with Moslem leaders throughout the near East on plans for co-operation with the Allies in the war, it was learned today. It was believed the Arabs would drop their demands for an immediate settlement of the Palestine issue until after the war.

NO BAYONET CHARGES

Paris, Sept. 26 (CP-Havas)—Reports printed abroad of bayonet charges by French troops on the Western Front are wholly imaginary, French military sources said today.

The development of automatic arms had revolutionized Infantry tactics and has relegated the bayonet to the status of a museum piece. The modern army uses it only on parade, these sources said.

BODY OF FREUD CREMATED

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—The body of Professor Sigmund Freud, originator of psycho-analysis, was cremated today at Golders Green after a non-religious ceremony.

Approximately 150 persons, mostly Austrian refugees, attended the ceremony. Freud, who left Vienna more than a year ago to reside in England, died Saturday of a recurrent heart ailment.

RUMOR

Today's communique said the army in Poland was moving toward the German-Soviet demarcation line. It claimed that in brief fights with the Poles along the lower course of the San River 2,000 prisoners were taken by an armored division.

Artillery Fire on West Front

Artillery fire and scouting activities were reported on the western front. The communique claimed six French planes and two captive balloons were shot down. This boosted the French air toll in the west, according to German figures to 32 planes and six balloons.

A new gesture of friendliness toward France by the German Government was expected in informed quarters.

Rumors, completely without official verification, were to the effect that Germany might release French prisoners taken to date on the western front. The same rumors had it that Germany believed the soldiers would be good peace propagandists, if they could be convinced the Reich feels no animosity toward France.

Official sources professed Germany has no war aims regarding France and that her chief concern is that her opponents may violate the neutrality of Belgium and The Netherlands to attack Germany at a spot unprotected by the Westwall.

Deny Neutrality Endangered

Commenting on British fears that German troops massed near The Netherlands and Belgium might strike out toward France through neutral territory, the German news agency said "It may be true that the neutrality of Belgium and The Netherlands is endangered, but not from the German side."

The agency added Germany "would least want the battlefront along The Netherlands and Belgian frontiers because that is uncomfortably close to the Ruhr coal fields and to the highly developed lower Rhine industrial region."

TRICK DID NOT WORK

Orangeburg, S.C., Sept. 26 (AP)—Only human tracks were visible from the spot where a cow was stolen, but a policeman followed them anyway and arrested a suspect on a theft charge. The man admitted in court he had put shoes on the cow to mislead pursuers. He was sentenced to 18 months' road work.

ARMSTRONG—ARKELL

Eldorado — Fox's United Church, Eldorado, beautifully decorated with gladioli, ferns and other Autumn flowers with tapers burning among them, was the scene of a pretty wedding at 2 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 22nd., when Lillian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Arkell, became the bride of Earl Armstrong, second son of Mrs. John Armstrong and the late John Armstrong of Madoc. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Crabbe in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

The bride given in marriage by her father was beautifully gowned in Chantilly lace with lace train and a finger tip veil of silk embroidered net, caught with a headdress of lily-of-the-valley. She wore white satin sandals and carried a bouquet of pink bridal roses, lily-of-the-valley and fern.

Miss Alice Armstrong, sister of the groom, as maid of honour, was attired in peach moire taffeta with peach doll flower hat, and silver slippers. Miss Anne Armstrong, also a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. She was attired in blue moire taffeta, designed the same as her sister's, with doll flower hat and silver slippers. Mrs. Fred Houston of Belleville, played the wedding music and the soloist was Miss Doris V. Houston of Belleville.

The bride entered the drawing room, which was decorated with baskets of gladioli, asters and zinnias, on the arm of her cousin, Dr. J. S. Demorest and was given in marriage by her mother.

The bride wore a street length frock of accordian pleated teal blue transparent velvet, flat turban of blue and silver metallic, finished with short blue veil. She carried a sheaf of Sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Marie Demorest of Toronto, was the bridesmaid and wore a gown of wine crepe with wine accessories, carrying a sheaf of Talisman roses.

Mr. Ronald Graham of Kingston, was groomsman, for his brother.

The bride's mother wore Elizabeth blue and navy accessories with corsage of Queen Elizabeth roses.

Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Graham left by motor for Northern Ontario, the bride travelling in a bottle green rough finished wool suit, jacket trimmed with mink, an imported cream Battenburg lace blouse, green French felt hat banded with coque feathers and green bag, shoes and gloves.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will reside at Kirkland Lake.

WALLACE—ACKERMAN

A pretty early Autumn wedding of wide interest, took place on Saturday, September 23, 1939, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Ackerman, R.R. 7, Belleville, when their youngest daughter, Alma Mae, became the bride of Mr. Arthur J. Wallace, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wallace of Campbellford. The Rev. J. D. P. Knox of 104 Moira Street, Belleville, was the officiating clergyman, in the presence of some thirty-five guests, all immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The house was prettily decorated with suitable Autumn flowers. The drawing room was especially attractive with a wide full length mirror at the end of the room, around which an arch was artistically arranged with flowers.

The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by Miss Evelyn Ackerman of Bath. The bride looked charming in her floor length gown of blush pink lace over taffeta, fashioned on princess lines, with matching bolero and white suede slippers. She carried a beautiful bouquet of Johanna Hill and Briarcliffe roses, caught together with a white silk bow. In her hair was a coronet of lily-of-the-valley.

Little Miss Gloria Ackerman of London, looking sweet in her gown of blue taffeta ,was her aunt's only attendant as flower girl. She carried a bouquet of pink and white asters tied with a long pink bow.

During the signing of the register, Miss Ruth McCredie of Campbellford, sang sweetly "At Dawning" accompanied by Miss Evelyn Ackerman.

After the congratulations were received the bride and groom retired to the dining room for the reception, where the bride's table was charming with a lace cloth and tall tapers, the centrepiece was a beautiful three storey wedding cake.

The waitresses for the occasion were three cousins of the bride, all gowned in white sheer with pink organdy aprons and small hair bows.

The bride's mother chose a gown of black sheer with silver trimming and wore a corsage of Sweetheart roses and fern, while the groom's mother wore a gown of navy sheer with silk embroidery and a corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride chose for travelling a navy blue tailored suit with matching accessories.

The out-of-town guests were present from London, Leamington, Napanee, Campbellford, Frankford, and Belleville.

Many useful and costly gifts were received by the bride and groom.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a motor trip to Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and Eastern points of interest. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Wallace will make their home in Belleville.

KINGSTON ROAD RALLY DAY

Rally Day was observed in the Kingston Road United Church on Sunday last. "There were many present to enjoy the Rally Day program. Following quiet music played by the pianist, Mrs. Farnsworth, the superintendent, Mr. Donaldson took charge of the call to worship, the 100th psalm.

"Glory to God for His Sunshine is free" was sung by the school.

The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. Following this the choir rendered a very beautiful number.

Mr. H. Walkom led in the reading of the Scripture Lession.

The little children of Mrs. Donaldson's class put on an exercise "Little Builders," that was much appreciated.

The girls intermediate class sang "Jesus bids us shine". "The spirit of the great chief", the rally day story was given by Mrs. Elmy. The Rally Day offering was very gratifying. This was followed by the singing of a hymn. Rev. Farnsworth then gave a very interesting address entitled "The Sunday School moving forward." The choir very ably rendered another selection. Following a hymn Rev. Mr. Farnsworth closed the school with prayer.

How Low Is Your Blood Pressure?

By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Almost as many people suffer from low blood pressure as the large number who have too high a count. Lack of physical exercise, strict dieting, living under mental pressure, all contribute to a condition which is recognized by the patient as a "loss of pep".

When life seems dull, not worth while, see your doctor. His examination will include a check of your blood pressure. If too low, he will advise you how to correct a condition which is not fatal to life, but one that saps your energy, destroys joy of living.

All attempts to change your blood count should be carried on under medical supervision. Sudden changes are dangerous, may react on the heart.

The capable druggist is a major factor in your recovery. Let him fill the doctor's order for medication.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Girl Need Not Sacrifice Her Ideals

Here's something for you girls who write me that you can't have boy friends unless you sacrifice your ideals and consent to petting and other wild goings-on. Doesn't it seem likely that your failure has been due to the fact that you have not gone about things the right way?

The following letter is a pleasure to hand on to you. Here's a girl who has always had boy friends, and who didn't have to resort to petting and drinking. She is happily married. But let me quote her letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"I'm sure you must receive a great many letters, but I'm offering mine to you for what it's worth. I often read letters in your column, from girls who claim that just because they're 'good', they're denied all the fun and good times. I can't understand why they talk like that.

"I dislike to use 1st person singular but it's necessary to explain my reactions to a girl who feels sorry for herself because she is 'nice' and imagines that she lacks attention for that reason.

"I'm almost thirty years old, and have been happily married for years. I never had a drink of liquor in my life, and as for smoking —it just doesn't allure me. I think too much of my health for these hectic substitutes for happiness: Wild parties, smoking and drinking.

"And another thing, I believe there are so many other things in life more interesting. I never lacked boy friends, perhaps because I always made a point of looking my best and being entertaining. I never enjoyed being miserable and handing my miseries to other people. I believe in the saying: 'Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone.'

"At a party no one ever found me in a parked car or petting in the dark. No girl need ever be lonesome there are always plenty of people with congenial tastes, if she will only take the trouble to look for them in the right places. If one likes tennis, swimming or other wholesome sports, go where these things take place, and don't hang around night clubs, roadhouses and such.

"Life is too short and time too valuable to waste it repining. Better be up and doing. When I get interested in something unfamiliar to me I take it up and try to learn by studying. In this way I've become a good tennis player, and a fair golfer. And I can swim. You can take lessons in all these sports, besides lessons in charm and other things which will greatly increase happiness and the joy of living.

"I have even taken up bridge, and have also become interested in the symphony orchestra in my city. This has all made my life fuller and brought me interesting contacts and some valuable friendships. I hope to show my children how to get the most out of life, with a healthy mind and body to carry on.

Happy Wife and Mother."

If any more of you have had similar experiences, I'd like to hear about them. Don't you think this lady had the right idea?

One girl won't mind the trek back to school. She will be wearing a coat of soft brown tweed with big beaver muff cuffs and a hood of beaver which drops to form a cowl collar.

You're lucky if you are out for a fur coat this season. Furs were never so beautifully handled. Among fitted silhouettes is a fine black caracul with soft pleats giving skirt fullness below the molded bodice. A belt with a black and silver metal buckle defines the snug waist.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Delay in Writing Bread-and-Butter Letter

Your bread-and-butter letter is your opportunity to show that you are a pleasant and appreciative person. Shame on you, if, like an ingrate, you sigh about having to write this letter of thanks-for-hospitality. Shame on you, too, if you put off writing it until the first paragraph will have to consist of lame excuses and feeble apologies.

Write this letter within a day or two after you have returned home. The sooner you write it, the easier it will be for you to make your words blossom with "sweet rememberings". Always address your letter to the hostess; at least write the first letter to your hostess, even if you later write individual ones to other members of the family. In the letter to your hostess express your appreciation to the host for his hospitality.

As you write this letter, your thoughts and words will flow more facilely if you consider the point of view of your hostess as she reads. Put yourself in her place, and think what you would like to be thanked for, if you were she. Then your words won't seem to take her hospitality for granted. There probably was extra planning to be done, extra time and budgeting, adaptation on the part of all the members of the family. You have to be a pretty nice guest to deserve all this, and your letter should indicate that you were!

Besides thanking for the general spirit of hospitality, remember to thank for special plans made for your comfort and entertainment. A lovely room looking on some quiet trees that your hostess knew would bring you a needed rest; opportunities to meet delightful friends of the family, your favorite sports thoughtfully planned for a tea, luncheon, a bridge party, a dinner, a dance given in your honor; motor rides, picnics arranged for you. Such specially-made plans call for special thanks.

Don't think that I am advising you to write about all these things. I am trying to draw out from the usual visit a detail or two which will check up with your experience.

Your bread-and-butter letter needn't be a four-or-five page expression-of-thanks. On the other hand, it should not be stiff, formal above all, it should not be inarticulate and sparse . . a sweeping, inclusive statement, such as "Thanks for a wonderful visit", or "You certainly gave me a marvelous time".

Double Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

We are going to have a double wedding this Fall and would like to know if it is proper to send out one form of invitation, or three different forms?

The brides-to-be are twins and because all of the friends of one bridegroom may not be acquainted with both girls, or the other bridegroom, we thought that it would be necessary to send one form of invitation to the relatives and friends of the girls, and a different one to each boy's relatives and friends.

Any suggestions you may make to fill this request will be greatly appreciated.

Edward

There should be only one form of invitation for this double wedding. The circumstances that you set forth in your question would not affect this. The invitations are sent out in the names of the mother and father of the brides-to-be, and therefore only one form would be used.

Look about and you will notice that most smart milliners are already featuring fur hats. A beauty has a crown of brown beaver felt with a cuff of the new ruby fox.

There's grace in the slim, long-sleeved dinner dress. Black crepe marocain makes a model with piping of gold kidskin.

A frock designed as a background for accessories is in brown crepe ribbed to suggest faille. It has a fitted midriff and a ruffled peplum in back.

It's difficult to resist one of the new negligees of the season, in hyacinth moire taffeta. The bodice is double-breasted with a big bow neckline. Pockets are set at the hips just above gathered fullness.

YOUTHFUL STARS SHINING IN THEIR NEW FOOTBALL SETTINGS

With most of the grid forces in eastern Canada having played exhibitions of some kind, coaches and fans are taking stock of the new blood with their favorites, hoping, as usual, that the additions made since last season will result in championships. Three of the best newcomers are shown here. LEFT is Tony Golab, great plunging and secondary defencive half with Ottawa Rough Riders, who starred last year for Sarnia Imperials in the O.R.F.U., and who appears to be living up to Ottawa expectations. CENTRE, is Harold (Busher) Young, quarterback with the Balmy Beach O.R.F.U. team, who turned in a great exhibition of forward passing against Argos in the annual exhibition game between the two Toronto teams. Just out of high school, Young looks like a coming star. At the RIGHT is Harry Szumlinski, who toiled last fall for Hamilton Tigers, but shifted to London and the University of Western Ontario for the 1940 campaign. His running and passing in the first exhibition game was a pleasant surprise for Western supporters.

FRANKIE FRISCH TO TAKE OVER AT CHICAGO, PITTSBURGH?

PIE TRAYNOR GABBY HARTNETT FRANKIE FRISCH

Deposed as manager of St. Louis Cardinals near the end of the 1938 season, Frankie Frisch is reported to be on his way back to the major leagues as manager of a National League team. Formerly one of the game's greatest second basemen, Frisch has been a radio broadcaster since leaving the Cards, but gave up that post recently and admitted he expected to be back in the game next season. The two National League clubs with the 1940 leadership in doubt are Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates. Pie Traynor is in his sixth year as manager at Pittsburgh, but last year's collapse and this year's bad showing have weakened his position. In Chicago Gabby Hartnett took over in midseason last year and led the Cubs to a pennant, but his showing this year has been widely criticized.

Rally Day was observed in Alkins United Church on Sunday afternoon. The superintendent, Mr. Stanley Spafford, took charge of the program. The choir sang "Anywhere With Jesus" and a story entitled "The Spirit of the Great Chief" was given by Miss Edith Hogle. The guest speaker was Mr. Ed Rupert of Belleville who gave a brief but inspiring message, taking as his subject, "Following Jesus." He read a few verses from the 1st Chapter of John. Mr. Rupert said "Many people today call themselves Christians, who are not following Christ. If we are true Christians we must take up our cross and follow Him. He then gave a message in song, "Take Up Thy Cross and Follow Me." Mr. Rupert also gave a few selections on his vibra/harp which were greatly appreciated. The church was nicely decorated with corn, fruit and flowers, which all help make the Rally Day Service a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ray and family of Centenary visited Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Grills on Sunday and attended the service at Alkins Church.

Miss Ila Hogle of Belleville took tea on Sunday evening with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stickle and family of Johnstown, visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMullen and family on Sunday evening.

Pair of Victories Today Will Give Cincinnati Reds First Flag in Twenty Years

Bucky Walters and Curt Davis Will be Opposing Moundsmen in First Game

GIANTS WIN

White Sox Favored With Nine-Hit Pitching by Ted Lyons

By BILL WHITE
Associated Press Sports Writer

On the result of today's double-header in Cincinnati may depend the hopes of a National Baseball League championship of either Cincinnati Reds or St. Louis Cardinals.

A split in the four-game series—which would parallel the season's record to date of the first and second place clubs—won't be good enough for the Cardinals. They have to win all four, and even then the Reds still can slip into the World Series.

A pair of victories now would give Cincinnati its first pennant in 20 years.

The standings as they go into their four-game series:—

| | W. | L. | GB | GP |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati ... | 93 | 54 | — | 7 |
| St. Louis ... | 89 | 57 | 3 1-2 | 7x |

x—One game with New York cancelled.

When Bucky Walters, he of the 27-game victory record and Curt Davis, iron man of the Cardinal staff, take to the pitcher's hill in today's first game, the Reds will be favored to win the opening game, mainly because they are at home and have Walters hurling for them.

In today's second battle Gene Thompson and Mort Cooper probably will oppose each other, but the first game, with Walters-Davis dueling, holds most interest.

While everybody else waited for the Cardinal-Reds tilt the New York Giants made good use of their time yesterday by beating Boston 6-5 and Chicago White Sox claimed a 4-3 victory over St. Louis Browns in the only two games played.

The Giants won with a three-run spurt in the last half of the ninth while the Sox were favored with a nine-hit pitching performance by Ted Lyons.

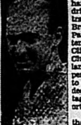
Unorthodox, Two-Fisted Tennis as Played by Jack Bromwich Has Important Disadvantages

By Central Press Canadian



New York, Sept. 26—There has been so much discussion of the effectiveness of the famous two-handed forehand drive of Australia's Jack Bromwich," says Paul C. Harding, tennis pro at the Clifton Tennis Club, Staten Island, N.Y., "that perhaps it is best to point out the decided disadvantage of this unorthodox stroke.

"Analysis of the stroke," continues Harding, Jack Bromwich "shows that the two-handed forehand, while a powerful offensive weapon, is nevertheless a definite handicap to the player who uses it. In employing two hands in his flat drive, the Australian youngster even lays himself open to a possible violent death from a broken neck every time his first service is good—and he knows it!

"That may sound incredible, but it is true. Bromwich, when serving, holds two balls in his hand. If his first service is good, and the ball is returned to his forehand, Bromwich cannot carry the second ball in his hand—as all one-handed drivers can and do—he must drop it onto the court at his feet, in order to get both hands on his racquet for his two-handed drive.

"And as soon as he drops that second ball—he has got to look out for it! For, if he inadvertently steps on it, he may quite easily fall and break an arm, leg or even his neck. Stepping on a perfectly round tennis ball is quite as deadly as stepping on a banana-peel.

"Bromwich knows this, of course—and, knowing it, is constantly over-conscious of the peril that lies at his feet, too aware of it to be able to ignore it. He cannot ignore it. He does not ignore it. If you watch Bromwich with one corner of his eye on the ball he has dropped at his feet, and the rest of his attention directed to his opponent's return shot from across the net, you will realize that he is forced to sacrifice what every player must have—100 per cent concentration on the return shot and nothing else.

"There is another great disadvantage to the two-handed forehand—it cuts at least three feet off the reach of the one who uses it! And reach is a great factor in tennis.

"If the reader will take his stance with a recquet in his two hands—as Bromwich does on his forehand—and then step off his left foot onto his right just as far as he can, he will find that his racquet reaches a certain distance, and no further; try as he will, strain as he may, he simply cannot extend the tip of his racquet more than a certain distance; the pull of his left hand on the racquet definitely limits his reach.

"If on the other hand he goes through the same procedure with his racquet held firmly in one hand, he will find that, without the restraining pull of his left hand toward his body, he will be able to add at least one yard to his reach; and when, as often happens on "close ones" a single inch may mean the difference between winning and losing a point—and maybe a match or even a world's championship into the bargain—it may easily be seen what a great advantage in reach the one-handed forehand driver holds over two-fisted Jack Bromwich.

"There is one point in the ambidextrous Australian's favor— he uses the flat drive, as advocated by the Tilden system, rather than the topspin drive which is a very delicate bit of work, and must be hit "just so." If Bromwich's forehand stroke had been a topspin looping drive, requiring just so much more exactness of stroking, this drive, combined with his two great faults of dropping his second service ball at his feet and his three-foot handicap in reach, would have doomed him to a place far down in the tennis ranks. That he has gone as far as he has is mainly attributable to his great natural ability and his use of the flat drive.

"Many people, incidentally, wonder why the young Anzac ever started laying two hands onto his forehand drive. The answer is that like his former team-mate, Vivian McGrath, who uses a two-handed backhand, Bromwich was a fine cricket player before his sudden rise in amateur tennis, and his two-handed forehand may aptly be described as a cricket stroke.

"As for Jack's backhand — I wonder if it has ever been said that Bromwich is perhaps the only player in the world—certainly the only topnotcher—who has no backhand at all! When the ball comes to what would be the normal player's backhand, Jack shifts his racquet to his left hand and thus executes a one-handed left-handed forehand drive. Thus Bromwich's only one-handed "forehand" drive is really a "backhand" drive—or is it?"

Stretching 'way out for one that almost gets by. A picture that illustrates a moment when the two-handed grip is a decided handicap. Try doing this with both hands on the racquet. Bobby Riggs is the subject here.

WESTMOUNTS AND ROYALS TO MEET IN GRUDGE GAME

Montreal Squads Not on Good Terms During Training Season

MANY ACCUSATIONS

Westman and Harfield to Line Up With Ted Reeve's Team

By the Canadian Press

As choice a bit of action as any football fan could ask comes up tonight with the "grudge" meeting in Montreal of the Big Four Royals and Westmounts of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

The exhibition meeting between the two Montreal squads has been a natural since it was "talked up" a few weeks ago and a date finally was set. There has been an apparent "lack of love" in both camps and it has been spontaneous—definitely not for build-up purposes.

It all started during the early workouts when both sides accused the other of attempting to steal players. Things came pretty much to a head when Westmount officials announced one day they might have to disband because their dressing quarters had been taken over for military purposes. When the announcement was made officials of Royals said there were only a couple of players from the Westmount team they would consider taking on.

Anxious to Play

An indication of the seriousness with which the players are taking the game can be gained from the fact that snapback Dave Ryan of the Westmounts was out to drill last night although he had been told by a physician to lay off. The physician also told Ryan not to play tonight but the Westmount player says: "I've got to get into that game if it kills me."

Royals will be seeking their second victory in four days for they trimmed McGill Redmen of the Senior Intercollegiate Union 19-2 in an exhibition contest Saturday. The Big Four squad is expected to have Herbie Westman, their lanky kicking ace and lineman Archie Harfield in action for the game against Westmounts.

Westman and Harfield missed the game against McGill, the former because of a cold and the latter because of a knee injury. Royals, however, will be minus Andy Anton, a plunging middle who is suffering from a severe cold, and Leo McCullagh, who suffered a broken collarbone against McGill.

HOCKEY PLAYERS GLAD TO BE HOME

Outbreak of War Upsets Sport Schedules in British Isles

Montreal, Sept. 26 (CP)—Canadian hockey players who planned to play in England this season practically were stranded in London when the outbreak of war upset the sport schedules, according to Harold Dwyer, formerly of Moncton, N.B., and now of Montreal.

Dwyer, who played in an intermediate league here last season, returned to Montreal during the week-end with about twenty other players who had intended to play in the English National Hockey League.

Among the players who returned with Dwyer were Clair Dunsmore and Jimmy Esselmount of Winnipeg, Jimmy Brown of Kirkland Lake and Jo-Jo Graboski of Oshawa, who played with Valleyfield Braves in the Quebec Provincial League last season.

"Gosh, I wouldn't go back there for anything," Dwyer said yesterday. He reached London after war had been declared and said there was nothing to do then but look for ways and means of getting back. He and other players walked the streets and went for bus rides to kill time, he explained, all of them taking care to carry gas masks.

"There's a $15 fine if you're caught without one," Dwyer said.

"They wanted us to join the A. R. P. (Air Raid Precaution), but that would have meant staying for the balance of the war."

Some of the players, including Jimmy Foster, former goalie with Moncton Hawks, took jobs in airplane manufacturing plants, Dwyer said.

The Montrealer said one of the boys, Eddie Wilhelm of Kitchener, Ont., was forced to pay his return fare in order to get back home.

BETTINA GIVEN SOUND TROUNCING BY BILLY CONN

Light - Heavyweight Champion Comes Back in Late Rounds

SAVAGE BOUT

Conn Lost Five Out of First Six Rounds but Closed Gamely

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26 (AP)—Billy Conn of Pittsburgh still is light-heavyweight champion of the world, victor over Mello Bettina of Beacon, N.Y., in a savage 15-rounder last night at Forbes Field.

Billy, however, still does not look ready to fool with the elders of the tribe, the heavyweights. Though the decision of the two judges and referee last night was unanimous, The Associated Press score sheet gave him victory by the narrow margin of eight rounds to seven.

Conn a Game One

Game as a fighting cock, the young Pittsburgher came back after losing five of the first six chapters to whale the ex-champion all over the ring in the latter stages. In the closing round, which probably decided the issue, Billy gave his swarthy, dumpy opponent a furious beating.

But Billy didn't display that heavyweight punch he's been trying to acquire by swigging a quart of milk at every meal. A score of times he tagged Bettina on the whisker with his right, but Mello never looked as if he were going down.

So Conn's next opponent will be Gus Lesnevich, another light-heavy, in November. Before last night Promoter Mike Jacobs had entertained a faint notion of having Billy rest up completely for about six months on Mike's New Jersey estate and see if he couldn't take on 10 or 15 rounds.

Bettina Lacks Class

Bettina might as well forget all about trying to win that title back because he probably came as close to doing it last night as he ever will. In his slightly awkward southpaw way, he carried the fight to Conn practically every minute. He fought courageously and hard as he knew how.

But when the pay-off came in the last two rounds he didn't quite have a champion's class. Conn stepped around him and beat his ears off, completely disregarding the desperate left-hand clouts that Bettina threw. At the finish Mello sported cuts around both eyes while Conn had a gash on one eyebrow.

The fight set a new record for Pittsburgh, 17,532 fans paying $67,892 to see the city's first 175-pound title bout. The previous mark was just over $57,000, set by Vince Dundee and Teddy Yarosz in 1934.

PERFECT RECORD FOR SOUTHWORTH

Fifth Time in the Five Years He Has Managed Wings, Team in Playoffs

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 26 (AP)—For the fifth time in the five years he has managed the Rochester Red Wings, Billy Southworth will lead his team into the Little World series tonight.

The winners of the Governor's Cup in the International League playoffs will face Louisville Colonels, American Association playoff victors, in the annual minor league classic.

Southworth has never known a loser in Rochester. Manager here from 1928 through 1931, he led the Wings to pennants and a little world series engagement each season. He returned this spring to put Rochester in it again.

A meeting between Rochester and Louisville is nothing new. In 1930 Southworth's club met and defeated the Colonels in the post-season series.

Mike Ryba, 20-game winner, is scheduled to take the mound for Rochester in the first game of the three games to be played here. Bill Burwell, managing the Colonels in place of ailing Donie Bush, has named Leroy Parmelee as his starting pitcher.

Rochester finished the International League season in second spot, then eliminated Buffalo and Newark. Louisville finished fourth in the Association and beat Minneapolis and Indianapolis to gain the series berth.

Barring postponements, the teams will spend Friday in travel and conclude the best of seven game series in Louisville.

NEW WRESTLERS SEEN ON CARD

Montreal Promotor Bringing to City Number of High-Class Men

Belleville wrestling fans will be afforded a new wrestling circuit, that is to include new grappling faces never before seen in this section of the country. After an absence of a year, professional wrestling will return to the Hume Arena on Friday night and continue every Friday night henceforth.

Two feature bouts have been included on Friday night's card that brings Rudy Epps, powerful 210 pound wrestler from Columbus, Ohio, in against Joe Maich, former Canadian light heavyweight wrestling champion. Maich won the Canadian title at Winnipeg and later represented Canada at the Olympic games. Since turning professional, however, Maich has confined his grappling efforts along the Pacific Coast. He is a native of Brantford.

In the second main go Ren Gazzley, 185 of Toledo, O., meets Tiger Daniels the Polish lad from Regina who has a reputation of being a pugnacious type grappler. Fundo has been undefeated in his last 30 consecutive bouts, he claims.

The opening bout sees the barefooted Young Griffins of Niagara Falls, meet Alex Piers, of Boston. Both these boys have the reputation of being fast clean and scientific wrestlers, the type of wrestlers who usually please a Belleville grappling audience. The bouts are being arranged through a Montreal promoter, who is anxious to expand his circuit into Ontario and included Belleville in his plans for expansion.

GOLF MATCHES BROUGHT TO END

Lesley Competition Will be Abandoned for Duration of War

Montreal, Sept. 26 (CP)—Postponement of the Lesley Cup matches due to war conditions brings a temporary end—probably for the duration of hostilities—to an international golfing get-together which began in 1927.

An announcement from Boston last night said inability of a Canadian team to compete because of war conditions led to postponement of play for the Cup, won two years ago by a team representing the Province of Quebec Golf Association.

The matches began back in 1905 between the Metropolitan Golf Association of New York and the Massachusetts Golf Association and in 1927 were extended to include an Eastern Canada team. The Pennsylvania Golf Association already had entered the annual competition.

Quebec and Ontario formed the Canadian contingent until 1931, when Ontario dropped out and Quebec continued alone. Since then, Ontario has re-entered the competition only once—in 1934.

The Boston announcement said "the scheduled matches so held without a Canadian team, and under the present circumstances would not constitute Lesley Cup matches in the true sense and spirit in which they have been held in the past."

The two-day matches were to have been held this week-end at Brookline, Mass.

NEW LEADEDS IN O.R.F.U.

Harvey Bamforth

Clary Foran

When the entrants in the 1939 renewal of the O.R.F.U. senior race go to the post on Oct. 7, two of the teams will have new leaders at the helm. Montreal Westmounts (nee Nationals) will be led by Clary Foran, successor to Hoddy Foster, while Peterborough Orfuns are under the guidance of Harvard Bamforth, who took up the reins laid down by Bill Irwin. Both teams are reported to be stronger than last year, with the Montreal squad favored in many quarters to end Sarnia's long reign as champions. The latter will be coached, as usual by Art Massucci, and Toronto's Balmy Beach by Alex Ponton.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association not only knocked down the hockey deadlines and barriers, but leaned over backwards so-much-so we thought they were going to do a right-about-face. To the boys who wear the King's uniform, now we are in a state of war, there will be no hockey residence rule as laid down by the C.A.H.A. The Dominion amateur hockey moguls met over the week end and voted to co-operate with the Federal Government, inasmuch as the Government requested all phases of Canadian sports to continue as usual in order to maintain the morale and spirit of true Canadians during wartime. The C.A.H.A. voted to co-operate in every way and hold itself in readiness to give whatever service the Government may require of it, President Dr. Hardy revealed. The conventional Allan Cup and Memorial Cup series will be conducted in Canada as long as sporting activities do not conflict in any way with the Government's military program. Various wartime regulations were adopted and released by the C.A.H.A.

The wartime hockey measures find the old hockey residence rule completely and entirely suspended for all players engaged in any line of military activities or service. Players may play for more than one team in the same season if, however, they are moved by the military authorities. Any army unit may enter a team in any branch of the C.A.H.A. and that unit will be given a grouping. A few more of the special wartime regulations, as set down by the C.A.H.A. are:

"Any professional player who goes on military service shall, with the consent of the National Hockey League," be allowed to play with or against amateur hockey players.

Clubs which lose players during the season because of enlistment for military service may replace such players up until such time as the club enters the branch playdowns. Replacement in such cases, regardless of residence date, may be secured from these three classes: (1) Players who are engaged in military service and are moved into the district; (2) Players who have not played for any C.A.H.A. club during the season, or (3) Players from any other club in Canada provided such club is willing to grant a release.

The C.A.H.A. has undoubtedly thrown open their doors in full co-operation with the government, and doubtless with the idea in mind to assist, as far as possible, mobilization of Canadian troops. As an example, no doubt the R.C.A.F. (Trenton) will find activities back to normal by the time winter sets in and we expect to find the Flyers in the thick of the O.H.A. hunt. However under the new regulations any hockey player in Canada, who has signed up with the Canadian militia may play with the Air Force, providing he is moved to this district by the Military authorities. Insofar as the civilian clubs are concerned, they are protected to a certain degree, as there is no residence rule in the C.A.H.A. as long as a civilian player obtains a release from the club with which he has played this season. Actually it would appear as though civilian clubs may import players most any time this fall. Actually we expect to see a general scramble for pucksters as the season approaches and don't be surprised what and who you see in a hockey uniform this winter.

No sooner did the Canadian Government issue a request for all sporting organizations to "carry one as usual" than the management of the Hume Arena contacted a Montreal wrestling promoter and arranged to have professional wrestling shows at the Arena every Friday night, commencing this week. A three-bout card has been advertised with a complete set-up of new faces, who have never been seen in this district before. For the initial show they have Rudy Epps, the sturdy Columbus, Ohio, grappler, of 210 pounds, meeting Joe Maich, former Canadian light heavyweight champion in the main attraction.

Similar in weight and balance to regulation wooden bats used in softball games, an aluminum bat has been designed. It has the added advantage of being practically unbreakable. In addition, the manufacturers claim the aluminum-alloy bat has a much longer life, cannot be damaged if left outdoors, and with not warp or splinter.

Newest satellite to blaze along the Cincinnati Reds farm trail is Marvin Rumsey, 22-year-old outfielder at Waterloo (Three-Eye league) whose specialty is stealing bases. On one occasion Rumsey singled and then stole second, third and home. In his first 29 games he swiped 21 bags.

Wilmer Hillock's good pacer, Lastic Grattan, will try to break the track record at Picton on Friday, we have been reliably informed. Hillock drove his Grattan horse to a new track record of 2:04¾ at Kingston last week, when he was presented with an additional $50,00 for his trouble. At Picton Tom Kinney, well known Prince Edward County sportsman, has gone the Kingston horsemen one better and is offering $75.00 to the horse breaking the existing track record at Picton. Lastic Grattan could break the Picton track record just like breaking sticks, providing, however, the Picton Fair Board put their track in racing condition.

After trying to out-box Melio Bettina for five or six rounds, Bill Conn had to change his tactics and step in to outfight Bettina in the last half of last night's light heavyweight championship bout at Pittsburgh and win. Conn retained his title that he wrenched from Bettina last year. Conn proved two things, he can outfight any in his own class, but at boxing Conn didn't prove too much last night. There are those fight experts who are predicting Billy Conn will be the next world's heavyweight champion.

Today marks the opening of the most important major league series to be played in either league this season, the St. Louis Cardinals inaugurate a four-game series to be played in three days, in Cincinnati. Before the series gets under way we find the Reds are enjoying the benefit of a 3½ games lead over the "gas-house gang". The Reds have won their last seven games, which included two sets of doubleheaders and have taken 16 of their last 20 matches. If the Redlegs can split even with the Cardinals in their present series, they're a cinch to meet the Yankees, which prhaps they'll later regret at that.

KINSMEN PLEDGE CO-OPERATION WITH RED CROSS

Affirmation of loyalty of King and Empire and a pledge to co-operate to the fullest extent with Canadian patriotic organizations was given unanimous assent by members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at the opening autumn meeting last night. The resolution which was moved by Kinsman R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., and seconded by Kinsman Jack Allin read: "Resolved that the members of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville pledge themselves to co-operate in every way possible with the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society or other patriotic organizations as fully as possible in all phases of endeavor."

Facing the photograph of His Majesty King George, members standing at attention, gave the resolution their unanimous approval.

Following the reading of the resolution, members immediately swung into action behind their pledge. A committee consisting of Kinsmen Bill Ashline, George Meade, J. Fisher and President Bill Hurst was appointed to formulate plans for the "copper mile" the proceeds of which will be given to the Red Cross. The committee is meeting tonight when final arrangements for the immediate launching of the plan will be laid down.

During the meeting, highlights of the National convention held at St. John were given by delegate President Bill Hurst, who told club men that the National Committee had decided to place Newfoundland's request to join with Canada, to a vote. It was carried unanimously.

Details of the trip to Akron, where Ernest Young, protege of the Ontario Intelligencer and the club won the Canadian Soap Box Derby championship were described by Kinsmen Cleo Colling and Jack Allin.

Members were unanimously in favor of holding the regular Autumn "At Home" in the Trianon ballroom on Oct. 9th, Thanksgiving Day."

WEEP FOR LOVE

by RUBY M. AYRES

"I am referring to him" Elizabeth answered. "He treated Penelope cruelly, and you know he did."

"That's unfair," Barbara protested with heightened color, and Mrs. Selby said soothingly:

"It is quite natural that Elizabeth should defend her sister. I am sure we should all do the same."

"I'm not defending her, Mrs. Selby," Elizabeth said tensely. "I'm accusing him!"

Roy laughed, refusing to see her agitation.

"How often does a girl jilt a fellow, I should like to know?" he demanded. "And does she ever get the blame? Not on your life! But if a man dares to change his mind, he's all sorts of cad, and the girl parades a broken heart for the rest of her life! And with all respects to your sister, my lamb, she can't have made his life one glad sweet song. Save me from a girl with the artistic temperament."

Elizabeth faced him with blazing eyes.

"Mr. Lawless treated Penelope abominably," she cried with concentrated passion. "And if you knew the truth—" And then her anger died as suddenly as it had risen, and there was an eloquent silence until she said humbly:

"I'm sorry—I lost my temper. I'm very sorry—I think I'll go and change my frock."

"Frock!" Barbara echoed unkindly, when she had gone.

"She looks topping in trousers" anyway," Roy declared.

But upstairs in her own room Elizabeth made no attempt to change. She just stood by the window staring blindly into the sunlit garden.

"I wish I could go home," was the uppermost thought in her mind. "I would go, but he would only think I was running away."

And then, although for the past few weeks she had hardly thought of her mother, she suddenly saw her face, and such a wave of longing swept through her heart that she had to shut her eyes tightly and clench her hands to keep back the traitorous tears—for Elizabeth had not yet forgotten how to weep.

X X X

Kim Lawless arrived half an hour before dinner. Elizabeth heard his voice through the quiet evening as she sat curled up in the wide window-seat of the lounge, but she did not raise her eyes or move until Roy, who was with him, said cheerily:

"Here's the old rascal, Elizabeth."

She was forced to look up then and even to smile, and Lawless met her eyes rather grimly, as he said.

"This is indeed an unexpected pleasure. I did not know you would be a fellow guest."

"How do you do," Elizabeth said politely, but she did not offer to shake hands."

"You'd better go and change," Roy was saying. "Dinner in half an hour, and afterwards we're going over to the Beaseleys.' You don't know them, do you? They're quite good scouts."

"I can change in ten minutes."

Elizabeth's eyes followed him as he went up the wide staircase, but her heart was beating quite evenly still, and she could think dispassionately, "You look so nice, Kim! I wonder why you did it?"

Penelope had refused all explanation.

"We quarreled," was all she would say. "And please never speak about him to me again."

But was a quarrel sufficient to separate two people who loved or had loved each other, Elizabeth wondered. Two people who were still husband and wife?

And then a little far-away pain stirred in her heart at the thought of those two being married.

"My wife!" Kim must have said these words—perhaps many times —of Penelope.

"Penny for your thoughts," Roy said suddenly, his eyes dwelling wistfully on her thoughtful face. "I suppose you didn't even know I was anywhere about," he added reproachfully.

She smiled absently.

"I was just—wondering about something," she told him.

"About—what?" he asked. He sat down beside her, as close as he dared.

"I was wondering," she said, and now she spoke flippantly again, "what it must feel like to have been married—and then divorced or separated—and then to come face to face again. Rather a thrill, I should imagine!"

Roy frowned, for like his mother, though perhaps less consciously, the change in Elizabeth troubled him. She had been so sweet and so very much in earnest about life when he first knew her, but now—although he refused to admit it even to himself—he knew she was growing like "the others" as he vaguely classed those girls who had of late faded so far into the background of his memory.

And this evening for the first time he asked himself why it should be. And whether there was something about which she was seriously unhappy?

He loved her very sincerely, but his young awkwardness made it difficult for him to approach her in the way he would have wished—or to try to win her confidence.

She was a gay companion, as a rule, ready to laugh with him, or to enter into any wild prank he suggested, but if he dared to tread nearer or more intimately, it was as if a flower closed its petals against an intrusive hand.

"Don't you think it must be rather a thrill?" she said again. "Would he call her 'darling' as he must have done once upon a time —or how would they behave?"

"I think it's a fool idea," Roy answered bluntly, "and I don't believe in divorce. I think people should stick to a bargain once they've made it."

Elizabeth laughed softly.

"Darling! How very old-fashioned of you," she teased him. "I am really quite shocked."

He answered, still in the same blunt way.

"No, you're not. In your heart you agree with what I say, and you think that a bargain's a bargain. You're just pretending not to!"

He suddenly turned to look at her.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked wistfully. Half the time now you're acting—like someone on the stage! Saying things you don't mean and—and even—sometimes I believe you only laugh so that you won't cry."

He stopped, his color rising in embarrassment. "Now say you hate me!" he challenged her.

But to his surprise Elizabeth suddenly laid her slender hand on his.

"I think I like you better—just as at this moment—than I've ever liked you before," he said, and then, as his fingers impulsively closed rounds hers, she drew her hand away.

"Why are we so serious all at once?" she asked with faint irritation. "It must be the sunset. Look what a glorious sunset there is, just as though the sky has been making up its face with the contents of a most expensive beauty-box!"

INSTALMENT 24.

Roy stood up abruptly.

"Now you're acting again," he said sharply to Elizabeth, and broke off as his sister came running down the stairs.

"Has Kim arrived?" Barbara demanded. "I thought I heard his voice."

Roy had begun to whistle with an air of elaborate indifference, but he stopped to say theatrically:

"Yes, he has come! He has come! Ring the joy-bells! Tell the glad news Our hero has arrived!"

"Idiot!" Barbara said, but she was smiling as she cast a critical glance at herself in a nearby mirror, and then, "Oh look at the sunset!" she cried, and her eyes grew dreamy.

Roy was busily mixing a concoction which he called "Breath of Life" when Lawless came down the stairs.

"Anyone looked at the sunset?" he asked. "It's worth seeing."

"I was just saying how wonderful it is," Barbara told him, and Roy broke in:

"We've all been saying how wonderful it is—in our different ways. Elizabeth called it a painted lady. or words to that effect; and I was driven to remember that there is a form of liquid refreshment which cannot be ignored."

"Elizabeth called it a painted lady, did she?" Lawless said deliberately.

"No, I didn't", she assured coolly. "I said the sky looked as if it had been making up its face with the aid of an expensive beauty-box. Rather a good description, don't you think?"

She met his eyes steadily enough, but hers fell away first, almost as if they were ashamed.

Dinner was announced and Elizabeth slipped her hand through Roy's arm.

"May we go in together?" she enquired gaily. "Or am I still in disgrace?"

He bent down to whisper a reply, and with a comical little smile, Barbara turned to Lawless.

"Shall we do likewise?" she suggested.

He gave her his arm with a mocking bow, and as they crossed the wide hall he asked:

"Is Elizabeth in disgrace?"

Barbara shrugged her shoulders.

"Oh, not really She lost her temper about something, that's all, and she fired up at us all like a tiger-cat, but she didn't really mean it, poor darling. She's always a bit touchy where Penelope is concerned."

"She seems cheerful enough now," he submitted dryly.

"She's all right," Barbara agreed. And then lowering her voice. "But she has altered hasn't she? Though of course, you wouldn't know! Mother was only saying this morning that she would hardly recognize her. Mother thinks it's being in Paris so long."

"I imagine she must have had rather a dull time in Paris."

"I don't think so," Barbara answered "But you can't tell—she talks so wildly—poor Betty!" she added sympathetically.

Lawless glanced down at her.

"Why do you say that?"

"I don't quite know—except that somehow I always feel she isn't happy. Not that she ever complains as a rule she's frightfully gay, but perhaps you'll see what I mean." Then, as if she was anxious to change the subject: "We're going over to the Beaseleys' after dinner. They were here last night, and we had a whale of a time. We didn't go to bed till three."

"It sounds wildly exciting," Lawless said dryly.

He looked at Elizabeth across the the dinner table and quickly away again, but not before he had recognized the picture she made.

The table was lit by candles in heavy silver sconces and the soft light flickered on her vivid face and lovely hair.

She was wearing a white frock, cut square at the neck, with a frilly skirt and a sash of many shades of blue, which fell away in long streamers to the floor, and Lawless suddenly thought of their first meeting in the woods when she had been stealing primroses. Just a child she had seemed to him then, and he remembered the quaint wistfulness of her voice when she said, speaking of the flowers: "I hope they won't mind being taken to London." and again: "....It seems dreadful ever to forget people—some day not to love them any more."

He wondered whether she had ever cared for him—just a little, perhaps—that night when they parted at Dover when she was leaving for Paris.

"I will—ring you up—when I come back from Paris....."

He gave a little start when Roy addressed him.

"Hi, you! I've spoken to you twice and you haven't answered."

Lawless smiled apologetically.

"Sorry—what were you saying?"

"They were talking a lot of nonsense, Kim." Mrs. Selby interposed. "Just arguing that there is no such thing as constancy." She smiled at her son with fond indulgence. "As if you know anything at all about it at your age," she chided him gently.

"He thinks he knows all about it," Barbara said scathingly.

"And what is the argument?" Lawless inquired.

"The argument is," Barbara explained, "that Roy says if you really like someone, it can't make any difference if you don't see them for twenty years—and Elizabeth says that it's all silly rubbish, and that you can forget all about them in twenty weeks."

"Or in six weeks, perhaps," Lawless said quietly.

"There you are!" Elizabeth cried triumphantly. "Mr. Lawless agrees with me, and he ought to know if anyone does."

There was an uncomfortable little silence until Kim asked:

"And why ought I to know?"

Elizabeth met his eyes across the table.

"I mean—you're older than any of us, and so you must have had more experience," she explained lightly. "But it's a silly argument anyway," she laughed. "The sundial in the garden knows all about it when it says that Time makes Love pass away. I suppose Time makes everything pass away, doesn't it?"

She took a chocolate almond from a little dish in front of her and cracked it between her white teeth.

"You're a foolish lot of children," Mr. Selby said calmly from the head of the table, "and when you are older you will be younger."

"Oh, Daddy!" Barbara laughed in affectionate scorn. But he went on philosophically:

"And when you are older, and therefore younger, you will look back and remember the nonsense you talked and the mistakes you made and—perhaps—the opportunities you missed."

Elizabeth laughed and placed a hand dramatically above her heart.

"And the affections we blighted and the hearts we broke" she said. Then she sighed unconsciously. "I wonder if we shall?" she added thoughtfully.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop was reading the news on his way to the sporting page, and ma said, Well Willyum, tomorrow is an important anniversity, but I suppose as far as you remember it's just another passing day of the week.

That's where you wrong me, if the day ever comes when I dont consider your berthday a red letter day, count that day lost, pop said, and ma said, That's very consoling to know, I'm sure, but tomorrow doesn't happen to be my berthday as it happens, it happens to be a slite occasion generelly known as our wedding anniversity.

Well naturally, what do you suppose I was leading up to? pop said, I was just about to say that if there's one event that seems more important in my mind than your berthday it's our wedding anniversity. And what am I going to get you as a memento, that's what's been playing on my mind, he said, and ma said, Why Willyum that's the very subject I was going to bring up, I mean in these serious times we're living in I wouldn't dream of excepting anything frivolous, so I've decided to ask for something substantial and permanent.

Well, let's see, diamonds last a long time, with reasonable care, pop said, and ma said, No, no joolry, absolutely no joolry. How does a mink coat strike you, Willyum, I mean a short one of course with modern square shoulders? she said.

Yee gods, is that your idea of something permanent? pop said, and ma said, Well of course, it would be the first mink coat I ever owned, so I'd remember it all my life, so it couldn't be more permanent than that, as far as I'm concerned, and what's more just think of the glow of relieved sattisfaction with wich I could look back on the many years when a mink coat looked as far away as the other end of a rainbow.

By gollies that's more than permanent, that's retroactive, pop said.

Proberly meaning he'd buy it for her.

Marmora

Marmora—The observance of the Diocesan wide Missionary Sunday special services were held at St. Paul's on Sunday with Rev. A. J. Anderson of the parish of Marysburg in Prince Edward County, officiating. At the morning service an impressive sermon was based on Titus 3-1 "Put them in mind to be ready to every good work." The soloist was Mrs. Percy Gray who rendered "Hope for the dawn." In the evening the discourse was on the story of the four lepers who entered the abandoned Syrian camp in the days of Elisha, who after satisfying the pangs of hunger said "We do not well This is a day of good tidings and we hold our peace." A continued harvest and missionary service was held at Holy Trinity Church in the afternoon. Mrs. L. R. Rundle, organist at St. Pauls presided at the organ. Mrs. P. Gray rendered "Hope for the dawn". A trio comprising Mrs. P. Gray, Mrs. C. Nichol and Mr. W. J. Cottrell rendered "To thee O Lord our hearts we raise." Rev. A. J. Anderson delivered an appropriate message. The church was artistically decorated for the occasion with the emblems of the harvest.

Get 22 Pound Fish

The fine weather on Sunday morning drew many anglers from Marmora to the waters of Crowe Lake where some were amply repaid for their efforts. Ben Regis and Henry Empey were not long on the lake when Ben hooked a beauty which later was found to weigh eighteen pounds. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wright who have been residing in the building on Booster Park for the greater part of the summer also were out early on Sunday morning trying their luck. Their boat was but a short distance from that of the other two fishermen as Ben hauled in his catch and soon Mr. and Mrs. Wright drew alongside to admire the prize. As the two boats parted, Mrs. Wright was soon aware of the fact that there was a big one on her line and great was her surprise to find it was larger than the one she had admired a few moments before. It weighed twenty-two pounds. The two fish were caught near Cedar Point and Mrs. Wright's fish was probably the largest taken from Crowe Lake this year.

Huff's Island

Huff's Island—Mr. and Mrs. E. McQuoid were afternoon and supper guests of Mr. G. and Miss J. Huff on Sunday.

Miss Marion Wallbridge spent the week end with Miss Frances Wallbridge.

An interesting shower was given Saturday evening, Sept. 16th at the home of Miss Frances Wallbridge for the bride-to-be, Miss Lottie Wallbridge. Those in attendance were girls of the Island, also Misses Jean and Hilda Morton. The shower was given in the form of a treasure hunt with cups and saucers as the trove. When all had been retrieved Miss B. Fairman read and address to which the recipient made a graceful reply. A delicious lunch was served after which the party dispersed wishing the bride-to-be much happiness.

Silo filling was in order last week, weather conditions being ideal for that work.

Mrs. Fairman, Sr., spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. A. Munroe, Crofton.

Mrs. T. and Miss O. Nightingale with their guest Miss O. Barr spent a recent afternoon and supper hour with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Nobes, Wallbridge.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—Traders were interested in selected industrials and the western oil stocks through the early hour of the session on Toronto exchange today and prices were marked to show index gains at noon. Golds held steady and the base metal stocks lost ground. Trading was fairly active and 325,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

The market quieted down in the early afternoon and the oils forfeited some of their early gains. Home, Okalta and Anglo-Canadian still held to the up side. C.P.R., Massey-Harris, Hamilton Bridge and Canada Steamship Lines attracted buyers and these issues boarded substantial gains. C.P.R. sold at 7 5-8, its best price of the year.

Golds were mainly steady and in the base metal group, prices were off slightly for Nickel, Waite-Amulet and Pend Oreille.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Stock Market corkscrewed about today and some leaders dropped fractions to a point while others picked up fractional advances. Shares were off at the start and activity remained at about yesterday's volume. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 1,300,000 shares.

Persistent offerings pushed Stock Market prices lower today with pivotal issues down fractions to around a point at their worst. Near the fourth hour prices were mixed.

Only the rails displayed signs of strength and they showed modest gains.

Backward most of the time were General Motors, International Harvester, American Telephone, American Smelting, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison, Johns-Manville, Western Union, Goodyear and Standard Oil of N.J.

Among carriers, the most resistant were Norfolk & Western, Santa Fe, N.Y. Central and Chesapeake & Ohio. Narrow were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Pathe and Celanese.

Fractional gains were scored by C.P.R., Hiram Walker and Lake Shore in the Canadian division. Dome, McIntyre, Porcupine and Distillers shaded lower. Dominion 4s lost nearly a point in the bond market.

Toronto, Sept. 26—Prices continued to edge higher for butter at Toronto Monday, with churning cream reflecting the rise in these two commodities by advancing 1c. Eggs remained quiet.

CAR DOOR OPENS WOMAN INJURED

Mrs. Edgar Vermilyea Suffers Minor Cuts When She Falls Out

Hurled out of the car in which she was riding when the door suddenly opened while travelling at an estimated speed of fifty miles an hour, Mrs. Jennie Vermilyea, wife of Edgar Vermilyea, 264 Front Street, suffered only minor abrasions and lacerations. Mrs. Vermilyea was brought to Belleville General Hospital where her condition was reported as being good today by Dr. G. H. Stoble, attending physician.

The accident occurred while Mrs. Vermilyea was riding in the car near Stirling. In some manner the handle of the door became unfastened and Mrs. Vermilyea was swept out of the car as wind threw the door back. She was thrown to the highway, fortunately suffering only minor injuries.

MICKEY McDONALD GIVEN NEW TRIAL

Court of Appeals Quashes Murder Conviction and Orders New Trial

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeals today quashed the murder conviction against Donald (Mickey) McDonald and ordered a new trial for him on the charge of slaying James Windsor, Toronto bookmaker.

McDonald, 31, was convicted by a Supreme Court jury May 20. At the same time, his 19-year-old brother, Alex, charged jointly with the crime, was acquitted.

Windsor, 47 years old, was found shot to death in his home in North Toronto on the night of January 7.

Mickey McDonald at first was sentenced to be hanged July 20, but the date later was advanced pending the appeal.

When the jury returned its verdict last May, Mickey McDonald shouted: "I've been framed by the Toronto Police Department".

The appeal was heard on Sept. 11, 12 and 13 by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson and Justices Middleton, Masten, Fisher and Henderson.

The five Judges were unanimous for a new trial.

The Chief Justice said some things might have happened at the trial that would prejudice the jury.

He stated, however, that there was "sufficient evidence upon which the appellant might be properly convicted and upon all the evidence it was open to the jury, without inconsistency, to acquit one of the accused and convict the other."

TRIPARTITE PACT STILL EFFECTIVE

Further Depreciation of Pound Would Add to Cost of Imports to Britain

London, Sept. 26 (AP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, assured a questioner in the House of Commons today that the tripartite monetary agreement among Great Britain, France and the United States still is operating.

Another questioner was reminded by Sir John that the difference between the pound and the dollar rate in New York and the official rate in London had narrowed to one per cent.

Sir John suggested that any additional "depreciation of the pound sterling inevitably would tend to involve increases in the cost of imported materials from foreign countries and a consequent increase in the cost of living."

Still another point stressed by the Chancellor was that no delay will be permitted in requiring the surrender of foreign exchange by private individuals as well as firms and holding companies for British pound at official rates.

Fire Damages Ridley St. Residence

Breaking out in some mysterious manner between the walls and ceiling of the first floor of a house owned by Frank Lent, and occupied by John Baker, Sr., on Ridley Street, fire caused considerable damage to the structure before it was gotten under control by city fire squads shortly before noon today.

Residents of the house who were home at the time are at a loss to account for the origin of the blaze. Deputy Fire-Chief Gerald Vance stated today that blazes broke out in separated parts of the house almost simultaneously. Fire was confined to air-spaces between walls and sheeting, and the ceiling of the lower storey and the floor of the upper part.

No electric wiring was apparent near the scenes of the outbreaks, he said. Damage was done by flames to the kitchen and dining room while upstairs quarters suffered water and smoke damage.

NINETEEN OF ATHENIA CREW LOST LIVES

Gasgow, Sept. 26 (CP Cable)—Nineteen crew members of the liner Athenia, including Hannah Baird, a stewardess from Verdun, Que., lost their lives when the vessel was torpedoed Sept. 4, operators of the liner announced today.

Blow-and-Toe Engagement Seen On 'Dawn Patrol'

New York, Sept. 26. — (CP) — After months of comparative calm, hostilities flared in New York's Night Club sector early today with George White, Toronto-born theatrical producer, and Sid Solomon, former cabaret operator, as the belligerents. The setto was brief and the Stork Club the scene.

White's right fist scored a bull's eye on Solomon's chin—only blow of the engagement—so he was adjudged the winner. Solomon picked himself from the floor and headed for the door. White assisted his exit with a well-timed boot.

Cause of the blow-and-toe engagement obscure. According to White he was sitting at a ringside table with a young lady who was making her first round with the "Dawn Patrol". Solomon, he said, sat down at the table without invitation and then tossed a whisky sour in his (White's) face.

"So I stood up and let him have it", said White, entertainer on Toronto ferry boats before he broke into the musical extravaganza business as producer of "White's Scandals".

Solomon was not immediately available for comment.

White enjoys a measure of renown as an amateur pugilist. He holds a decision over Rudy Vallee, who mixes considerable fighting with his band leading and crooning.

Socks and Pyjamas Being Turned in by Red Cross Workers

Full Instructions for Knitting and Pyjama Making Now Available

Indicative of the generous response shown by women and various organizations of the city who have affiliated their efforts with those of the Red Cross Branch here, are the number of completed articles such as socks and pyjamas that have already been returned to branch headquarters, President Irvine Hefkey said today.

One hundred and sixty pounds of yarn for the knitting of socks and 785 yards of flannelette have been distributed to workers thus far and supplies are going out every day, he added.

For the information of potential workers, Mr. Hefkey stated, full instructions for knitting and patterns for the making of pyjamas and other garments are now available at the distributing centre above Shaw's Men's Furnishing Store on Front Street. Mrs. F. S. Lazier is in charge and will willingly give all information necessary.

For further information, it takes approximately three-quarters of a pound of yarn to make two pairs of socks, Mr. Hefkey said.

Organization of various city and district societies is going on apace, wth rural organizations falling in line with their city cousins. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is organizing tonight. Mr. Hefkey and Mrs. Lazier will address the gathering.

NAVAL FIRING

Eight or 10 merchant vessels hastened toward shore during the engagement, which started just 24 hours after another naval action was believed to have begun off the Norwegian coast a little farther north. Gunfire today could be heard plainly at Lister Fjord.

Admiralty Has No Report

Some sources at Oslo said the ships may have been trying to reach those engaged in yesterday's battle—if it was a battle.

(The British Admiralty said last night it had no reports of any naval battle off Norway "as would have been the case had one taken place.")

The newspaper Gula Tidend of Bergen said British and German warships took part in yesterday's reported encounter, during which sounds of what was believed to be gunfire were heard for about 12 or 13 hours. Residents of that area said all was quiet today and there was no evidence of any crippled ships.

The Norwegian Admiralty discounted reports there was any connection between yesterday's sounds resembling gunfire and the ships reported seen manoeuvring off shore.

An official statement said dynamiting in necessary works on islands caused the sounds and concussions which shook some houses in the vicinity.

The Oslo Aftenposten reported Norwegian warships were en route to Lister to investigate today's reports of naval action.

RUMANIA ASSURED RUSSIA TO BE NEUTRAL

Bucharest, Sept. 26—(CP-Havas)—The Rumanian Government today said Bucharest had received formal neutrality assurances from the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, informed N. Dianu, Rumanian Minister at Moscow, that relations between the two countries would continue to be based on perfect neutrality, a government spokesman declared.

CONVOYS

1. With a naval convoy system which now is operating for outgoing and incoming shipping.

2. The arming of all merchant vessels and liners with defensive armament, and

3. With attacks on the U-boats themselves by destroyers and aircraft,

Mr. Churchill admitted serious losses due to U-boat attacks in the first week of war but declared that undefended British ships were attacked at the outbreak of hostilities "by lurking U-boats carefully posted beforehand."

"We replied in two ways—first by a convoy system which could be quickly put into effect for outgoing ships but was more difficult for homeward bound vessels. This is now in full operation both ways.

German Submarine Losses Heavy

"Our second reply to the U-boat attack is to arm all our merchant vessels and fast liners with defensive armaments against both U-boats and airplanes. For the first three weeks of war armed ships have been continually leaving the harbors in large numbers.

"A third reply is of course, the British attack on the U-boat. This is being delivered with the utmost vigor and intensity.

"By the end of October we expect to have three times the hunting force which was operating at the outbreak of war."

He added that the six or seven submarines already destroyed "is 1-10th of the German submarine fleet or one-quarter or possibly one-third of the U-boats actively employed" by Germany.

More Tonnage Seized Than Lost

"In the first fortnight of war we have seized and converted to our own use 67,000 tons more German merchandise than have been sunk in our ships," he said.

"In the first week we lost 65,000 tons, the second week 46,000 tons, the third week 21,000 tons. In the last six days—just 9,000 tons."

Mr. Churchill went on to declare that one submarine commander who had sent him a personal message by the crew of a sunken ship 'is now in our hands.'

He praised the fleet, air, army and the Royal Air Force alike for playing parts "in this stern warfare" against undersea attackers.

U-Boats After Neutral Shipping

The members roared and cheered when Mr. Churchill declared: "The U-boats now seem to prefer neutral shipping to our own."

Explaining for the first time how the aircraft carrier Courageous became vulnerable to a U-boat attack which sent her to the bottom of the sea with more than 500 dead nine days ago, Mr. Churchill declared:—

"The Courageous was attended by four destroyers but two had to go and hunt a U-boat which was attacking merchant shipping.

"When the Courageous turned into the wind at dusk to enable her own aircraft to land on her deck, by a 100-to-one chance she was attacked by a U-boat on an unpredictable course.

"Our Confidence Grows"

"But this stroke of war in no way diminishes our confidence in methods which are now at our disposal. Our confidence has grown with every day they have been employed."

Detailing gains from Britain's contraband control system as compared with losses from U-boat warfare, Mr. Churchill said, "Even in oil, where we were unlucky in losing tankers, we have lost 60,000 tons in the first fortnight and have gained 50,000 from the enemy apart from the enormous stores we have brought safely into the country in the ordinary way."

67,000 TONS

co-ordinating and perfecting arrangements to be made by the two governments on the question of munitions and supplies."

Warns of Over-Optimism.

Referring to the work of the Ministry of Economic Warfare, the Prime Minister sounded a note of warning against hopes for an early collapse of the German economic structure.

"Germany already possesses stocks of varying size of raw materials which she requires to import and quick results cannot therefore be expected from the Ministry of Economic Warfare," he said.

"But our command of the seas means that from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply and figures for the first fortnight of war show that we have seized 256,000 tons of goods of contraband consigned to Germany. These include 62,000 tons of petroleum products, 65,000 tons of iron ore and 37,000 tons of manganese ore."

The First Lord of the Admiralty also sounded a warning—a warning aganst false optimism based on the navy's successes against the first attack by German submarines. The first attack had been beaten back but another could be expected, possibly combined with aircraft surface ships against convoys.

Germany Loses Submarines.

However, in the first three weeks of war one-tenth of the German's fleet of submarines had been destroyed and at least one-third of all U-boats known to be on the high seas.

By the end of October the navy will have three times as large a hunting force as it had at the outbreak of hostilities and the shipyards are running at capacity to turn out new shipping to make up for losses. He felt extremely hopeful that the menace of the U-boat could be mastered but he was quite resigned to hearing of more losses in months to come.

Mr. Churchill disclosed that two destroyers escorting the aircraft carrier Courageous had turned aside to hunt a big German submarine when the big vessel was torpedoed by a U-boat Sept. 17. Four destroyers had accompanied the 22,500-ton carrier but two of them had left her side shortly before she turned into the wind at dusk to permit her planes to land on deck.

Sinking of Courageous.

At that moment when the ship offered an excellent target a German submarine commander took full advantage of his 100-to-1 chance and sent the big ship to the bottom with the loss of 518 officers and men.

Mr. Churchill, after saying the convoy system was in operation and that merchant ships all over the world were being armed to fight off submarines and airplanes, declared:

"So far as the submarine is concerned the British Empire and all its friends in every quarter of the globe will be able to develop their immeasurable latent forces and their man power can be concentrated in ever growing intensity on the task we have in hand, in which task we have only to persevere to conquer."

Co-ordination of Plans

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that last Friday's allied war council in England resulted in agreement "on procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting" munitions and supplies plans by Great Britain and France.

In his fourth "war report" to the House, the Prime Minister also referred anew to the effects of the Russian invasion of Poland, but said Soviet troops apparently had not yet "occupied all the territory alloted to them under the arrangement (with Germany) which amounts to more than half the total area of the Polish Republic."

He called particular attention to the fact that the German-Soviet line of Demarcation running through the middle of Poland "brings the Soviet forces up to the suburbs of Warsaw and leaves the Polish oil fields in Soviet control."

Mr. Chamberlain then declared that "supplies of finished munitions, raw materials and foodstuffs from the Dominions are being made available in ever increasing volume for the common cause."

Warns Against Over-Optimism

But the Prime Minister warned against over-optimism as to choking off Germany's supplies.

"Germany already possesses stocks of raw materials which she requires to import and quick results therefore cannot be expected from the (British) Ministry of Commercial Warfare," he said.

Nevertheless, he continued, if Britain through this Ministry "can prevent Germany from importing raw materials essential for the functioning of her war industries the result will be to cripple effectively her power to prolong hostilities."

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that "our command of the sea meant that from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply, and figures for the first three weeks of war show that we have seized about 256,000 tons of goods, as to which there was evidence that they were contraband consigned to Germany."

"These include some 62,000 tons of petroleum products, 65,000 tons of iron ore and 27,000 tons of manganese ore," he added.

Brands German Claims 'False'

He branded as false the German claims that the British contraband control would have no effect on Germany but would merely strangle neutral trade.

"The facts speak for themselves," he said, "and neutral opinion will, I am sure, make its own comparison between our clearly defined policy on the one hand and on the other the thinly veiled menaces of Germany toward neutrals, menaces which in the past few days have been translated into action by the sinking of three neutral ships under circumstances constituting a clear breach of international law."

have been greatly accomplished . .

"This ministry of information has three separate functions—

1—To censor news. This it does stupidly. Witness today's muddle.

"2—To prepare propaganda. This is unprintable trash.

"3—To transmit news from the government especially from the defence ministries. If some 'sealed lips' in a Sam Browne belt holds up that news, the ministry of information can do nothing but bleat protest . . . . .

"News is the lifeblood of a free people and we are not fighting a big Hitler on the Rhine only to set up little Hitlers here."

The National Council of Labor in a statement said it was "deeply dissatisfied with the ministry information and British Broadcasting company regarding the supply and release of news and information.

Criticism of the censorship was voiced in the House of Commons during the afternoon and brought from a government spokesman the statement that of 999 employees of the ministry of information only 43 were "professional journalists".

Sir Edward Grigg, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry, said "the minister of information realizes that the situation requires investigation".

Shells Hurled Across Rhine To Break Up Concentrations Of German Troops in Area

French and British Planes Play Major Role in Detecting New Dispositions of the German Forces

NEAR SWISS BORDER

Believe German Army May Attempt to Cross Rhine Below Black Forest at Extreme Southern End of Maginot Line

By JOHN MARTIN

Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 26—(AP)— French artillery continued today to hurl shells across the Rhine River in an effort to break up new German troop concentrations reported north of the Swiss border.

A General Staff communique reported German batteries likewise were active southeast of Zweibruecken, near the left centre of the western front. New combats between French and German fighting planes were noted, but no details were given.

Advices from the front said the combined French and British Air Forces had played a major role in detecting new dispositions of the German troops.

French sources speculated that reported German concentrations near the Swiss border might presage a possible attempt to cross the Rhine below the Black Forest, at the extreme southern end of the Maginot Line. These sources said, however, that such an attempt would be hazardous because of heavy French forces stationed near Belfort.

Mass Large Numbers

French military men estimated that as a sequel to the occupation of Poland, the Germans might soon be able to mass from 100 to 110 divisions on the western front. This would compare, they said, to Germany's western strength in the last war of about 240 divisions. (A German division is composed of approximately 12,000 men.)

The French reported last night that their air forces had defeated a German air force in two air battles which preceded yesterday's bombardment of the German Westwall.

The dispatches said the French lost two planes in the engagement, but declared the Germans, though superior in numbers, were believed to have suffered heavier losses. One German plane fell behind French lines, it was said, and observers reported they saw other German ships plunge to earth in flames.

100-Mile Front.

During the heavy artillery action yesterday, the French said, their batteries swept German hill defences along a 100-mile front between the Moselle and Rhine rivers.

French infantry movements in the Saar river sector, which accompanied the bombardment, were said to have had the dual objective of establishing new artillery positions and seizing prisoners. An undisclosed number of captured German soldiers were reported taken back to Thionville for questioning.

The French said the entire area north of the Saar river between Merzig in the west and Saarbruecken in the east was threatened by their artillery replacements.

Coincident with the action in the Saar river sector, French forces struck at German positions in the Haardt mountains, which stretch along a 20-mile front between the German town of Pirmasens and the French town of Wissembourg.

An Active Defence.

The French attack in the sector, one of the most difficult on the entire northern flank of the front, was described by military men as "an active defence".

In the diplomatic field, France and Great Britain pressed efforts to learn the full significance of Soviet Russia's intervention in Poland. The French Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, Auguste Champetier de Ribes, conferred yesterday with Russian Ambassador Jakob Surits. The outcome of the talks was not disclosed.

Obituary notices for fallen French soldiers appeared in increasing numbers in the press.

French Prowess

(By Lucien Romier)

Paris, Sept. 26 (CP-Havas)—Aerial activity over German territory both in reconnaissance flights and in direct combat with enemy planes, has demonstrated the excellence of French fliers and their machines.

The Air Force has been especially valuable in aiding the heavy artillery which has moved up for deeper penetration of the enemy lines and has scored effective hits on the Westwall defences.

Attacks by German advance troops against the first-line French positions have slackened in the last few days But Nazi artillery fire has been kept up incessantly. notably in the Zweibruecken zone, where French progress has disturbed the enemy because the new lines afford strong points either for observation or further attack.

Until a few days ago, the real line of operations was practically limited to the 120-mile front between the Rhine and the Moselle, at the gateways to the Palatinate and the Saar In the last two days, however, artillery action has begun on the upper Rhine.

SAFE AFTER TORPEDOING AND SWAMPING

This picture was made from the deck of the S.S. American Farmer, showing a lifeboat from the S.S. Kafiristan as it approached safety, bearing some of the 35 members of the crew of the Kafiristan which had been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. When the lifeboat shown here was launched by the sinking vessel, it was swamped in the sea and six men were lost.

Communiques Issued By Belligerent Nations

Paris, Sept. 26—(CP—Havas)—This morning's communique from the French General Staff said:—

"There was persistent activity by enemy artillery southeast of Zweibruecken. During the day our pursuit planes opposed German pursuit planes in several combats."

WARSAW AGAIN BOMBED

Berlin, Sept. 26—(AP)—A German army communique issued today said:—

"In the east, movement toward the demarcation line was continued. Only to the eastward of the lower course of the San River were three short fights with scattered parts of the enemy, in the course whereof 2,000 prisoners were taken by an armored division.

"After all efforts failed at convincing the Polish commander of the gruesomeness and uselessness of resistance in Warsaw, fighting operations against the city were begun yesterday.

"Mokotowski Fortress was taken in a surprise attack, and thereafter a part of the suburb of Moktow was captured.

"In the west, there was artillery and barrage fire and minor scouting troop activities. French planes, which were unmistakably recognized as such, flew over Belgian territory. In air fights five French planes and two captive balloons were shot down. Anti-aircraft guns shot down one French plane."

PLANES RETURN SAFELY

London, Sept. 26—(CP)—The Air Ministry announced today that Royal Air Force planes in reconnaissance and leaflet-dropping flights over Germany yesterday fought off German attack planes and returned safely to their bases.

The text of the announcement follows:—

"Royal Air Force aircraft again carried out successful reconnaissances over the Western Front and northwest Germany during yesterday.

"Attacks by enemy fighters were driven off, and our aircraft returned safely to their bases.

"Last night further reconnaissance flights were carried out over Germany in the course of which leaflets were dropped. All our aircraft have landed safely."

200,000 SOLDIERS DIE IN CENTRAL CHINA ACCORDING TO REPORT

Shanghai, Sept. 26—(AP)— Chinese and Japanese reports today estimated 200,000 soldiers had been killed in the current Japanese drive on Changsha in south central China.

Japanese said their forces had advanced to within 25 miles of Changsha. Earlier Chinese reports said the Japanese had been repulsed 60 miles from the city.

Each side asserted it had killed 10,000 soldiers.

Advices from Foochow, on the coast, at the same time said that at least 1,000 persons were killed or wounded last week during Japanese bombings of northern Fukien province.

Montreal, Sept. 26 (CP)— The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association at a meeting last night granted permission to Quebec Castors and teams from St. Hyacinthe and Verdun to play in the Provincial Senior Hockey League this season.

The association also voted to allow Cornwall Flyers the switch from the P.S.H.L. to the Quebec Senior Hockey League, which granted them a franchise a few weeks ago.

ONT. MAY BECOME ARSENAL OF B. E.

Premier Hepburn States Province Has Unlimited Resources

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 26 (CP)—Ontario, with its huge manufacturing plants and unlimited natural resources, may well become the arsenal for the British Empire, Premier Hepburn said in an address before 200 manufacturers, merchants and civic officials here last night.

"British industry may be destroyed overnight if Germany smashes through Belgium with her great air strength," declared Mr. Hepburn. "But Canada and Ontario, situated strategically as it is in the heart of the Dominion, is ready."

The Premier declared that resources committee, comprising himself, Lieut.-Governor Albert Matthews and Conservative Leader George Drew, is prepared to go to Ottawa at any time to confer with Dominion officials regarding this objective.

"And when we get some idea of what we can do, it is proposed to call a meeting of industrialists of other provinces and carry on with their assistance."

Premier Hepburn said establishment of Ontario's industrial independence in wartime and maintaining for the Empire valuable sources of production in steel had been effected in part by development of the lignite fields of Northern Ontario.

Unlimited Supplies

This development had opened up an area which had unlimited supplies of coal, he said.

The Premier said threat of an attack on Canada from the Pacific was as real as it was on the Atlantic. Millions of men from the conquered sections of China were ready to join with the Japanese for the "yellow conquest of the Pacific."

"It is no use to attempt to minimize the developments across the Pacific because they are realities that are a menace to Canada," he asserted.

"The province is now prepared to take on a warlike atmosphere in defence of freedom and liberty. We still value human life and liberty above everything else and we must stand shoulder to shoulder, prepared to make any sacrifice to bring peace, harmony and justice once more to this troubled old world."

FRED COOPER, MARMORA, KILLED

63-Year-Old Resident Hit by Car While Walking Along No. 7 Highway

Marmora, Ont., Sept. 25 (Specal)—Fred Cooper, 63-year-old resident of Marmora Township, was instantly killed on Highway No. 7 one and one-half miles west of this village yesterday morning after being struck by an automobile said by police to be owned and driven by Walter S. Leal of Tweed.

Cooper died almost instantly from multiple fractures of the skull after being hurled a distance of fourteen feet by the impact.

He was walking on the south side of the highway in a westerly direction while the Leal car was travelling east. Leal told investigating officers, H.T.O. Hatch and Chief Constable Percy Gray that he did not see Cooper in time to avoid the accident.

A preliminary inquest was held yesterday at the funeral home of F. N. Marett, and was adjourned until Wednesday. Coroner Dr. F. Eagleson was in charge.

Cooper leaves a widow and one son and a daughter, and had resided with a brother.

All Foreign Securities Must Be Paid for In Foreign Exchange

Ottawa, Sept. 26 (CP)—An amendment to the order-in-council creating the Foreign Exchange Control Board, designed to make sure all foreign securities sold or transferred by a Canadian resident to a non-resident are paid for in Foreign Exchange unless the Board otherwise provides, was announced last night by Finance Minister Ralston.

Even though a non-resident buyer of foreign securities from a resident of Canada is able to pay for them with Canadian dollars, the amendment provides that payment must be in Foreign Exchange unless the Board grants a permit to the seller to take Canadian funds.

The amendment effective on and from Sept. 26, 1939, adds the following subsection 2 to section 17 of the order:

" (2) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this order, no foreign securities may be sold or transferred by a resident to a non-resident otherwise than for payment in Foreign Exchange or unless the Board otherwise provides."

AT THE BELLE

"These Glamour Girls"

Joe College and the debutante glamour girls hold forth in all their glory in "These Glamour Girls", new comedy drama of collegiate life, with Lew Ayres and Lana Turner which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. The picture is eventful in many ways but foremost is the fact that it brings to the screen in her first top billing role redheaded, talented Lana Turner. Public reaction to the performances of this dynamic little beauty in "Calling Dr. Kildare" and "Rich Man, Poor Girl" has been responsible for the elevation of Miss Turner and, according to rumblings around the studios, we may expect another star of the cinematic horizon in practically no time. "These Glamour Girls" is the story of a dime-a-dance hostess who accepts the invitation of a drunken college boy to attend the college week-end parties, an annual ceremonial of Kingsford University, and finds herself faced by a pralanx of Park Avenue deputantes who declare social war upon her because she is not one of their kind. The taxi dancer accepts the challenge and walks off with all the honors. Ayres, who invited her, falls in love with her and she with him. But through feminine strategy, Ayres' engagement to another girl is announced and Miss Turner, heart-broken, runs away. The sudden news that Ayres' father has been arrested for embezzlement puts a different complexion on the situation. The girl to whom Ayres is engaged turns him down. It is the taxi dancer to whom he turns and they find love together. If the cast of "These Glamour Girls" is a criterion, the picture is rightly named. M-G-M virtually cornered the Hollywood market on the younger glamour girls. Besides Miss Turner, there are in the picture Jane Bryan, Anita Louise, Marsha Hunt, Ann Rutherford, Mary Beth Hughes and a couple of hundred incidental G. G.'s. On the male side, lending support to the cause of Getchell, are Tom Brown, Richard Carlson, Owen Davis, Jr., Sumner Getchell, Peter Hayes, Don Castle and Tom Collins.

"6,000 Enemies" Gripping.

Highlighted by one of the most stirring, vicious fights seen in motion pictures since the famous battle of "The Spoilers", "6,000 Enemies" is announced as the companion feature attraction. A strong cast, headed by Walter Pidgeon in his most dramatic role to date, and rising young Rita Johnson, bring forcefully to life the story of the pitfalls that lie in wait for the crusading forces of law and order.

George B. Seitz directed the thriller, and others in the cast supporting Pidgeon and Miss Johnson are Paul Kelly, Harold Huber and Grant Mitchell. The popular Belle overseas newsreel will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Golden Boy"

From Hollywood, home of motion pictures and superlatives, there is coming to the McCarthy theatre screen this week a motion picture of so stirring a dramatic impact that it has left its preview audiences groping for new descriptive phrases. The film is Columbia's "Golden Boy," screen version of Clifford Odets' internationally-acclaimed stage success, with Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden starred.

Adroitly combining drama, color, characterization and romance, "Golden Boy" is the stark, thrilling story of a youth with the sensitive soul of a musician who abandons his heart in order to win fame and fortune as a prize-ring champion. The tremendous emotional upheaval, the tense conflict which results with the boy's efforts to convince himself that he is doing right, are said to be among the most absorbing experiences ever captured by a camera.

In preparation and production for more than a year and a half, "Golden Boy" has aroused more discussion than any picture in recent years. It's carefully chosen cast include two newcomers to the screen, one of whom is the hero of the most amazing success story ever known to Hollywood.

Hailed as Find

He is William Holden, 21-year-old college student, who received the name role of "Golden Boy" after Columbia had interviewed and screen-tested more than 3,000 candidates for the role, in a nation-wide and year-long talent quest. That Columbia's insistence upon an "ideal" actor for the role has been rewarded goes, according to advance report, without saying. Hollywood has hailed Holden as the greatest screen find of the past five years.

Barbara Stanwyck and Adolphe Menjou are starred with Holden Miss Stanwyck as Lorna Moon, disillusioned woman of the world, Menjou as a sauve, smart fight manager.

Lee J. Cobb, for ten years a familiar Broadway actor, makes his screen debut in the sympathetic part of Mr. Bonaparte, a role he had played on both the New York and London stage.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Disciplining a Child

There is one point with regard to the punishment—and I may have mentioned this before—no child should ever be disciplined with idle threats. Never try to make him behave himself by telling him such things as "I'll give you to the policeman if you do that."

These are idle threats and the child knows it. He sees that they aren't carried out. So the result is not only that he no longer pays any attention to these threats, but your whole control of him has been undermined. On the other hand, you have built up within him a fear of the policeman, or the doctor, or the dentist. Later, when these people begin to figure in his life; when you have to bring your child to these people, you will find that you have a very frightened child on your hands.

I think the first rule in punishment is consistency. If you don't give the child the promised punishment when he misbehaves, you soon find yourself with no control over him. For instance, many children always misbehave when visitors are present simply because they discovered that they won't be punished then. So it is well to have some brand of punishment that can be inflicted no matter who is present.

Some children cannot understand the taboos that are placed around them by their parents. They are told they must not cross the street because they may be hit by a car. But the child can't understand that. He has no fear of cars. Why, he goes riding in daddy's car and he can't understand how any car would hurt him! So he has to be told again and again how dangerous it is to cross the street. Then if he disobeys these instructions he must be punished.

The number of questions a child can ask his parents is one of the wonders of the world. Parents are very foolish to disregard or try to avoid answering these questions. There isn't any faith on earth quite as complete as a child's faith in his father and mother, and this faith shouldn't be made light of. Not only that; every time you turn aside a child's question, you miss an opportunity of educating him. Remember, it is the person with a healthy curiosity that makes the interesting, intelligent adult.

Every time you make light of one of your child's questions you lose some of the faith your child has in you. It is easier to lose than it is to regain. So don't be impatient with the child, for his desire to know things is a good trait, even though he can never keep in his little mind all the things you tell him. Don't be short with a child even when he asks the same question time and again. Of course, a child sometimes has a way of asking embarrassing questions when others are around. When this happens don't scold the child; pass the question off as graciously as you can. Later you can show him that there are some things which should not be discussed in public.

A child should never be laughed at for any honest effort. If he is derided often enough, one of two things will happen. Either he will become quiet and not talk much, refraining from asking questions and thus getting the information he should have, or he will enjoy being laughed at and will go out of his way to get laughs.

Remember that each day brings intriguing new problems to your child, and when he asks questions he is trying to solve them. It is your duty to help him.

'Financial Problems Which Confront Germany Are Infinitely Greater,' Says Sir John Simon in Budget Speech—Income Tax for Next Full Fiscal Year in Britain 37.5 Per Cent, He Declares

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 27—(CP Cable) — Sir John Simon in his emergency budget today shot the level of taxation to the highest point in Britain's history to pay for the war.

With gasps of dismay, a crowded House of Commons heard the Chancellor of the Exchequer announce new taxes designed to produce 226,500,000 pounds ($1,012,455,000) in a full year.

Frankly telling the people that the treasury will need money on an unprecedented scale, Sir John made these tax changes:—

The basic income tax rate was increased from five shillings sixpence to seven shillings for the balance of this year and seven shillings sixpence next year, with taxfree allowances cut all along the line. It was designed to produce 70,000,000 pounds additional this year and 146,000,000 pounds in a full year.

Standard Tax Rate

The standard tax rate for the rest of the fiscal year—ending March 21—will be 35 per cent and for the 1940-41 year 37.5 per cent of taxable income.

Why The Weather?

War preparation! When expeditionary forces are to be sent to foreign parts, it is extremely necessary that the requisitioning officers acquaint themselves with the weather conditions of all the seasons in the future field of operations and of the places en route. There have been many cases where "coals were sent to Newcastle." Careful preparation means a study of suitable clothing, bedding, tents, food, fuel and hospital supplies which are necessary for the efficiency and comfort of the troops. In going to a new country, especially where the climate is much different than that of the home country, it is as necessary to train the troops how to protect themselves against undue exposure to cold, heat and sunshine, as to train them in the use of implements of offense and defense.

Polish Capital is Now A City of Destruction Says Radio Announcer

Budapest, Sept. 27 (AP)—The Warsaw radio, returning to the air after a lapse of nearly two days, today reported the Polish capital had become "a destroyed inferno" in its 20th day of German siege.

The announcer declared "more than 3,000 civilians" had been killed in the past 24 hours.

Polish troops defending the capital were said to have repulsed all German land attacks.

(A German communique in Berlin claimed that Warsaw's defenders had offered to surrender and that fortresses north and south of the city had been captured by a new German offensive opened yesterday.)

Virtually Razed

"Warsaw has been virtually razed," said the radio announcer. He added, however, that "the morale of the population is excellent and we will never give in while one of us still is alive."

Speaking at 2:15 p.m. (8:15 a.m. E.S.T.) he reported German bombing planes were throwing incendiary bombs into the centre of the city.

Communication within the capital was described as impossible "because of the fires and University wreckage."

"The food situation is tragic," said the announcer. "Our last hospital was destroyed by German shells today."

Fear an Epidemic

Fears of an epidemic because of water shortage added to the horrors of the besieged capital.

Between announcements the Warsaw station played hymns.

Dead and wounded were said to be lying in the capital's streets because of the breakdown of all transportation and communication facilities. Fires were raging unchecked because water mains were broken.

"We foresee a tragic situation soon for our capital," said the announcer calmly. "The reservoir and water pumps have been destroyed by German air attacks The city now totally lacks water and it seems an epidemic must come."

Destruction of the Hospital of the Child Jesus shortly before noon was said to have caused the deaths of 17 nuns and three physicians.

8 Planes Brought Down

The announcer asserted Polish anti-aircraft guns had brought down eight raiding planes yesterday.

More than 100 heavy German siege guns were said to be pouring shells into the centre of the city, a stream uninterrupted since Saturday.

At 2:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. E.S.T.) the broadcaster said "several hundred more incendiary bombs had been dumped into the capital.

"There are more than 500 fires burning now. About all that is left to burn is now blazing."

All public buildings were described as afire or already badly damaged by flames.

DESIGN ATTACK TO FLANK TROOPS IN VOSGES FOREST

Advance German Forts of Fischbach and Ludwigswindel Cut Off from Main Forts

HOLD POSITIONS

(By Charles Foltz Associated Press Staff Writer)

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 27 (AP) —German troops were reported in advices received today to have attacked on the Western Front directly under the big French guns at Wissembourg near the tip of the elbow in the parallel German and French lines.

This attack, like others in the Wissembourg sector, apparently was designed to flank French forces in the Vosges Forest west of the Wissembourg fort, where the advance German forts of Fischbach and Ludwigswindel were reported cut off from main-line fortifications protecting the Pirmasens-Landau road.

Wissembourg, built in the Seventh Century on the site of a benedictine abbey, was a ghost today today, bereft of civilians.

CANADIAN TAXES AND BRITISH TAXES

Ottawa, Sept. 27—(CP)—Income tax and other new tax demands made upon the Canadian people in the war budget early this month now look small compared with those announced in the British House of Commons today.

For the next full fiscal year the British income tax assessment will be 37.5 per cent with the exemptions much lower than in Canada.

When a Canadian married couple without children and with $4.000 income will pay $84 tax, a British couple with equal income and no children will pay approximately $1,200.

Former Constable Withdraws Suit

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 27.—(CP) —A civil suit in which John Brown former chief constable of Brockville, claimed unstated damages from former Mayor Charles E. Johnston has been withdrawn, it was announced today. The action was scheduled for Fall assizes.

Mr. Johnston has issued a signed statement that he "did not intend to reflect on the former chief constable's character in any way" and there was nothing to justify him in so doing.

Mr. Brown was chief constable for 11 years until April, 1938.

Veteran Engineer Races Train Safely Through Lake of Fire

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 27—(AP) —Fellow trainmen today acclaimed a veteran railway engineer as a hero after he raced his train with 200 passengers through a lake of fire, guided it across a river trestle with his cab in flames and brought it safely into the railroad yards here.

The engineer was J. M. Bland of Little Rock. He gave this version of the incident—

Shortly before his Memphis section of the Missouri Pacific's "Sunshine Limited" pulled into the North Little Rock yards early Tuesday a gasoline tank car was punctured in a switching accident, spilling gasoline into a vast pool along the right-of-way.

Unaware of the gasoline, Bland put his train into the yards. Sparks from engine's fire box ignited the gasoline, enveloping the engine and creating a blazing lake hundreds of yards in front of the nine-car train.

Grasping the situation "almost instinctively", Bland shoved up the throttle and increased his speed to 50 miles an hour. With the train clear of the blazing gasoline, the scorched cab caught fire, forcing Bland and his fireman out on to the platforms in front of the cab. This occurred just as the speeding locomotive approached the big railway bridge spanning the Arkansas river between the twin cities.

Bland thrust his gloved hand through the flames of the cab to the throttle and the train roared safely into the yards here where the fire was extinguished.

London, Sept. 27—(CP)—War as a pound-and-shilling proposition was brought home to the British taxpayer today as Parliament gathered to receive the first war budget.

In this budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, was expected to ask that the present tax of five shillings six pence (about $1.20) on each pound sterling ($4.45) of income be increased by at least another six pence.

It was believed Sir John would put off any drastic direct taxation until the normal budget next spring.

Iron and Steel Industry, However, Shows Definite Increase Since Sept. 1

MUNITIONS TO HELP

Ottawa, Sept. 27 (CP)—Employment in Canada has not yet begun to register any marked wartime expansion, which is not generally looked for for several months, but the official figures for Sept. 1 do show a definite increase in the iron and steel industry—when the seasonal trend is ordinarily downward.

In the monthly review just issued, the Bureau of Statistics announced an increase of 20, 247 in employees of 11,856 reporting establishments, each with more than 15 employees. The total for Sept. 1 is 1,165,631.

While the improvement was widely distributed, the manufacturing industry added 13,100 to the payrolls during August, greatly exceeding the average increase for the period. Vegetable foods and textiles showed big seasonal increases and iron and steel reversed the usual trend and also went up.

Family of Seven Nearly Asphyxiated

Toronto, Sept. 27.— (CP) Seven persons, including four children, escaped possible death by asphyxiation from coal gas in their home early today when Mrs. Thomas Storey awakened feeling ill. She roused her husband who, when he went to get her some medicine, felt dizzy.

Mr. Storey immediately opened all the doors and windows and then collapsed. In the meantime, Mrs. Storey's cries had awakened other members of the household and one of the children was sent for a doctor.

Woman in London Hadn't Heard of War

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 27 (CP Cable)— A woman has been found in London who did not know a war is on.

An inspector of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, told in Magistrate's Juvenilee Court of a mother in the East End who had not evacuated her children and would not let them go to the safety of the country without her.

"Do you know there is a war on and we are fighting Germany?" the Inspector said he asked.

"I dunno—be they?". he quoted the woman in reply.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Germany's submarine campaign against shipping destined from British and French ports threatens to prove a boomerang by annoying neutral countries as it did in the first Great War.

Sinking of neutral ships in the last few days gives rise to sharp complaint from Sweden and the day's news indicates that unless Germany modifies submarine tactics somewhat Sweden may resort to retaliation. As Germany obtains considerable quantities of iron from Sweden a disruption of trade across the Baltic might be serious.

In the first Great War the submarine blockade was largely responsible for the entry of the United States on the side of the Allies. While Sweden is unlikely to forsake its traditionally neutral policy even on grave provocation, it may be expected to take every possible step short of actual entry into the war to protect its large overseas trade in wood pulp, timber and cellulose.

Dependent on Exports

During the first Great War, Sweden was more active in resisting the Allied blockade of Germany than the German attempts at blockade. Since then, however, the pulp and paper and cellulose industries have developed tremendously and made Swedish economy more dependent on exports beyond the Baltic area.

In order to avoid further sinkings, the Swedish Government has prohibited further shipments of pulp, timber and cellulose by sea. This will force exporters to move their products by rail to Norwegian ports with a consequent increase in shipping costs.

Should this condition continue it may have its effects in Canada as Sweden is one of Canada's chief competitors in the export of pulp to the United States. Any continued interference with Swedish shipments or increase in the cost of shipping might mean more business to Canadian mills.

Squadron of British Ships Attacked by 20 Nazi Planes In North Sea But None Hit

Winston Churchill Makes Announcement in House of Commons Also Reporting There Were No Casualties

PRISONERS TAKEN

One German Shot Down and Another Damaged—German Report of Attack Differs Greatly from Admiralty Announcement

London, Sept. 27 (CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today that a squadron of British warships was attacked in the North Sea yesterday by 20 German planes but that none of the naval units was hit.

Mr. Churchill said: "No British casualties were reported but one German flying boat was shot down and another was damaged. Another German aircraft came down and we sent a destroyer to collect her and her crew of four who were brought in as prisoners."

Wireless Message Sent

The Admiralty chief said Sir Charles Forbes, commander-in-chief of the home fleet had wirelessed as follows:

"Yesterday afternoon in the middle of the North Sea, a squadron of British capital ships, together with aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers, was attacked by about 20 German aircraft. No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred.

"One German flying boat was shot down and another was reported badly damaged."

Mr. Churchill added that another German aircraft came down in the North Sea.

Mr. Churchill's statement and an identical one issued by the Admiralty a few moments later were prompted by a question from the Labor Opposition concerning German claims that their North Sea attackers had scored direct hits on a British battleship.

Example of Veracity

After Mr. Churchill had spoken, A. V. Alexander, Labor, told the House he hoped that "the public who listen in to broadcasts from Germany will take this as an example of their veracity."

German Liner Bremen In North Russian Port Belief of the Admiralty

London, Sept. 27 (AP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, today asserted in the House of Commons that the mysteriously missing German liner Bremen "is believed to be in a north Russian port."

The $20,000,000 liner sailed from New York Aug. 30 only 36 hours before German troops started into Poland.

Since then no definite word of her whereabouts has been received, but there have been unconfirmed reports she had reached Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port.

Mr. Churchill made his statement in response to questions on the mystery of the German liner.

He refused to reply when asked if it were possible for a vessel to change her nationality on the high seas.

(Reports were published in Holland that the Bremen had become an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port. This was denied, however, by official Italian spokesmen.)

Prisoners Wounded By Accident in Attempt to Escape

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 27—(CP)—An attempt to escape by three prisoners of the Ontario Reformatory collapsed today with one of them wounded by accidental discharge of a guard's gun.

Joseph Troyer, 19, of Sarnia, was shot through the buttocks after he struck a guard and attempted to wrest a gun from him while two accomplices tried to run away.

The three went on sick parade this morning. With Troyer were George Anthony of Toronto and John Thompson of Sarnia. While Troyer attacked the guard, officials said, Anthony and Thompson broke in different directions. Both were recaptured.

Troyer was taken to hospital. The bullet went through his buttocks and came out the front of his thigh.

WALTER P. ZELLER NEW GOVERNOR

Ottawa, Sept. 27—(CP)—Walter P. Zeller of Montreal was elected governor of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime district of Kiwanis International at the annual convention here yesterday, and lieutenant-governors of the six divisions of the district also were chosen.

The lieutenant-governors are: Gerald D. O'Mara of Kirkland Lake, Ont.; George M. Henry of Hamilton; Joseph McCorkell of Windsor, Ont.; John McKone of Peterborough, Ont.; Ross McLeod of Quebec City; and J. Morley Carson of Saint John.

Several Appointments to Canadian Diplomatic Posts Expected Soon

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—(CP)—Several appointments to Canadian diplomatic services abroad may be expected soon following the recent naming of Loring C. Christie as Canadian Minister to Washington. The most pressing is that of Minister to Japan made vacant by the retirement of Dr. Randolph Bruce last December.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced during the special session of parliament that it was proposed to name high commissioners for Eire, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

The Prime Minister is known to favor promoting men in Canada's external Affairs Service as he did in the case of Mr. Christie who was formerly counsellor in the department here. However it is believed he will decide to go outside the service in many of his forthcoming appointments.

Those in close touch explain that not only is the External Affairs Department in Ottawa working under high tension just now but the same is true of staffs in the Legations at Washington, Paris, Brussels and at Canada House in London, so that it would be unwise to take away so many key men as would be required to fill all the posts vacant or to be established.

It is understood the government has no intenion of closing up the Geneva office headed by Hume Wrong as Canada's representative to the League of Nations. For the duration of the war a Canadian representative in so strategic a place as Switzerland is felt to be advantageous.

Estonian Explanation of Escape of Interned Polish Submarine Called Unsatisfactory

By [illegible]WITT HANCOCK

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept 27 (AP)—The coming of Germany's Foreign Minister, coupled with the presence in Moscow of the Turkish Foreign Minister, caused diplomatic circles to speculate today on possible developments rivalling in importance the German-Soviet Non-Aggression Pact.

These developments, said diplomats, might include:—

1 Signing of a German-Soviet military agreement

2. Formation of a Balkan-near Eastern Bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia.

3. A joint German-Soviet request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in Western Europe.

The purpose of the visit of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany, said Tass, the Russian News Agency is to discuss "problems connected with developments in Poland." Moscow observers thought it significant, however, that Von Ribbentrop should time his journey to coincide with the presence here of the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu.

MECHANIZED ARMIES AFFECT LOCAL HIDES

The local hide market has become more active lately, it was reported by one dealer, but as yet there has been no sudden or unexpected rise in this commodity, it was stated.

An interesting observation on present conditions abroad which affect local rural conditions was offered by one dealer this morning in the assertion that with heavier mechanization of armies of Europe less leather is needed for harness and horse equipment, slowing up the demand for hides.

"So we don't look for any of the crazy prices paid for leather that were seen during the last war, and the most of the dealers are not going to speculate too much on them," added the dealer.

'SEPTEMBER RUSH' EASED AT CITY HALL

"The employment situation in Belleville must have become a little better lately," mused officials of the city public works department this morning.

Further investigation revealed that the usual 'September rush' of applicants for work to the department has not been so noticeable as it has in the past nine or ten years since slack times were first felt in the ordinary labor trades. There is still a heavy registration of men to do the necessary jobs of the department, and there is no fear expressed by officials of any shortage of labor, but it is admitted there has been "some slackening."

LAKE MARINERS SEE BUSY FALL SEASON

Shipping has been slow at the local dock for the past few weeks, but the loading of canned goods has been exceptionally heavy, with thousands of cases of canned goods, principally tomatoes, being carried by the steamer Glen Allan.

Lake mariners, however, report an exceptionally busy season at the present time with practically every carrier engaged in the various trades. "Almost everything that can float has been pressed into service", it was stated by a member of the oil carrier Simcolite which entered port last evening with a cargo of gasoline for local tanks. At present the wheat rush from the elevators is on, and package freight has also been exceptionally high, it was stated.

RAINS WELCOME SAY AGRICULTURISTS

Rain fell in copious quantities over the city and district last night and today, but the downfall was a welcome one "with every drop needed," according to agriculturists this morning. Though the greater part of the fall plowing has been completed, some of the high land yet remains to be worked, and during the past weeks of little or no rainfall had become exceedingly hard, according to agricultural reports.

Through the city the rain suspended many outside operations and resulted in the first rush on the part of residents for top coats and hats. Dealers this morning reported the sale of hats a brisk one, the first rush of the current season.

WHEREABOUTS OF BOY SOUGHT BY POLICE

Anxious parents requested Belleville police to assist in the possible locating of their wayward sons. Chief Kidd received a letter from Windsor today requesting that the Belleville authorities try to locate Thomas B. Loft, a youth who left Windsor on a bicycle on Aug. 13th last seeking employment in Eastern Ontario. Young Loft's mother is ill and the family are hoping for the return of their son.

A similar request came from Oshawa, the police being asked to seek the whereabouts of 17-year-old James Swathers, of that city. In both cases the mothers of the wandering boys are ill and their return home would doubtless bring comfort to the parents, Chief Kidd suggested.

Loft has grey eyes, weighs about 135 pounds and stands about 5 feet 6 inches tall. He had a shotgun strapped to his bicycle when he left Windsor last month.

WIDESPREAD TERRORISM

Paris, Sept. 27 (CP-Havas)—Mgr. Jan Sramek, leader of the Czecho-Slovak People's Catholic Party, said today there is widespread Gestapo terrorism in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate and in Slovakia. He said all Czecho-Slovaks "are co-operating in the struggle for National freedom."

PROWLER FIRED ON BY A GUARD

Thorough Search of the District Failed to Disclose Whereabouts of Man

Trenton, Sept. 27th.—(Special)—A prowler was fired upon by guard John Anderson near the water wells that supply both the town of Trenton and the R.C.A.F. and situated four miles west of Trenton, early today but the man ran away in the bush and a thorough search of the locality by Anderson and another guard, Henry W. Cronkwright, failed to disclose his whereabouts.

Anderson with Cronkwright, were in the pump house near the wells early this morning when Anderson spied a prowler coming up the path. Stepping from the pump house, Anderson ordered the man to stop, which he did, and as the guard approached, the man started to run. Anderson was accompanied by his dog and both chased the man and in the chase the prowler picked up a number of stones and started to heave them at the guard, whereupon the guard brought his rifle to his shoulder and fired at the retreating figure. Cronkwright, hearing the commotion, responded to the alarm and the two guards thoroughly searched the surrounding district but the man could not be found.

Picton, Sept. 27 (Special)— A Junior Red Cross Society has been organized at Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute and the members are anxiously awaiting word from Red Cross headquarters so that they may start to work. The officers elected on Tuesday were:

President; Jean Scott; Vice-President: Marion Fraleigh; Secretary: Barbara Pope; Treasurer: Eleanor Foster.

Truck Destroyed

Elroy Pendleton, who delivers fruit and vegetables in north Hastings by truck, had the misfortune to lose his truck by fire a few days ago. It was standing outside of his house and the motor had been shut off. Hearing a noise, Mrs. Pendleton went out and noticed the flames. Before they could be got under control they had spread throughout the truck and it was a total loss. It was valued at $400, and as well there was a quantity of fruit in it. The cause of the blaze is not known.

Romance Blossoms

Romance blossomed while the 4th Anti-Aircraft Battery was in camp at Point Petre this summer and as a result, two Picton girls left on Tuesday for Halifax where they will be married to two members of the battery. Miss Leah Channel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Channel of Bloomfield will be married to John Eric Aubrey Mosley, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mosley of Ottawa, and Miss Betty Bee Welsh will be married to Gunner Harry Newell, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Newell, of Ottawa. Miss Welsh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Welsh, Picton.

First Snow Storm

Tuesday morning, local residents had their first snow since spring. There was a light fall early in the morning and at Cherry Valley there was hail but it was not of sufficient size or force to do any damage. The temperature dropped to three degrees above freezing. Tomato growers are hoping that the frost may hold off as there are many tomatoes yet to harvest.

Ducks Plentiful

Duck hunters who have been preparing for the opening of the season on October 1st, have been reminded that the season will not open until the second. This is due to the fact, that the first falls on a Sunday and it is illegal to shoot on that day. Ducks are reported very plentiful in West and East Lakes and at Green's Island off Waupoos.

Form Auxiliary

The wives of Picton veterans met in the Legion hall Monday night and formed a local branch of the Ontario Provincial Command Ladies' Auxiliary. This is associated with the Canadian Legion and they will co-operate with them in any manner possible. On this occasion, representatives of the Provincial Command from Toronto were present and explained the work to be done. The visitors were Mrs. A. C. Norley, who is Provincial President, Mrs. R. J. Pegg, the Provincial Secretary and Mrs. H. Long, Provincial Treasurer.

Local officers elected were: Mrs. J. Hutchinson, President; Mrs. L. Taylor and Mrs. Frank Starr, Vice-Presidents; Mrs. James Hedges, Secretary; Mrs. Sid Pettet, Treasurer; Mrs. M. Matthews, Executive; Mrs. Mitchell, Social Convener. The ladies will hold office until the beginning of the new year. Already plans are being made to carry out needed work.

Pack Bale of Clothing

This week, members of the I.O.D.E. are packing the bale of clothing and blankets which they collected last Saturday. The articles donated were valued at $300, and as well there was a tea, which with donations of cash, realized $88. This is evidence that county women are again ready to do their bit. It was the first appeal and met with a wonderful response.

Picton United Church has decided not to hold a chicken pie supper this year. Instead the ladies staged a canvass and the fine sum of $300 was collected.

Dr. and Mrs. Morley Currie spent a few days in Belleville, guests of Major and Mrs. Colin Hepburn.

Bishop John Lyons of Kingston, visited his daughter, Mrs. Anderson and Rev. Allan Anderson at Milford this week.

Mrs. Harold Ruttan entertained the Youman's Y for their September meeting, the first of the fall months. Mrs. James Hawker was presented with a County Life Membership pin. Mrs. Ruttan gave a report of the 'Y' camp held at Consecon. Members of the Junior Y gave a program and a happy social hour was spent.

Mr. George Tustin, M.P. and Mrs. Tustin of Napanee, have accepted invitations to attend Picton fair on Thursday and Friday.

Students at Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute are making preparations for the annual field day. This year it will be held on the collegiate campus on October 4th.

Arthur MacDonald is the latest local boy to join the R.C.A.F. at Trenton.

Opening Meeting

WOMAN CLOTHED AFTER HER DEATH COURT IS TOLD

Testimony Given Mrs. Templeton Battered to Death With Blunt Instrument

TRIAL NEARLY OVER

London, Ont., Sept. 27 (CP)—The Crown, with more than half its witnesses heard, moved into the final stages today of its case against Mrs. George Taylor charged with slaying Mrs. Annie Templeton for the benefits expected under the 67-year-old widow's will.

During the second day of the 50-year-old defendant's murder trial yesterday testimony heard was to the effect Mrs. Templeton was battered to death by blows from a blunt instrument and her body apparently clothed after she died.

Dr. E. P. Johns University of Western Ontario pathologist, said an autopsy showed death was caused by injury to the forehead, fracture of the skull and damage to the brain. The wounds could have been caused by a piece of wood, he said in reply to a question by special Prosecutor W. B. Common.

Wrinkled Under Arms

Chief Coroner Dr. A. R. Routledge, testifying as to Mrs. Templeton's clothing, said the outer clothes were wrinkled under both arms. This was caused, he believed, by dressing of the woman after she died.

Dr. Johns, who noted the clothing when he prepared for the postmortem examination, said a garterless stocking and turned-in heels "indicated that clothes were placed on the woman after she died or was unconscious."

Mrs. Templeton's body was found on the sidewalk near the Taylor home where she roomed last March 28. Human bloodstains were found on the walk leading to the Taylor house, on the step and inside the residence.

Women Slept Together

A 14-year-old daughter of the accused woman who has mothered 11 children testified her mother and Mrs. Templeton slept in a downstairs bedroom on the night of the elder woman's death.

The two women, she said, had attended a religious service earlier in the evening and on their return Mrs. Templeton voiced her disapproval of card-playing by members of the Taylor family.
